Administrative Law

Course #: 2000 Term: 2019SP Faculty: Vermeule, Adrian Credits: 4.00
Type: Multisection Subject Areas: Constitutional Law & Civil Rights; Government Structure & Function; Regulatory Law

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times:	Location
Wed 1:00 PM - 3:00 PM	AUS101
Thu 1:00 PM - 3:00 PM	AUS101

Course Description: Prerequisites: None

Exam: In Class

This course will study law making and law application by executive departments of government. Using the material covered in the first-year "Legislation and Regulation" course as a foundation, this class will cover a variety of topics, including the legal framework (both constitutional and statutory) that governs administrative rulemaking and adjudication; the proper role of agencies in interpreting statutory and regulatory law; and judicial review of agency decisions. The central theme of the course is how the law manages the tension between "rule of law" values (e.g., procedural regularity, accountability, and substantive limits on arbitrary action) and the desire for flexible, effective administrative governance.

Note: This course is open to upper-level JDs only.

Course #: 2000 Term: 2018FA Faculty: Larsen, Allison Credits: 3.00

Type: Multisection Subject Areas: Constitutional Law & Civil Rights; Government Structure & Function; Regulatory Law

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times: Location

Thu 1:00 PM - 2:30 PM LAN225

Fri 1:00 PM - 2:30 PM LAN225

Course Description: Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: In Class

Administrative law establishes the legal controls over the operation of government and hence it relates to almost every legal practice -- from security regulation to social programs to criminal justice. This course is an introductory examination of the rules and procedures of government federal agencies. It explores: (1) the Constitutional background and limitations on agency action, (2) the procedural requirements (from various sources) that an agency must follow, and (3) the doctrines of judicial review that apply whenever a court evaluates agency decisions.

Administrative Law in the Trump Era

Course #: 2386 Term: 2019SP Faculty: Vermeule, Adrian; Sunstein, Cass Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Constitutional Law & Civil Rights; Government Structure & Function; Regulatory Law

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times: Location

Wed 3:00 PM - 5:00 PM WCC3007

Course Description: Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: No Exam

The seminar will explore a variety of legal issues in connection with the modern administrative state, some of which have been put in sharp relief by the current presidency. Some attention will be given to foundational issues surrounding the rise of administrative institutions. Issues will include judicial deference to agency interpretations of law; the presidents distinctive position in the context of foreign affairs; and the power to change the policies of a previous administration.

Advanced Corporate Transactions

Course #: 2833 Term: 2018FA Faculty: Sonenshine, Marshall Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Business Organization, Commercial Law, and Finance; Procedure & Practice

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times: Location

Mon 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM WCC1010

Course Description: Prerequisite: Registration for the course has two prerequisites: (1) Students must have taken Corporations or be taking it concurrently with ACT. (2) In addition, basic corporate financial accounting knowledge is required. The “basic corporate financial accounting knowledge” requirement is not onerous and can be met by having taken Accounting at the law school or in another graduate or undergraduate program or by having other demonstrable familiarity with reviewing basic corporate financial statement (income statement, balance sheet, and cash flow statement) from academic or work settings. Students with questions should be in touch with the instructor at msonenshine@sonenshinepartners.com with a copy to jjohn@sonenshinepartners.com.

Exam type: Any Day Take Home

Advanced Corporate Transactions assesses the inter-related business, financial, and legal issues associated with complex corporate transactions, including Mergers & Acquisitions, Private Equity and Restructuring transactions. The course takes an interdisciplinary approach to assessing issues and dynamics that drive companies, boards, investors, and legal and financial advisers to companies in the transaction process. The course is intended for students who have completed Corporations and who are comfortable (or can reasonably get comfortable) reading the three basic financial statements of companies. These baseline accounting skills will be reviewed early in the course for context. (Students uncertain about the adequacy of their facility reading companies’ financial statements or wanting to improve those skills before the course begins are invited to confer with Mr Sonenshine before registering.)

The course addresses both how deals are done and how corporate finance and markets for corporate control evolve with the business cycle and with financial markets. The course will use business school cases and cases from the instructors investment banking practice, supplemented by relevant legal cases and materials and academic writings on the evolution of the multi trillion dollar M&A and Private Equity markets, often as alternatives to public market stewardship of companies. The course looks at the dramatic changes in the deal business from the 1980s through the 2008 financial crisis and in the years since the financial crisis. The course covers (A) Fundamentals of M&A, Corporate Finance and Valuation; (B) the Evolution of M&A and Private Equity Markets; (C) Business and Transaction Strategies in Deals; and (D) Current Topics in Corporate Finance and Transaction Markets.

The course is taught by Marshall Sonenshine, HLS 85, an investment banker who has served as an Adjunct Professor of Finance and Economics at Columbia University Business School. Mr Sonenshine is Chairman and Managing Partner of New York M&A and Restructuring firm Sonenshine Partners, having previously been Partner to Paul Volcker at Wolfensohn & Co and senior Partner in M&A and Head of Media M&A at Deutsche Bank. He began his banking career at Salomon Brothers in New York. For three decades, Mr Sonenshine has advised on transactions involving major corporations worldwide including Alcoa, AIG, Conrail, Dassault Systemes, Disney, EDS, Hewitt, KKR, Luxottica, New York Times, Proquest, Siemens, Sony, Walgreens, Wellpoint, and numerous others. Mr Sonenshine is a former Editor of the Harvard Law Review and Teaching Fellow in Government at Harvard College and an Instructor in the Introduction to Law course for the LLM Program. He clerked for Hon Lawrence Pierce of the US Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit. Mr. Sonenshine has published widely on corporate financial matters at Columbia University, New York Times, Financial Times, Institutional Investor and other

Advanced Environmental Law

Course #: 2417 Term: 2019SP Faculty: Mergen, Andrew Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Environmental Law

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times:	Location
Thu 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM	WCC3007

Course Description: Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: No Exam

The course grade would be based on each student's preparation of a series of separate, short papers on the various topics covered during the semester.

This course complements the general survey course in environmental law. The primary contrast between the two courses lies in their relative breadth and depth of coverage. The survey course can perhaps be best described as a series of broad, shallow dives into the substance of federal environmental law. This class, Advanced Environmental Law includes a series, far fewer in number, of much narrower and deeper dives into much of the same material. The basic objective of the course is to teach students how to navigate and think about an exceedingly complex regime of statutes, regulations, and informal agency practices in the context of addressing a concrete environmental problem. By examining in detail environmental law in application, the theoretical underpinnings and the challenges of environmental lawmaking are well highlighted. The course, moreover, is taught in a manner that does not require students who take the class to have first taken the survey class.

The class will meet for two hours each week for twelve weeks. For some topics, there will be two class meetings and for other topics only one. Each topic will involve an important and topical issue of environmental law, broadly defined to include natural resources law topics. Most will involve pending litigation in the federal district court, court of appeals, or U.S. Supreme Court. But it is possible that some topics will involve environmental issues currently being debated and discussed before an administrative agency or Congress.

Because the topics for the Advanced Environmental Law class deliberately focus on current issues, it is not possible to identify the precise topics for Spring Semester 2017. The current expectation is that the class will cover six to ten topics during the semester. The Clean Air Act and the Clean Water Act are likely to be major focal points, but it is also expected they will not be the exclusive focus because of the richness of the breadth of environmental and natural resources law.

Advanced Interpretation: Law and Language

Course #: 2383 Term: 2018FA Faculty: Lee, Thomas Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Constitutional Law & Civil Rights; Legal & Political Theory

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times:	Location
Thu 1:00 PM - 3:00 PM	WCC3034
Fri 1:00 PM - 3:00 PM	WCC3034

Course Description: Prerequisites: None
Exam Type: No Exam
This seminar invites students to explore the theory and practice of interpretation in public and private law. We will begin with an introduction to the field of law and language-considering both legal and linguistic scholarship of relevance to the practice of legal interpretation. And we will extend this scholarship to an in-depth, comparative analysis of the law’s approach to interpretation in the fields of constitutional law, statutes, and contracts.

In each of these fields students will first be presented with legal scholarship on the premises of interpretation in that field. We will then explore tools of interpretation that may be used to resolve the interpretive problems that arise in each field. Among other tools, students will be introduced to methods used by linguists (including corpus linguistic analysis). Each unit will close with a practice problem allowing students to apply the theory and tools they have learned in analyzing a hypothetical problem of the sort that might arise in the field. Student performance will be assessed on the basis of class participation and, more significantly, short papers submitted in response to the practice problems.

Note: This seminar will meet on the following dates: 9/6, 9/7, 9/27, 9/28, 10/18, 10/19, 10/25, 10/26, 11/8, 11/9, 11/29, 11/30.

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times: Location

Thu 3:00 PM - 5:00 PM WCC3018

Course Description: Prerequisites: For JD students, completion of First Year Legal Research and Writing. For LLM students, completion of LRWA I is required and an enrollment in LRWA II is strongly suggested.
Exam Type: No Exam
Modern legal practice requires a nuanced understanding of research and technology. Effective legal professionals must be able to develop research strategy, access, evaluate, interpret and incorporate information into their advocacy work.

This course teaches students to be effective advocates by providing a strong grounding in research skills and information theory. This course will mix lecture with practice and students will gain hands-on experience conducting both basic and complex research using a variety of research tools.

Students will be assessed using a variety of methods including: in-class labs, out-of class exercises, presentations, and a final research simulation.

Advanced Legislation: Statutory Interpretation

Course #: 2231 Term: 2018FA Faculty: Rabb, Intisar Credits: 3.00
Type: Elective Subject Areas: Constitutional Law & Civil Rights; Government Structure & Function; Legal & Political Theory

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times:	Location
Mon 1:30 PM - 3:00 PM	HAU102
Tue 1:30 PM - 3:00 PM	HAU102

Course Description: Prerequisite: Legislation & Regulation is a prerequisite for JD students. LLM or SJD students should have had a similar class or work experience in their prior legal education or work as a lawyer, before permission can be granted to take the course.

Exam Type: No Exam

With the presence and passing of Justice Scalia from the Court, statutory interpretation has come to occupy -- alongside constitutional law -- the locus of arguments around theories of how to interpret law. Moreover, most modern law is contained in statutes and administrative regulations, which lawyers tend to confront alongside case law in almost every area of practice. Building on basic concepts of Legislation and Regulation, this course aims to further explore theories of the legislative process, judicial interpretation of statutes, and agency implementation of legislation. We will explore ongoing controversies about legislation, regulation, and interpretation, including deep debates about textualist, purposive and dynamic interpretation; about the use of legislative history and canons of construction; and about the constitutional foundations of statutory interpretation. Although there is no single subject matter focus of the course, a significant portion of the substantive areas of law will cover criminal law and anti-discrimination law.

Legal & Political Theory

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times: Location

Mon 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM WCC3012

Course Description: Prerequisite: Because the readings are in Japanese, students should have the equivalent of at least two years language instruction, but the difficulty of the materials will be adjusted to the reading levels of the students (and the class can be split if necessary). Native speakers of Japanese are welcome to attend, but may not take the course for credit. Students who are unsure whether the class is appropriate for them should contact Professor Ramseyer by email (ramseyer@law.harvard.edu).

Exam Type: No Exam

In this reading group, students will read a wide variety of law-related materials in the original Japanese language. Class discussion will cover both any language questions that arise, and the substance of the material discussed.

Materials to be read will be announced prior to the course beginning.

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Human Rights; International, Comparative & Foreign Law; Procedure & Practice

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times: Location

Wed 3:00 PM - 5:00 PM WCC5050

Course Description: Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.
Required Clinic Component: International Human Rights Clinic - Advanced. This clinic and course are bundled; your enrollment in the clinic will automatically enroll you in this required course.
Additional Co-/Pre-Requisites: None
By Permission: No.
Add/Drop Deadline: August 28, 2018.
LLM Students: Due to the pre-requisite, LLM students are not eligible to apply.
Placement Site: HLS.
This seminar offers advanced training in strategic and people-centered human rights advocacy that builds on themes and skills from the introductory seminars of the International Human Rights Clinic. Students will explore a variety of strategic considerations that are critical to protecting and promoting human rights, including how to conceptualize and advance human rights agendas that target entrenched, structural challenges; how to mobilize constituencies and collaborate with affected communities to better address power imbalances and ensure sustainability; and how to develop communication strategies and narratives for maximum impact. Student will also consider how to stay connected to the people and communities with whom we work. Strategic decisions as well as those that touch individuals are often integrally tied to ethical questions, and thus the seminar also examines professional ethics and responsibilities through scenarios based on human rights practitioners own experiences in the field. In addition, students will workshop their own clinical projects, specifically considering ways to improve their impact and effectiveness.
The seminar is centrally concerned with building the leadership skills necessary for a career in human rights. As part of this leadership development, the seminar is committed to increasing student ownership over the learning processes in both the seminar and the Clinic. Students will work with the instructors to create a safe and inclusive learning environment that also encourages pedagogical experimentation. Students will help determine their learning priorities, and during the fall term, the seminar will experiment with a social justice lab that stems from a hack-a-thon methodology. Recent student projects have focused on human rights in the United States, op-ed writing and storytelling in the human rights context, dealing with trauma and developing a more sustainable practice, approaches to increase attention on disability rights, strategic and tactical mapping for human rights campaigns, the ethics of fact-finding and interviewing, negotiation and coalition-building, and community-based participatory action and research.

Type: Elective	Subject Areas: Legal & Political Theory; Procedure & Practice
Delivery Mode: Seminar
Days and Times:		Location
Wed 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM		WCC4063

Course Description: Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: No Exam Students will write a paper (1500 words) due at the end of the exam period.

We will consider the epistemology of legal, scientific, and political truth in form of proof by witness. We consider the relationship of truth to evidence, viewpoint, standard of proof, and use. This is NOT a course on the Federal Rules of Evidence. This is a course in fundamentals of determining guilt by trial. How is legal "truth" created? Of what does it consist?

Advanced Evidence 2018 will focus on my role as a friend to the New York court which is disbaring Steven Donziger, HLS 91, for his role in Aguinda vs. Chevron. Exploration from this perspective of lawyer for indigenous people against giant corporation will carry us through the legal architecture of truth-creation, engage you in understanding distinction between legal ethics and law, and confront you with the challenge of finding justice for indigenous people against the economics of cheaper-to-litigate-than-to-pay.

I am a friend of the court in sense of urging the court not to make itself party to creation of a huge weapon in the hands of corporate defendants faced by a winning plaintiffs lawyer.

Course Description: Prerequisite: Regulation of Financial Institutions , Capital Markets Regulation, or by permission of instructor.

Exam Type: Last Class Take-Home

This course will examine two kinds of topics: (1) more in-depth treatment of key elements of financial regulation covered in introductory courses; and (2) selected emerging issues. The former will include capital (theories and varieties of capital regulation, stress testing) and liquidity (experience with liquidity squeezes in periods of financial stress, rationales for liquidity regulation, role of central bank lender-of-last-resort facilities). The latter will include the regulation of systemic risk (more stringent regulation of systemically important bank and non-bank financial institutions, activities of unregulated firms, institutional mechanisms for systemic risk oversight), and some ways in which financial technology innovation (Fintech) poses challenges for financial regulation. A point of emphasis across topics will be how the Financial Crisis of 2007-2009 led to changes in financial regulation.

Course Description: Prerequisites: None

Exam Type: In Class

Lawyers in almost every area of practice (litigation, corporate, government, public interest) deal routinely with problems that are usefully illuminated by basic business and economic concepts. This course is designed to teach the most important analytical methods to law students, in a manner that will be fully accessible to those with no prior quantitative training or background in the subjects covered. Using text, classroom activities, and written exercises, we will explore how these tools may be used to analyze concrete problems that arise in a wide range of legal practice settings. The course will consist of seven units:

1. Decision Analysis, Games and Information: Lawyers assist their clients in making a wide variety of decisions, ranging from the settlement of lawsuits to the purchase of property. We will explore a standard technique that has been developed to organize thinking about decision-making problems and how to solve these problems. We will also consider strategic interactions between parties and considerations related to imperfect information.

2. Contracting: Lawyers write many contracts concerning such matters as acquisitions of land or corporations, creation of partnerships and nonprofit entities, settlement of lawsuits, financing arrangements, and government procurement. This unit presents practical principles concerning what issues should be addressed in contracts and how they might best be resolved.

3. Accounting: Lawyers who counsel clients in conducting their affairs, or who represent them in litigation, must understand the parties financial circumstances and dealings, which often are represented in financial statements. Basic accounting concepts will be introduced, and the relationship between accounting information and economic reality will be examined.

4. Finance: Legal advice in business transactions, division of assets upon divorce, litigation, and many other matters require knowledge of valuation, assessment of financial risk, and comprehension of the relationships between those who provide financing and those who need it. We will consider basic principles of finance, such as present value, the tradeoff between risk and return, the importance of diversification, and basic methods for valuing financial assets.

5. Microeconomics: Lawyers need to understand their clients and other parties economic situations and opportunities as well as the principles that underlie many of the rules of our legal system. This unit presents basic economic concepts--the operation of competitive markets, imperfect competition, and market failures--that are necessary to this understanding.

6. Law and Economics: Legal rules have important effects on clients interests, which must be appreciated by lawyers who advise them and by judges, regulators, and legislators who formulate legal rules. We will explore these effects using the economic approach to law, with illustrations from torts, contracts, property, law enforcement, and legal procedure.

7. Statistics: Legal matters increasingly involve the use of statistics in business contexts, in the promulgation of government regulations, in the measurement of damages, in attempts to make inferences concerning parties behavior (such as those regarding discrimination in employment), and in determination of causation (in tort, contract, and other disputes). We will address the basic statistical methods, including

Course Description: Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.

Prerequisite: Corporations

Exam Type: Any Day Take-Home

A comprehensive course analyzing the strategic and tactical choices inherent in modern transactional (M&A) litigation, as well as the underlying doctrinal principals and theories of corporate governance that drive those choices. Taught by two of the countrys most prominent M&A litigators -- one who typically represents the shareholder plaintiffs who bring these actions, the other who defends directors, companies and their advisors in M&A litigation -- this course will provide students the opportunity to experience virtually all aspects of M&A litigation, ranging from the legal and doctrinal issues facing the various parties to the strategic and tactical choices inherent in modern deal litigation.

Students will participate as the "lawyers" in a simulated case, adopting the various roles during different stages of the litigation, and will be judged by leading practitioners who regularly participate in these cases (and may even have the opportunity to argue certain aspects of the case before current and/or former members of the Delaware Court of Chancery and/or Delaware Supreme Court).

Note: This course will meet over four weeks from October 23 through November 15.

Type: Elective

Subject Areas: Constitutional Law & Civil Rights; Criminal Law & Procedure; Procedure & Practice

Delivery Mode: Reading Group

Days and Times:

Course Description: Prerequisites: None

Exam Type: No Exam

In this reading group, students will explore the many facets of bringing and litigating a case before the U.S. Supreme Court. Students will learn about the distinct roles of the petition for certiorari, amicus briefs, and merits-stage briefing. By studying actual Supreme Court pleadings and related scholarship, students will gain exposure to the strategic decision points and evolution of an appeal that precedes rulings that they are accustomed to reading in their other law school classes.

This offering explores these concepts with specific focus on the Supreme Courts recent "Johnson trilogy" - Johnson v. United States (2015), Welch v. United States (2016), and Beckles v. United States (2017) - wherein the Courts decision to review a narrow statutory question transformed into a series of significant constitutional decisions leading to the release or resentencing of thousands of individuals.

Among the topics students will consider and discuss are:

The certiorari process - how and when a legal issue becomes worthy of the Supreme Courts attention and the "vehicle problem."

A cases evolution from certiorari to the merits - how parties often seek to reposition their cases once certiorari is granted and how the Courts ultimate ruling sometimes answers a very different question than it started with;

Oral advocacy - what, if anything, it adds to written advocacy and the importance of a rule.

The significance of Amicus Curiae - strategy and tension with "friends of the court"; the ways in which amicus briefs can add value and be at odds with a Supreme Court litigants case.

The role of the U.S. Solicitor Generals Office - the weight given to the office, when it concedes defeat, and the role of court-appointed-amicus;

Who represents non-governmental entities before the Supreme Court? The role played by law firms, law school clinics, public defenders and nonprofit firms; pro bono representation and "the public interest."

In addition to reading excerpted materials from the trio of cases above as a foundation for exploring these topics, students will be assigned academic reading and other commentary with relevant perspectives.

While this reading group will not focus on doctrine, students planning to take (or currently taking) Federal Courts may be particularly interested in this offering, as the three cases studied will provide useful exposure to concepts like habeas corpus and the retroactivity of constitutional rules. Students interested in criminal law may similarly appreciate some exposure to criminal sentencing, mandatory minimums.

Instructor: The instructor, Amir Ali, is Supreme Court and Appellate Counsel at the MacArthur Justice Center, a national public interest law firm that litigates civil rights and criminal justice issues. He litigated and argued Welch v. United States, one of the primary cases studied, before the

This course will introduce students to the broad range of laws that affect non-human animals ("animals"), including companion animals, farm animals (with a particular focus on factory farms), animals used in the context of entertainment (such as zoos and aquaria), animals used in scientific experimentation, and wild animals. The course will focus mainly on the U.S. but will also include significant attention to the laws of other countries and to international law.

The course will also engage with fundamental questions about animals and the law, such as: Are some animals more deserving of protection than others, and if so, on what basis? What role does culture and belief play in animal law—why are dogs considered pets in the U.S. and food in some parts of the world, for example? Does the status of animals as property pose an insurmountable barrier to increasing protections for animals? What are the advantages and disadvantages of the concepts of "animal rights" and "animal welfare"?

Given the reality of global markets, modern antitrust law and legal practice are both global, as is any anticompetitive conduct they seek to regulate on global markets. This course thus teaches basic antitrust principles using cases and materials from throughout the world, with the focus on US and EC sources because those are the most active antitrust enforcers and have the most well developed antitrust doctrines.
The book will be ELHAUGE & GERADIN, GLOBAL ANTITRUST LAW & ECONOMICS (Foundation Press 3d ed. 2018).

Note: Students who have taken U.S. Antitrust Law may not take this course because it duplicates the U.S. portion of the material covered in Global Antitrust Law.

Empirical methods are increasingly used in legal research and practice. This course covers a broad range of topics, including descriptive statistics, hypothesis testing and statistical analysis and interpretation. We will cover how and when to apply particular models, access, clean, merge datasets, analyze, interpret, report data and create tables and graphs using Stata statistical software.
There is a growing awareness of the importance of replication in the empirical legal field. Each student will replicate an important study in empirical legal scholarship. Reproducing published work gives an opportunity to learn the methods used, data modification, or challenges and solutions that authors of published work have faced. Students will be required to extend the study either by proposing or implementing (desired but not required) a change to the original study through use of additional variables, different time periods/techniques/robustness checks, etc. This work will be summarized in an empirical research paper to be presented in class.

Course Description: Required Clinic Component: International Human Rights Clinic (3-5 fall clinical credits). Students enrolled in the fall clinic must enroll in either this clinical seminar or Human Rights Advocacy (2 fall classroom credits). Students are not guaranteed their first choice of clinical seminars. Clinical seminar selection and enrollment occurs once a student has enrolled in the fall clinic and is orchestrated by the Office of Clinical and Pro Bono Programs. Additional Co-/Pre-Requisites: None. By Permission: No. Add/Drop Deadline: August 28, 2018. LLM Students: LLM students may apply to this clinic by submitting an application. Placement Site: HLS.

Armed conflict inflicts physical, psychological, and socioeconomic suffering on civilians caught in its path. Militaries kill and injure bystanders due to their choice of certain weapons and/or tactics. Armed forces may also intentionally harm noncombatants to advance their goals. Collectively these actions impose immediate and long-term harm on individuals and societies.

Minimizing such suffering presents many challenges for lawyers and advocates. This clinical seminar will explore ways to advance civilian protection during and after armed conflict. Following an introduction to the costs of conflict and the idea of limited war, the course will examine a wide spectrum of strategies, including naming and shaming, treaty negotiation, international criminal justice, victim assistance, diplomacy, peacekeeping, and humanitarian intervention. Students will assess the promises and limitations of each strategy and consider how to determine the most appropriate one for a specific situation. Through role-playing exercises, they will also learn practical skills needed to work in the field.

A fall clinical practice component is required of all students. Clinical placements are with the International Human Rights Clinic.

This course deals with strategies for changing law and policy, focusing on child welfare (abuse and neglect, foster care, adoption), education, and juvenile justice. We bring into the classroom as visiting lecturers leaders from the worlds of policy, practice, and academia—successful change agents representing different disciplines, career paths, and strategies for change. We explore significant reform initiatives, and debate with the speakers and each other how best to advance children’s interests. The emphasis is on different approaches to social change, inside and outside of the courtroom, with the goal of informing students’ future advocacy efforts.
Receptions follow the class meetings, enabling students to talk informally with the visiting speakers, as well as with the HLS Faculty and those from the Boston-area child advocacy community who form a regular part of our audience.
Visit the Child Advocacy Program (CAP) website to see a schedule of the speakers and topics from previous semesters.
Course requirements consist of brief questions/reactions related to the readings and class presentations, turned in weekly.
This course is part of the Child Advocacy Program (CAP), whose other courses are: Child, Family, and State (alternating years), Family Law (alternating years), the Child Advocacy Clinic, and the Future of the Family seminar. Enrollment in all CAP courses is encouraged but not required.

Course Description: Prerequisites: None

Exam Type: No Exam. Students will be required to write either (a) one paper (16 to 20 pages) due at the end of the semester, or (b) four reaction papers (4 to 5 pages each) to be submitted at least 72 hours before class.

Asian Americans have played a prominent role in Americas legal history. Despite their small numbers, Asian Americans have been at the center of many legal controversies that continue to reverberate today. This course will examine the legal history of people of Asian descent in the United States. We begin by considering the arrival of Asians in America, the exclusion laws and other immigration statutes, and the question of citizenship. We then examine historical discrimination against Asian Americans, including anti-Asian violence and efforts by state and local governments to regulate Asians in the United States. We then turn to the internment of Japanese Americans during World War II and the efforts to obtain redress and reparations. We conclude by considering contemporary issues, including the concept of the model minority, employment discrimination and the Bamboo Ceiling, profiling and the question of "spies," education and the thorny question of reverse discrimination, and contemporary violence.

Note: There will be eight three-hour classes on the following dates: 1/31, 2/28, 3/7, 3/14, 3/28, 4/4, 4/11. A makeup class will likely be held on 2/8 from 3-6pm.

The introduction of autonomous vehicles to the streets of American cities is already posing difficult questions of power, authority, and effect on existing public institutions. This lab course is being designed in collaboration with the City of Boston, which is hosting an AV testbed. We will, as a lab, work on several crucial live-fire projects aimed at assisting the city, including but not limited to: What legal/policy levers does the city have to shape its own destiny with respect to AVs? How could AVs be harnessed in the service of public transit? and How could city values of accessibility, growth, equity, and safety best be served by AVs? We will learn about AV technology, the state of AV implementation in other cities around the world, the state of American law, including local government law, with respect to AVs, and other related topics. Group work on projects that will be useful to Boston will be the basis of evaluation.

Exam Type: In-Class

This basic bankruptcy course covers the major facets of bankruptcy that influence business financing transactions. Much of the deal-making in a financing transaction is negotiated in anticipation of a possible reorganization in Chapter 11 or of a private reorganization in its shadow. For many lawyers, contact with bankruptcy law is anticipatory and not in front of the bankruptcy judge. When feasible, students will read not just bankruptcy court opinions and the Bankruptcy Code, but materials that financing lawyers use day-to-day: a loan agreement, a prospectus, a complaint in a loan dispute, and SEC submissions. Students will ordinarily participate in a simulated Chapter 11 reorganization.

Subject Areas: Legal Profession, Legal Ethics & Professional Responsibility

Delivery Mode: Reading Group

Days and Times:

Location

Mon 10:30 AM - 11:30 AM

WCC3008

Course Description: Prerequisite: Admission is by application via email to Susannah Barton Tobin at stobin@law.harvard.edu by October 31, 2018. Please include a paragraph expressing your interest in the reading group and a CV.

Exam Type: No Exam

As is the norm with reading groups, there will be no examination or paper requirement, and the class will be graded credit/fail.

This reading group will focus on the generative scholarly process that is at the center of the life of the law professor. Each week, a member of the faculty will present a working draft of her or his scholarship, and that piece will be discussed by the group. Discussions will focus in part on the genesis of the research project being presented, in order to demonstrate how articles develop from the first spark of an idea to final publication. Students will also explore substantive issues raised in the pieces, the better to become familiar with the latest work being done across a variety of subject areas. Students will also develop their own research and scholarly agendas as the semester progresses.

Note: This reading group meets weekly.

Bioethics and Health Law: Selected Topics

Course #: 2037 Term: 2019WI Faculty: Cohen, I. Glenn Credits: 3.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Health Law

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times:	Location
Tue 1:00 PM - 4:15 PM	HAU102
Wed 1:00 PM - 4:15 PM	HAU102
Thu 1:00 PM - 4:15 PM	HAU102
Fri 1:00 PM - 4:15 PM	HAU102
Mon 1:00 PM - 4:15 PM	HAU102

Course Description: Prerequisites: None
Exam Type: No Exam
This class covers selected topics in health care law, public health law, and (especially) bioethics. Among the topics that may be covered are: informed consent, medical confidentiality (including issues pertaining to medical big data), the duty to treat, conscientious objection in health care, ownership and patenting of human tissue, organ donation and allocation, abortion, reproductive technologies, end of life decision-making, the definition of death, and mandatory testing for diseases.

The course will be run seminar style. Evaluation will be split between a participation grade and an 8,000 word research paper that may be turned in any time before April 15, 2019. The research paper should be related to a topic covered in the course. Students will be expected to participate each and every session, so the course is not a good fit for students uncomfortable speaking in class.

This is a fairly reading-intensive course. Students should expect 60-120 pages of reading a session (though much of it will not be cases).

Business Strategy for Lawyers

Course #: 2015 Term: 2019SP Faculty: Spier, Kathryn Credits: 3.00
Type: Elective Subject Areas: Business Organization, Commercial Law, and Finance; Disciplinary Perspectives & Law; Procedure & Practice

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times:	Location
Mon 8:30 AM - 10:00 AM	WCC2004
Tue 8:30 AM - 10:00 AM	WCC2004

Course Description: Prerequisites: Students should have some exposure to microeconomics or a related discipline (e.g., Analytical Methods, Law & Economics, an undergraduate class in economics, finance, etc.). Familiarity with algebra is assumed. Students who are unsure should contact the professor.

Exam Type: In Class
Requirements include several analytical assignments, frequent in-class evaluations, and a final exam.

This course presents the fundamentals of business strategy to a legal audience. The class sessions include both traditional lectures and business-school case discussions. The lecture topics and analytical frameworks are drawn from MBA curriculums at leading business schools. The cases are selected for both their business strategy content and their legal interest.

The main course material is divided into four parts. The first part presents the basic frameworks for the analysis of strategy. The topics include economic and game theoretic approaches to strategy, competitive advantage and industry analysis. The second part is concerned with organizational and contractual responses to agency problems. Topics include pay-for-performance, corporate control, and the design of partnerships and other business associations. The third part takes a broader view of business associations, considering the horizontal and vertical scope of the firm and the advantages of hybrid organizational forms such as franchising and joint ventures. The fourth part covers special topics in competitive strategy, including product differentiation, tacit collusion, facilitating practices, network externalities, market foreclosure, and innovation.

This course is well-suited for students interested in economic analysis of the law with a strong business and industry focus. Because of the significant overlap with the MBA curriculum, this class is not appropriate for students in the JD-MBA program. Since the lectures and assignments focus on abstract frameworks and theoretic approaches, familiarity with economic reasoning and algebra is assumed.

Exam Type: In Class

This 3-unit spring course is designed to help students develop business valuation and related financial analysis skills. The following topics will be covered: how a firm’s business strategy and its operating and financial characteristics affect its valuation; review of basic corporate financial reports and disclosures that serve as inputs to valuation analysis; analysis of financial ratios to measure financial risks and returns; analysis of financial disclosures to identify red flags of potential distress or earnings manipulation; valuation issues with taxes, intangibles and financial investments; developing cash flow forecasts; and integrating the above tools and techniques to determine the valuation of a firm’s equity. Students will learn common valuation methods such as discounted cash flow analysis and earnings based valuation, and also learn to use other approaches used in the valuation industry such the use of valuation multiples and comparable transactions analysis. Examples from court cases involving valuation disputes will be used to illustrate practical valuation problems. The course will be relevant for students in the Law and Business program of study, and to others who wish to prepare for careers in capital markets, corporate transactions, commercial litigation, mergers and acquisitions, and other related areas.

Capital Punishment in America

Course #: 2020 Term: 2018FA Faculty: Steiker, Jordan Credits: 3.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Constitutional Law & Civil Rights; Criminal Law & Procedure

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times:	Location
Mon 1:15 PM - 2:45 PM	AUS111
Tue 1:15 PM - 2:45 PM	AUS111

Course Description: Prerequisite: JD students must have completed Criminal Law. For LLMs, instructor permission is required to waive the prerequisite.

Exam Type: In Class

This course considers the legal, political, and social implications of the practice of capital punishment in America, with an emphasis on contemporary legal issues. The course will frame contemporary questions by considering some historical perspectives on the use of the death penalty in America and by delving into the moral philosophical debate about the justice of capital punishment as a state practice. It will explore in detail the intricate constitutional doctrines developed by the Supreme Court in the four decades since the Court "constitutionalized" capital punishment in the early 1970s. Doctrinal topics to be covered include the role of aggravating and mitigating factors in guiding the sentencers decision to impose life or death; challenges to the arbitrary and/or racially discriminatory application of the death penalty; the ineligibility of juveniles and persons with intellectual disability for capital punishment, limits on the exclusion and inclusion of jurors in capital trials; allocation of authority between judges and juries in capital sentencing; and the scope of federal habeas review of death sentences, among other topics.

Some seats are reserved for students enrolled in the winter-spring Capital Punishment Clinic. Students who enroll in the clinic will be enrolled in this course by the Office of Clinical and Pro Bono Programs. If a student enrolled in a clinical seat drops the winter-spring clinic, they will also lose their seat in this course.

Challenges of a General Counsel

Course #: 2475 Term: 2018FA Faculty: Wilkins, David Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Legal Profession, Legal Ethics & Professional Responsibility; Procedure & Practice

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times: Location

Tue 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM WCC3016

Course Description: Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: No Exam

As the seminar description indicates, in this seminar we will use a series of in-depth case studies to examine the challenges facing General Counsels (GCs) in the private, government, and non-profit sectors. To explore these issues, we will have a number of prominent GCs as guest lecturers, including the GC of American Express (along with Ben Heineman, former GC of GE) in the private sector, the former GCs (although sometimes having different titles) of the Defense Department, State Department, Justice Department, and White House in the public sector, and the GCs of Harvard, the Mellon Foundation, and Partners in Health from the non-profit world. In order to ensure a lively and informative discussion with these senior leaders, we are looking to put together a class of students who collectively have interest and experience in all of these sectors.

This course will explore the three fundamental roles of lawyers -- acute technician, wise counselor, and lawyer as leader -- in a series of problems faced by general counsel in major private sector, public sector and non-profit sector institutions. In the past 25 years, general counsel have risen in power and status within the profession, becoming core members of top management and intimately involved in complex, multi-faceted problem solving and strategy setting. The "cases" in this course involve questions beyond "what is legal" and focus on "what is right," using specific illustrations drawn from the contemporary world - in business (e.g. the BP oil spill, Googles clash with the Chinese government GM's delay in dealing with ignition switch issues); in government (e.g. Guantonamo, don't ask don't tell, Iran sanctions, torture, Libya); and in non-profit organizations (e.g. privacy, sexual harassment policies, patient's rights). These cases involve a broad range of considerations: ethics, reputation, risk management, public policy, politics, communications and organizational citizenship.

The course will advance for critical analysis the idea of the general counsel as lawyer-statesman who has a central role in setting the direction of the organization, but who must navigate complex internal relationships and challenging external ones. The course advances a broad view of lawyers roles and examines the skills, beyond understanding law, required in complex problem solving by the lawyer-statesman. The first four classes of the course will be focus on the role of general counsel in a multi-national corporation, and will be taught by Professors Wilkins and Heineman and a current GC. The next five classes will focus on public sector and will be taught by distinguished leaders who served as White House Counsel, Defense Department GC, Legal Advisor at the State Department, Treasury Department GC and Assistant Attorney General-Legal Counsel at the Justice Department. The final three classes will focus on the non-profit sector and will be taught by the GCs of the Mellon Foundation, Harvard University and Partners Healthcare.

Each class will center around a one or two page hypothetical or real problem dealing with a fundamental challenge faced by general counsels in a rich context involving institutional dynamics, personality, policy, politics, culture and history. In preparation for the discussion, students will read materials from a variety of sources and disciplines designed to give them background on the problem and institution to be discussed. Students will also write 2-3 page response papers (which will be graded pass/fail) using the problem to highlight issues they feel are important and to raise questions for the class discussion. Students will be graded on satisfactorily completing all response papers, on actively participating in class discussion, and on a 10 page paper due on the last day of exam period on a topic relating to the role of the GC in a particular setting.

Course Description:

Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.

Enrollment in this clinic will fulfill the HLS JD pro bono requirement. Required Class Component: Child Advocacy: Child Welfare, Education & Juvenile Justice Clinical Seminar (2 spring classroom credits).

Students who enroll in this clinic will be enrolled in the required course by the Office of Clinical and Pro Bono Programs.

By Permission: No.

Add/Drop Deadline: Please note this clinic has an early drop deadline of October 29, 2018.

LLM Students: International students on F-1 student visas are required to have Curricular Practical Training (CPT) authorization; LL.M. students are not eligible for CPT.

Multi-Semester: This is a winter-spring clinic (2 winter clinical credits + 4-5 spring clinical credits).

Placement Site: Various externship placements. Click here for a master list of placement sites since CAPs inception. The Child Advocacy Clinic: Child Welfare, Education & Juvenile Justice is designed to educate students about a range of social change strategies and to encourage critical thinking about the pros and cons of different approaches. The clinic includes both a classroom seminar and clinical fieldwork component. A variety of substantive areas impacting the lives of children are addressed with a focus on child welfare (abuse and neglect, foster care, and adoption), education, and juvenile justice. The Clinic is relevant for students not only with a particular interest in children's issues, but also for those more generally interested in social change.

Enrollment Options: The Child Advocacy Clinic offers two different clinical fieldwork options: a spring-only clinic and a winter-spring clinic. This offering is for the winter-spring Child Advocacy Clinic. During the winter term, students engage in full-time work at sites generally located outside of the Boston area. During the spring term, students engage in part-time work (16-20 hours/week for 4-5 clinical credits) at the same site from Cambridge. Enrollment is capped at 8 students.

This course is open only to students who have not taken the Child Advocacy Clinic: System-Involved Youth (held in the fall 2018 semester).

Fieldwork Component: The winter-spring Clinic places students with model organizations around the country and occasionally around the world. Students work full-time at a distant placement for the winter term and then return to Cambridge in the spring, working part-time and remotely for the same organization.

Students work in a wide array of fieldwork settings, ranging from organizations that promote systemic change through impact litigation, to those working on legislative reform, to grassroots organizing initiatives, to social enterprises. Some students will work for reform from within the system and others from outside. Typically, winter-spring students will not engage in individual legal representation.

Based on their particular placements, students may: draft memoranda and briefs for litigation; develop legislative reform proposals; analyze social science and psychological research; leverage the media; engage in written work for a variety of types of publications (legal journals, popular press, guides for practitioners, content for websites); provide strategic advice to start-ups; or create, conduct, and analyze interviews. For instance:

In the child welfare area, students may work with a leading boutique impact litigation firm challenging the treatment of youth in foster care; with a new social venture to engage the media to promote the interests of foster care youth; or with a model problem-solving court for drug addicted parents.

Harvard Law School Course Catalog

2018-2019 Academic Year

In the education area, students may work alongside lawyers and community organizers to advocate for new school financing laws; engage in efforts to ensure incarcerated youth receive high-quality schooling; or advise schools and communities on dismantling the school-to-prison pipeline.

In the juvenile justice area, students may develop trainings on best practices for staff at juvenile incarceration facilities; or fight for improved conditions of confinement for juveniles.

Note that many placements cut across substantive areas and engage students in a host of advocacy strategies and skills.

Matching Process: Once enrolled in the Clinic, the Child Advocacy Program (CAP) will provide students with a list of fieldwork placement organizations and their potential projects. Students will give CAP information about their background and interests and rank their placement preferences. CAP will then match students with a placement based on their preferences, the organizations needs, and CAPs mission to provide students with a broad spectrum of experiences. Visit the Child Advocacy Clinic webpage for a list of organizations where clinic students have been placed in prior years.

This course is part of the Child Advocacy Program (CAP), whose other courses are: Art of Social Change; Child Welfare, Education & Juvenile Justice; Child, Family, and State (alternating years); Family Law (alternating years); and the Future of the Family seminar. Enrollment in all CAP courses is encouraged but not required.

All clinic students participate in both the classroom seminar and a clinical fieldwork component. The clinic offers two fieldwork options: (1) winter-spring and (2) spring.

During the spring seminar, students bring into the classroom their varied experiences, presenting on both specific projects and cases in which they are engaged, and also their placement organizations larger vision for improving conditions for children and families. Students reflect on each others varied experiences, consider which strategies in the field are working and why, and evaluate the benefits and limitations of different approaches.

Regular classroom attendance and active participation in discussion is required. Grading will be based on a combination of each students clinical fieldwork, seminar presentation and related packet, contributions to class discussion throughout the term, and one or more short reflection papers.

Once enrolled in the Clinic, the Child Advocacy Program (CAP) will provide students with a list of fieldwork placement sites and their potential projects. Students will give CAP information about their background and interests and rank their placement preferences. CAP will then match students with a placement based on their preferences, the organizations' needs, and CAPs mission to provide students with a broad spectrum of experiences. Visit the Child Advocacy Clinic website for more about the Clinic, including answers to frequently asked questions.

This course is part of the Child Advocacy Program (CAP), whose other courses are: Art of Social Change: Child Welfare, Education & Juvenile Justice; Child, Family, and State (alternating years); Family Law (alternating years); and the Future of the Family seminar. Enrollment in all CAP courses is encouraged but not required.

Tue 3:20 PM - 4:50 PM	GRS110
Wed 3:20 PM - 4:50 PM	GRS110

Course Description: Prerequisites: None

Exam Type: One Day Take-Home

This course will focus on childrens rights and interests in the context of family and child welfare. We will consider how our society shapes the meaning of childhood, and what role the government does and should play in supporting families so that they can provide children with appropriate nurture. We will assess the potential of programs designed to provide special support to fragile families, such as early home visitation and family preservation. We will look at how law divides responsibility for children between parents and the state, and consider how the balance should be drawn. We will look at law and policy governing parent rights, child abuse and neglect, foster care, adoption (domestic and international), education, and juvenile justice. Throughout we will think about how we could change law and policy to create a better world for children and families.

This course is an introduction to and an overview of the civil litigation process. We will focus on the rules that govern the process (the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure) and the constitutional issues that pervade this area of practice (e.g., due process, federalism, separation of power, the right to a jury trial). We will consider how procedure facilitates (or hinders) truth-finding, justice, and efficiency. We will think about how and why procedure is where strategy happens and why, often, procedure is more outcome-determinative than substantive law. We will focus on doctrine, policy, theory, and strategy.

Course Description: Prerequisite: Civil Procedure

Exam Type: Anyday Take-Home

In developing rules for constitutional and statutory civil rights litigation, the Supreme Court is continually balancing the need to enforce the Constitution and civil rights laws with countervailing interests such as state sovereignty and the goal of preventing litigation from exerting a chilling effect on government officials in the performance of their duties. With that balancing act as backdrop, this course will trace the evolution of the legal tools available to civil rights plaintiffs and the legal obstacles they must overcome to obtain relief, including immunities, justiciability, and limitations on the enforceability of statutory rights. We will analyze the applicable legal principles both in terms of their theoretical and policy underpinnings and their practical effects, in order to provide students considering careers involving civil rights litigation with a solid doctrinal foundation and to consider more broadly how procedural rules can dictate substantive outcomes and how gaps develop between rights and remedies.

Whether, and if so under what conditions, foreign actors can lawfully engage with parties to a civil war continue to be pressing questions for international law and international relations. The intensity of recent debates about the legality of interventions in Iraq, Syria, Yemen, and Ukraine illustrates the urgency of these questions, and the difficulty of finding general principles to address them. This reading group will explore whether and how legal arguments for and against involvement in civil wars -- to promote particular political systems, guarantee regional order, protect civilians, defeat non-state terrorist groups, or secure economic investment -- have shaped foundational legal principles regulating the use of force, recognition, intervention, and investment protection, and challenged distinctions between inside and outside, civil and international, domestic and foreign, or war and peace. The group will read works from international law, history, and political theory to place legal debates within a broader jurisprudential and social context, and will explore the changing role of international law and international lawyers in framing and justifying interventions in the American Civil War, the Spanish Civil War, Vietnam, Afghanistan, Nicaragua, the former Yugoslavia, and Syria. We will consider the adequacy of the broad conceptual architecture that we have inherited to address such situations, and what might be emerging to take its place. Rather than treating the inability of law to remain above the political battle as a problem, we will explore whether international lawyers can develop a foundation for contemporary public debates about the legality of force and intervention that takes conflicts over empirical evidence and normative arguments, or facts and values, seriously.

Note: This reading group will meet on the following dates: January 30, February 13 and 27, March 13, and April 3 and 17.

Course Description: Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.

Note: This course meets from 5-8 pm once per week. Time is set aside during the last hour of the class each week for team break out meetings.

Prerequisites: By Permission. By Permission. Please send a statement of interest and CV to wjacobs@law.harvard.edu no later than October 15, 2018. This is a multi-disciplinary course; students will work in multi-disciplinary teams. Cross-registrants from SEAS, GSD, HKS, SPH, HBS, and GSAS are encouraged to apply.

Exam: No Exam. There will be written and oral exercises throughout the semester. At the end of the semester, each team will submit a final paper that describes and analyzes the team's project concept, feasibility, and implementation plan. Grading will be based on the quality of class participation, team work, exercises, final paper, and presentation.

This course has a limited number of seats to be filled by advanced students from multiple disciplines (law, business, engineering, economics, design, policy, public health) who will together design and study practical solutions for reducing the use of fossil fuels in the U.S. and reducing emissions of potent greenhouse gases (GHGs) from a variety of activities other than generation of energy. The course emphasizes solutions to help low-income, under-served populations improve their living conditions with power generated by renewable sources of fuel as well as identifying innovative legal and financing pathways for such projects. In teams, we will scrutinize potential solutions from multiple perspectives (economic, technological, legal, health, etc.) for feasibility, scalability, replicability and impact (environmental, public health, social). Each team will develop a detailed implementation plan for one project; the implementation plan will identify a specific pathway for overcoming legal, financial, and policy obstacles. Examples of projects: (1) reducing potent GHG emissions from the agriculture sector - whether by technology or incentives for behavioral changes, such projects improve air and water quality as well as public health; (2) using renewable energy to achieve the goal of restoring reliable energy and clean drinking water supplies to isolated, low-income communities in Puerto Rico that were devastated by the 2017 hurricanes; (3) helping isolated, impoverished Alaska Native villages use renewable energy not only to reduce their reliance on dirty diesel fuel but also to grow food in hydroponic greenhouses; (4) designing a revolving renewable energy investment fund for a university that is committed to promoting renewable energy and offsetting its own emissions. Students in this class will learn how projects proceed from concept through screening, design, financing, environmental review, challenges, and permitting.

This course is practical, highly interactive, and hands-on. Faculty from other Harvard graduate schools, including the School of Public Health, the Kennedy School of Government, the Business School, and the School of Engineering and Applied Sciences will be involved. In addition to lectures and regular team meetings, there will be opportunities to meet with experts, including financiers, technology and renewable energy developers, government representatives, leading corporations, and leading consultants. Lectures will provide background on pertinent topics including the science of GHG and air pollution; the health impacts and other co-benefits of GHG emission reductions; the laws pertaining to air pollution; electricity markets and their regulation; the siting, permitting and financing of projects; and, data collection techniques (including chemistry, data analysis, and GIS methods). Students will learn about key elements of project development and the practice of environmental law, including mechanisms for raising and resolving controversies, identifying the environmental impacts of a project, parsing and applying relevant statutes and regulations, analyzing mechanisms for mitigating project impacts and managing controversies, identifying the permits and approvals needed for a project, and identifying funding sources

Secured credit -- in the form of bank lending, mortgages, and asset securitizations -- has fueled the American economy. The details and the consequences of secured credit have been a major preoccupation of everyone dealing with the economy. This course deals primarily with understanding what secured credit is all about -- the various aspects of the use of credit and collateral in sale and loan transactions, ranging from routine consumer purchases to complex business transactions. This is a course about commercial lawyering. It is a problem-based exploration of commercial deal-making that considers statutory interpretation and policy in meeting the needs, and reconciling the interests, of the various parties to secured transactions -- consumers, manufacturers, dealers, lenders, insurers, and the government. The focus is on developing legal strategies appropriate to specific situations.

Rapidly changing computing/communication technologies pose deep challenges to existing regulatory frameworks. This course provides a legal, technological, and policy introduction to these changes and challenges. Although there are no prerequisites for this course, students who have already taken administrative law and/or antitrust law might find that this course both reinforces and applies the concepts introduced in those other courses. Students who have not taken those courses may find this course a helpful way to explore those other subjects. We will cover the regulatory regimes that govern radio, broadcast television, cable television, the telephone system, and Internet access infrastructure.

This reading group will explore how transactional law can be used as a catalyst for social change and complement litigation and policy strategies to alleviate poverty and systemic injustices. As the litigation-centered approach to the social change movement became overburdened in the 1990s, many legal service providers moved away from litigation strategies to focus on community economic development (CED) as a means to redress economic inequality. Under this approach, CED lawyers work with grassroots organizers to support community ownership, affordable housing and other organizing-based initiatives.

Through the reading group, students will learn about the evolution of CED and discuss ways in which transactional law can be used to address economic justice. We will specifically explore the use of worker cooperatives, community land trusts and the solidarity economy movement as mechanisms to empower communities and sustainability.

Note: This reading group will meet on the following dates: 9/7, 9/21, 10/19, 10/26, 11/9, 11/16

Course Description: Prerequisite: None

This seminar will explore changing ideas about the nature of a fair trial within a common law criminal justice system. What is a fair trial? Who is it fair to? How can it be achieved? The material will be drawn primarily from the UK, with other readings from the US and from other common law jurisdictions.

The seminar will consider the people involved in a criminal trial, from the witnesses to the press reporters, the police and prosecutors, the judges and jury members, the lawyers, the defendants and the public. To what extent should a fair trial be fair to each? What does fairness involve for these groups? Can a fair trial be achieved for all, and should it?

We will consider the fair trial provisions within international and constitutional documents and the extent and limitations of their guarantees. And we will use examples from the UK and comparative material from the US and other common law jurisdictions to examine a selection of reforms, for example, innovations in the way in which vulnerable witnesses give evidence, or obligations of disclosure on the defence and the modified right to silence. We will critique these reforms, examine their contribution to, or detracting from, the achievement of a fair trial, and consider whether similar measures could, or should, be introduced in the US.

No knowledge of UK law is required.

The instructor is a UK-qualified criminal barrister, a part-time judge (criminal) in the UK, and a door tenant at Red Lion Chambers in London.

International, Comparative & Foreign Law

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times:	Location

Course Description: Prerequisites: None
Exam Type: No Exam
Digital privacy has become a major issue for Internet users, technology companies, online businesses, researchers, and policy-makers around the world, as more and more personal information is collected, aggregated, shared, and used across a wide variety of contexts. Policy-makers on both sides of the Atlantic—and globally—have been responsive to concerns expressed by users, consumer organizations, activists, and academics, and have proposed an important series of new laws, regulations, and other privacy-enhancing instruments at the international and national level. At the same time, the approaches aimed at regulating the respective information practices on the Internet and in the digital environment more broadly—targeting social networking sites, online advertising, data aggregators, IoT providers, and the like—as well as the details of the proposed privacy norms are highly controversial.

In this interactive seminar, we will identify, map, analyze, and discuss latest developments in privacy law related to the digital environment from a comparative perspective and put them into a broader context. Specifically, in the first part of the seminar we will introduce competing theories and models of online privacy and map current policy proposals as well as regulatory action onto such a matrix. In addition to discussing theoretical frameworks and analyzing current developments in digital privacy, we will also take a closer look into qualitative and quantitative studies regarding privacy attitudes and practices online, and ask how such findings from research have shaped—or should shape—both the theoretical frameworks as well as the actual application of law. In the second part, the seminar examines in greater detail potential solutions to the concerns and harms that are presented in the first section. In our analysis, we will survey and critique both legal and non-legal solutions. We will hope to answer questions like: which institutions are the most capable of enforcing user privacy? And how can we design our technologies so that privacy values are embedded into the construction of our technological tools? In asking these questions, we will create a valuable matrix and taxonomy for recommending solutions to potential privacy harms. Finally, in the third section, we will look at specific cases that reflect current trends in privacy law. For instance, we will apply our studies earlier in the seminar towards recent developments in the fields of Artificial Intelligence and Augmented Reality, as well as other instances of recent tensions between privacy and other values (autonomy, transparency, etc.).

To conclude the seminar, we will host a small symposium that compiles our progress from the seminar. Students will have the opportunity to recommend and invite panelists for the symposium. Further, you will be given the opportunity to prepare remarks for the panelists and play a leading role in the direction of the symposium.

Comparative Law: Ancient Law

Course #: 2472 Term: 2019SP Faculty: Lanni, Adriaan Credits: 3.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: International, Comparative & Foreign Law; Legal History

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times:	Location
Thu 10:00 AM - 11:30 AM	WCCB010
Fri 10:00 AM - 11:30 AM	WCCB010

Course Description: Prerequisites: None
Exam Type: In Class
The focus of the class will be on comparing various ancient and modern approaches to problems faced by all legal systems. Topics covered include ancient approaches to crime and punishment, the regulation of sexuality, the trial jury, court procedure, international law, and commercial law. The main focus will be on the legal systems of classical Athens and Rome. We will also look to other ancient legal systems where relevant to a particular topic. Prior knowledge of ancient history or ancient languages is not required; the course is designed to be of interest to those without a background in the ancient world. Grades will be based on 2 short response papers, a 1-hour in class exam, and class participation.
Students can register for an additional independent writing credit and write a research paper in lieu of the response papers to satisfy the law school writing requirement. Students looking to satisfy the law school writing requirement who do not want to write a research paper may write 2 additional short response papers (4 total) to satisfy half of Option 2 ("substantial course writing") of the writing requirement.

Comparative Law: Foundations of Western Legal Thought

Course #: 2031 Term: 2018FA Faculty: Glendon, Mary Ann Credits: 3.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: International, Comparative & Foreign Law; Legal History

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times: Location

Mon 1:30 PM - 3:00 PM HAU101

Tue 1:30 PM - 3:00 PM HAU101

Course Description: Prerequisites: None

Exam Type: No Exam

Course requirements include weekly memos, two papers, and an oral presentation.

This course begins with the shared foundations of the civil law (Romano-Germanic) and common law (Anglo-American) legal systems in Athens (Greek philosophy), Rome (Roman law), and Jerusalem (Judaean-Christian religion). It then explores the somewhat different ways in which those systems were influenced at crucial stages of their development by different branches of modern political thought. It concludes with works from the dawn of post-modernity and a final session on the amalgam of ancient and modern themes in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. A principal aim is to encourage close reading of foundational works.

Complex Litigation: Legal Doctrines, Real World Practice

Course #: 2366 Term: 2018FA Faculty: Clary, Richard Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Procedure & Practice

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times: Location

Thu 9:30 AM - 11:30 AM GRS110

Course Description: Prerequisite: Civil Procedure or faculty permission to waive the prerequisite is required.

Exam Type: Any Day Take-Home

This course will study legal doctrines, litigation strategies (viewed from both the plaintiff and defendant perspectives) and current "best practices" relating to complex litigation. Topics will include forum selection strategies (state versus federal court); removal from and remand to state court; transfer, coordination and consolidation of federal actions; multi-district litigation, including choice of law in transferred cases; the impact of class actions on MDL proceedings; management of parallel federal/state proceedings (including the All Writs Act and the Anti-Injunction Act); and practical issues relating to managing multi-case litigation, such as coordination orders and bellwether trials. Many of the examples to be discussed will come from recent and pending securities cases, but knowledge of substantive securities law is not required.

Fri 1:00 PM - 4:15 PM	WCC3019

Course Description: Prerequisite: This course is limited to students with no prior programming experience.

Exam: No Exam
A final project will be required.

Modern legal practice requires deep understanding of technology. Advocates must understand what it means at a technical level to "speak" online, to "sign" a digital contract, to "search" a computer, or to "delete" evidence. And law firms must understand what tasks can be most efficiently done by custom software and what are best left to human beings.

This course teaches students to be effective computer programmers, and therefore to deconstruct and understand the technologies they might encounter throughout their careers. Students will learn basic computer programming skills using the programming language Python. We will then apply those skills to real-life legal scenarios drawn from the instructors own legal and programming experience, such as data-driven lobbying and statutory analysis, mass litigation automation, and electronic discovery.

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Business Organization, Commercial Law, and Finance

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times: Location

Thu 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM WCC3012

Course Description: Prerequisites: There are no prerequisites for this course although some familiarity with corporate law is assumed.

Exam Type: No Exam Grading will be based on reaction memos and class participation.

This course explores disparate conceptions of legally entities in private law, with an emphasis on for-profit entities such as corporations. Readings range from law-and-economics constructions of legal entities to traditional jurisprudential views, including the identification of corporations as "persons" in constitutional law. The question throughout is: why should the law accord legal personality to for-profit firms? Ancient Roman law made little use of fictional legal entities in commercial law. What functions do legal entities serve in modern law? For example, do they simplify transactions, or facilitate raising capital for large enterprises by securitizing interests in ongoing businesses? Do they allow lawmakers to regulate collective actors that would otherwise live in the wild? Or do they do all of the above? In addition, how should we resolve the conceptual puzzles that legal entities pose? How can they be criminally liable if no real person among their agents has criminal intent? Lawyers sometimes say that corporations are fictions; management consultants sometimes depict them as unruly machines. The difference turns partly on definitions. But not entirely. How did the "real entity" theory enter American jurisprudence to compete with the venerable view that corporate "personhood" is a privilege conferred by the state, or its polar opposite, the view that the corporation is a species of private ordering, a "nexus of contracts" in one phrasing?

The term conflict of laws refers to the problems courts face when a dispute has connections to two or more states or countries. In such cases, courts apply choice of law rules to determine which jurisdictions substantive law to apply to the case. This course will introduce students to basic problems in conflict of laws, including traditional choice of law theory, modern approaches to choice of law, party autonomy in choosing the applicable law, constitutional constraints on choice of law, limitations issues, state/federal choice of law problems and full faith and credit to judgments.

This course examines, from the perspective of social and political history, constitutional developments from the enactment of the post-Civil War constitutional amendments to the Supreme Court's decision in Brown v. Board of Education and its effect on the civil rights movement. The principal issues addressed include the enactment and early judicial interpretation of the 13th, 14th, and 15th amendments; the constitutional questions raised by segregation and disfranchisement during the Plessy era; economic regulation during the Lochner era; the birth of the modern first amendment during the interwar period; race issues during the interwar period; the constitutional crisis over the New Deal in the 1930s; first amendment issues raised during and after World War II; and, finally, the road to Brown v. Board of Education as well as an assessment of that decision's historical significance.

Course Description: Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: Any Day Take-Home

The course is one of the basic courses in the field. It focuses on the First Amendment and addresses the Freedom of Speech, the Free Exercise of Religion and the Establishment Clause. Because constitutional law is always [at least potentially] in motion, this section will feature its development through time, animated and structured by momentous shifts in its political and social contexts. Beginning with religion, we'll go on, at greater length, to analyze speech issues through its prism. Analyzing the ebb and flow of doctrine and argument in the modern period since World War II will prepare us to speculate about possible developments that lie ahead now.

It will also compel us to confront an issue we face every day at HLS: the issue of orthodoxy in academia.

The aim of this class will be to enable you not only to understand constitutional law, but to better understand law in general, its relation to politics and [should you wish it] how to live a better life.

In class, there will be no cold calling. Instead, students will volunteer [by email] to join discussion of at least one specific case or problem at the outset of each week.

Course Description: Prerequisites: None

Exam Type: No Exam

This course will provide a framework (and multiple lenses) through which to think about the salient economic and social problems of the five billion people of the developing world, and to work in a team setting toward identifying entrepreneurial solutions to such problems. Case study discussions will cover challenges and solutions in fields as diverse as health, education, technology, urban planning, and arts and the humanities. The modules themselves will be team-taught by faculty from engineering, the arts, urban design, healthcare and business. The course will embrace a bias toward action by enabling students to understand the potential of individual agency in addressing these problems. All students will participate in the development of a business plan or grant proposal to tackle their chosen problem in a specific developing country/region, emphasizing the importance of contextualizing the entrepreneurial intervention. The student-team will ideally be comprised of students with diverse backgrounds from across the University.

Note: This course is jointly listed with the following schools: Harvard Faculty of Arts and Sciences (FAS) as SW47, Harvard Kennedy School (HKS) as DEV-338, Harvard T. H. Chan School of Public Health (HSPH) as GHP-568, Harvard Medical School as IND 520, Harvard Graduate School of Design (DES) as SES 5375, and Harvard Law School (HLS) as 2543. Course Description: Prerequisites: For JD students, Constitutional Law: Separation of Powers, Constitutional Law: First Amendment, or Separation of Powers. For LLM students, enrollment is by permission of the instructor.

Exam Type: No Exam

This is an advanced constitutional law seminar for students who have already taken the introductory Constitutional Law course. The seminar will provide an opportunity for in-depth discussion of competing theories of constitutional interpretation, the role of the Supreme Court in our political system, and analysis of the judicial process. Each week, these themes will be examined through the lens of a current "hot topic" in constitutional law -- for example, partisan gerrymandering, union dues and free speech, the Second Amendment, electronic surveillance, voting rights, campaign finance, immigration, same-sex marriage, and other topics.

This is not a "spectator" class; all students will be expected to participate actively in class discussion each week. This is a good seminar for students interested in clerking or pursuing academia.

Note: This seminar will take place over two weeks only, from September 10, 2018, to September 21, 2018. Note that class on 9/12 is cancelled, and a makeup class will be held on September 21st.

Drop Deadline: September 11 by 11:59pm EST.

Course Description: Exam Type: In Class

Contract law is the study of legally enforceable promises, normally exchanged as part of a bargain. Contracts are the main means by which transactions are made and legal obligations are voluntarily incurred. Among the topics that may be covered are: when a contractual promise exists and which are too indefinite; whether consideration should be required and what that means; whether there was offer and acceptance forming a contract; whether and when contracts should be voided because of duress, nondisclosure, a failure to read, unconscionability, or immorality; how to interpret contracts; implied and explicit contractual conditions; the material breach and perfect tender rules; whether performance is excused by mistake of fact, impossibility, impracticability, or frustration of contractual purpose; what remedies to reward and how to measure them; and whether and when damages should be limited because of failure to mitigate, unforeseeability, or use of penalty clauses. Materials to be announced.

Controlling Shareholders

Course #: 2830 Term: 2019SP Faculty: Lin, Da Credits: 1.00
Type: Elective Subject Areas: Business Organization, Commercial Law, and Finance; International, Comparative & Foreign Law; Regulatory Law

Delivery Mode: Reading Group

Days and Times:	Location
Wed 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM	WCC4057

Course Description: Prerequisites: None
Exam Type: No Exam
Controlled companies, such as Google, Facebook, and CBS, are an increasingly important feature of Americas corporate landscape. This reading group will examine contemporary corporate governance debates surrounding controlled companies, including the value of one-share-one-vote, the best way to protect minority shareholders, and the limits of private ordering. We will address both normative questions (are controlled companies a real problem?) and practical ones (how should controlling shareholders be policed?). In the last class, we will shift our attention to the role and regulation of controlled companies in other countries. The reading group will meet for six two-hour sessions graded credit/fail.

Note: This reading group will meet on the following dates: 2/20, 2/27, 3/27, 4/3, 4/10, 4/17.

This course will explore copyright law and policy. Approximately two thirds of the class time and readings will be devoted to the American copyright system; the remainder will be devoted to the major relevant multilateral treaties and to the laws pertaining to copyright and "neighboring rights" in other countries. Substantial attention will be paid to the efforts by philosophers and economists to justify, reform, or abolish the copyright system. Course #: 2043 Term: 2018FA Faculty: Cendali, Dale Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Intellectual Property, Cyberlaw and Technology, and Arts & Entertainment

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times:	Location
Mon 1:00 PM - 3:00 PM	PND102

Course Description: Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: In Class

The class will analyze the strategic, practical and policy issues involved with copyright and trademark litigation from the beginning of a case where emergency injunctive relief might be sought, to its potential end at the U.S. Supreme Court. Substantive areas of copyright and trademark law will include fair use, nominative fair use, the likelihood of confusion, use of consumer surveys, dilution, the role of the First Amendment, the theory behind injunctive relief, the nature of irreparable injury, and trademarks as a form of property right. The course will discuss how to persuasively present evidence and try a case. The course will also address the special nature of Supreme Court litigation and techniques for an effective oral argument. Each student will participate in one very brief oral argument during the semester. Real-life cases the instructor has litigated will be used to illustrate points.

Note: The first class on September 10 will be videorecorded; a link to it will be posted in Canvas as soon as possible after the class session ends.

Course Description: Prerequisite: There are no prerequisites for the course. However, it is recommended that students either (a) have taken (or are taking concurrently) the Corporations course at HLS, (b) have taken some course that considers corporations or business associations at another law school in the US or abroad, or (c) have had prior experience that exposed them to corporate law and governance issues. Students who have questions regarding whether the course would be suitable for them should feel free to contact the instructors.

Exam Type: No Exam There will be no examination. Instead, students will be asked to submit, before sessions, a brief memo on the assigned readings; grades will be based on these memos (primarily) and on participation in class discussion.

This course will consider a range of policy issues in the law governing corporations, securities, and capital markets. Issues to be considered include the allocation of power between managers and shareholders, takeover bid and proxy contests, hedge fund activism, executive compensation, controlling shareholders, dual-class structures, corporate social responsibility, and securities regulation. A substantial number of sessions will feature outside speakers; such speakers will include prominent practitioners presenting on current policy and practice issues as well as prominent academics presenting on current research. To illustrate, recent speakers in this course have included prominent hedge fund activists, a sitting SEC Commissioner, a leading M&A litigator, and prominent academics.

Readings will mainly be law review articles and discussion papers. Many of the readings will use economic reasoning, and an interest in or tolerance for such reasoning will be helpful. The aim of the course will be to give students a good sense of the issues that have been discussed in the literature or in current debates, and the ways in which policy arguments about such issues can be developed.

Note: The course will not meet on all Wednesdays and Thursdays during the semester; rather, it will meet for eighteen 2-hour sessions which will take place during the time slot of the course.

Corporate Criminal Investigations

Course #: 2263 Term: 2018FA Faculty: Soltes, Eugene; Kahn, Daniel; Tsao, Leo Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Criminal Law & Procedure

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times:	Location
Mon 5:30 PM - 7:30 PM	HAU105

Course Description: Prerequisites: None
Exam Type: No Exam
The criminal investigation and prosecution of large-scale corporate misconduct are among the most high profile areas of focus for federal prosecutors and the white-collar defense bar. Recent major prosecutions of individuals and corporations for violations of the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act (FCPA), the Bank Secrecy Act (BSA), and the International Emergency Economic Powers Act (IEEPA) demonstrate that this remains an active area of enforcement for U.S. law enforcement. The interpretation of these laws by courts continues to develop and evolve, implicating a number of significant legal issues. Moreover, such investigations are becoming increasingly global in nature, as foreign law enforcement and regulatory agencies become more active in focusing on these crimes. These multi-jurisdictional investigations pose new obstacles to government enforcers and defense practitioners, and new legal questions for courts to address.
This seminar will explore various aspects of corporate criminal investigations and prosecutions. Topics to be covered include principles of corporate liability; conducting internal and government investigations of corporate misconduct; strategic considerations for prosecutors and defense counsel in corporate criminal investigations; Department of Justice policies on charging, including those designed to incentivize voluntary disclosures, cooperation and remediation; legal and practical issues implicated by multi-jurisdictional cases; corporate compliance programs; and proposals for reform of corporate criminal laws and policies.

Course #: 2595

Term: 2018FA

Faculty: Spamann, Holger

Credits: 1.00

Type: Elective

Subject Areas: Business Organization, Commercial Law, and Finance

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times:

Location

Mon 8:10 AM - 10:10 AM

WCC3018

Tue 8:10 AM - 10:10 AM

WCC3018

Course Description: Prerequisite: Students must have taken Analytical Methods or Introduction to Finance Concepts. If students have a similar introduction to basic present value calculations at HLS or elsewhere, they may contact the faculty to waive the requisite.

Exam Type: Any Day Take Home

This section will be graded based on a mini-exam at the end of the three-week period, i.e., during the semester.

Finance is important to understand the world, your clients, and the law -- and not just corporate law and clients. This course will teach financial concepts mostly through hands-on financial exercises, small and big; the only lectures will be pre-recorded videos you can watch at home. There will be few legal materials, and only as illustrations of financial concepts. As compared to a typical business school course, this course will put more emphasis on concepts and less on details of project valuation. There will be plenty of numerical exercises but little math. The textbook for the course is a standard corporate finance textbook at top business schools.

The course is divided into four sections of three weeks each: (1) Replicating cash flows and the law of one price; (2) Diversification and market efficiency; (3) Capital structure; (4) Options, auctions, and market design. Each section concludes with a one-hour take-home exam to be taken anytime between midnight on the day of the last class and 4:30pm on the Friday of that week; there will be no other exam or paper for this course.

The 3-Week Section will be pass/fail, while the remaining three sections will be graded in standard fashion.

Note: The 3-Week Section will meet from September 4 through September 18. Additionally, the first two out of every three Monday morning lectures will be replaced by a video lecture that students can and must watch at home. The first video lecture must be viewed before the first class on Tuesday, September 4.

Course Description: Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: No Exam

Grades are determined by 10-page papers on approved topics. Some students may earn two credits by writing more extensive papers.

Corporate Reorganization identifies the dominant causes of business failure or distress, and analyzes how (a) corporate governance enhanced by the best business research of the last 20 years can mitigate or avoid failure and (b) chapter 11 resolves failure/distress and impacts out-of-court resolutions. We do this by reference to governance and business research papers, jurisprudence, and articles about failures in the auto, steel, financial, and manufacturing industries, and industries subject to mass tort liability. In formulating resolutions of distressed situations, we apply chapter 11 resolutions as a baseline against which other resolutions are compared. The course is designed to show that optimal restructuring is a multidisciplinary undertaking, even within its legal framework where emphasis is put on governance jurisprudence, bankruptcy jurisprudence, statutory interpretation, the constitutional limits of the bankruptcy power, the bankruptcy courts jurisdiction, and the use of litigation.

Note: This is a one-credit course that meets for 7 two-hour sessions on the following dates: January 28, February 4, 11, 18 and 25, March 4 and 11.

Exam Type: In Class

This course surveys the role of legal structure and legal controls on business enterprises with an emphasis on Delaware law and the duties of the managers, directors, and controlling shareholders of public corporations. It reviews the law of agency, which is fundamental to all legal entities. It addresses non-corporate business entities to highlight their continuities with--and differences from-- business corporations. Corporate topics include limited liability, fiduciary law, shareholder voting, executive compensation, derivative suits, control transactions, mergers and acquisitions, and insider trading. This course also surveys topics in securities law that are closely related to corporate governance: in particular, the SECs proxy and tender offer rules and the reach of anti-fraud liability. One theme throughout the course is corporate laws role in empowering actors with a flexible legal form, another is the laws role in constraining insider opportunism, and a third is the judiciary’s pivotal role in balancing flexibility against constraint.

Note: For upper-level JD students, this course will be included in the Multi-Section round of registration.

Exam: In Class
In addition to the final exam, there will be several quizzes throughout the semester.

This course surveys the legal rules governing corporations with an emphasis on the protection of shareholders in large public corporations against management and controlling shareholders. Topics include asset partitioning, governance (shareholder voting, fiduciary duties, derivative suits, executive compensation), M&A, securities trading, corporate finance, protections of creditors and other constituencies, and choice of law. One quarter of the course will be based on problems drawn from transactional settings. The course emphasizes financial and strategic considerations throughout.

This course surveys the role of legal controls on business organizations. Aspects of the law of agency, partnership, and closely held corporations are reviewed to highlight continuities and discontinuities with the publicly held corporation. Topics include basic fiduciary law, insider trading, shareholder voting, reorganizations, and control transactions. The emphasis throughout is on the functional analysis of legal rules as one set of constraints on corporate behavior among others.

Note: For upper-level JD students, this course will be included in the Multi-Section round of registration.

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times:	Location
Thu 9:30 AM - 11:30 AM	LAN225
Fri 9:30 AM - 11:30 AM	LAN225

Course Description: Prerequisites: There is no formal prerequisite for the course. Students without a basic familiarity - not necessarily expertise -- with rudimentary accounting and finance concepts, including the time value of money, expected value, diversification, and the overall content and purpose of basic financial accounting statements, are encouraged to take Analytical Methods for Lawyers, or equivalent courses, whether at HLS, elsewhere at HU, or online, preferably before the semester you are enrolled in Corporations.

Exam Type: In Class

This course introduces students to the legal rules for protecting creditors and shareholders of a corporation. Simple economic analysis is used to explain the need for, and the limitations of, these rules. Topics include limited liability, veil piercing, equitable subordination, fraudulent conveyances, leveraged buyouts, the duties of care and loyalty, shareholder voting, derivative suits, control transactions, and insider trading.

Note: For upper-level JD students, this course will be included in the Multi-Section round of registration.

Note: Makeup classes will likely be held on September 14 and 21 from 3-5pm. While it is possible that alternate makeup times will be established, students should plan to attend class on the above dates.

Exam: In Class

In addition to the final exam, there will be several quizzes throughout the semester.

This course surveys the legal rules governing corporations with an emphasis on the protection of shareholders in large public corporations against management and controlling shareholders. Topics include asset partitioning, governance (shareholder voting, fiduciary duties, derivative suits, executive compensation), M&A, securities trading, corporate finance, protections of creditors and other constituencies, and choice of law. One quarter of the course will be based on problems drawn from transactional settings. The course emphasizes financial and strategic considerations throughout.

Materials and transactional problems distributed in class.

Corporations from a Comparative Perspective

Course #: 2714 Term: 2018FA Faculty: Kraakman, Reinier Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Business Organization, Commercial Law, and Finance; International, Comparative & Foreign Law

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times: Location

Wed 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM WCC3015

Course Description: Prerequisites: Any one of the following: a prior course in corporate law, a parallel corporations course at HLS, or prior experience in matters relating to corporate governance or finance.

Exam Type: No Exam

Grading will be based on reaction memos and class participation.

This course surveys broad issues in corporate governance by highlighting jurisdictional differences and contrasting the corporation with alternative legal entities. Course materials will address issues associated with controlling shareholders and autonomous managers; the identity of dominant owners (e.g., institutional investors, family dynasties, and the state); dominant sources of finance (e.g., banks vs. markets); the public institutions that shape corporate law; the internal governance of business entities (e.g., board structure); and the influence of external actors such as activist shareholders and proxy advisors. An overarching theme in the course lies in identifying connections among particular constellations of issues -- for example, the associations between bank financing and state ownership, institutional shareholders and shareholder activism, or specialized courts and fiduciary duties. Class materials will draw from law and finance papers, press reports, and primary legal materials.

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times: Location

Mon 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM WCC3016

Course Description: Prerequisites: None

Exam Type: No Exam

This course explores the complex challenges that entrepreneurs, businesses, and other organizations face when trying to address legal issues relating to technology. The seminars approach is both practical and multidisciplinary, and it encourages students to explore the roles of a wide range of stakeholders (including lawyers, policy advocates and policymakers, businesspersons, and technologists) in developing legal and business strategies. The course draws on a rich set of case studies based on recent legal controversies (including pre-litigation correspondence, pleadings, briefs, and other litigation materials). Students also review, analyze, and critique transactional documents and other legal materials (including contracts and website terms of use and privacy policies), with an eye toward assessing legal and PR risks and protecting clients interests. Using all of these materials, the course condenses and weaves together experiences that lawyers and clients encounter day-to-day with core doctrinal and theoretical principles of relevant areas of law (including IP, speech, privacy, and the like). The class focuses particularly closely on critical and strategic thinking and analysis, complex legal and practical problem solving and decision-making, and clear and persuasive writing and drafting. At various points throughout the semester, the instructors will bring in outside specialists to enhance students understanding of the interplay between substantive and practical issues.

Cross-Registration: Cross-registrants are strongly encouraged to apply. We would like to have a diverse mix of backgrounds in our seminar this fall and have reserved seats for graduate students from other schools.

Note: Students who previously enrolled in the Practical Lawyering in Cyberspace seminar may not register for this course.

Counterterrorism and International Law

Course #: 2421 Term: 2019SP Faculty: Modirzadeh, Naz Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: International, Comparative & Foreign Law

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times: Location

Wed 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM LEW214A

Course Description: Prerequisite: Previous courses in Public International Law, International Humanitarian Law/Laws of War, Use of Force, or International Human Rights Law are strongly recommended. Exam Type: No Exam Do contemporary counterterrorism approaches fit within or frustrate existing international law? This Seminar will explore the relationships between public international law (especially use of force, international humanitarian law/law of armed conflict, and international human rights law) and the growing set of legal obligations, policies, and resources aimed at suppressing and punishing acts of terrorism. We will unpack what assumptions and normative commitments underpin counterterrorism approaches and study how those constitutive elements may be deployed in ways that can constrain or expand possible futures for international law. We will examine how, particularly after September 11, 2001, global approaches to countering terrorism may weaken or strengthen -- or disorient or redirect -- existing international legal frameworks and multilateral institutions. Readings will draw from a variety of primary sources (including terrorism-suppression treaties, United Nations Security Council resolutions, and select municipal legislative and enforcement frameworks) as well as limited secondary literature. The course will focus on real-world interpretive dilemmas, legal challenges to counterterrorism approaches, and related complex decision-making.

Criminal Justice Appellate Clinic

Course #: 8050

Term: 2019WI

Faculty: Ali, Amir

Credits: 2.00

Type: Clinic

Subject Areas: Not Applicable

Delivery Mode: Clinic

Days and Times:

Location

Course Description:

Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.

Enrollment in this clinic will fulfill the HLS JD pro bono requirement. Required Class Component: Criminal Justice Appellate Clinical Seminar (1 winter classroom credit). This clinic and course are bundled; your enrollment in this clinic will automatically enroll you in the required course.

Additional Co-/Pre-Requisites: None.

By Permission: Yes. Applications are due October 30, 2018.

Add/Drop Deadline: November 30, 2018.

LLM Students: International students on F-1 student visas are required to have Curricular Practical Training (CPT) authorization; LL.M. students are not eligible for CPT.

Placement Site: Washington D.C.

This winter-term clinic is taken concurrently with the Criminal Justice Appellate Clinical Seminar. Both the class and clinic will take place in Washington, D.C.

Students will participate in an externship with the Roderick & Solange MacArthur Justice Center (MJC) in Washington, D.C., working on appeals before federal circuit courts and/or the U.S. Supreme Court that raise important issues related to civil rights and the criminal justice system.

Students will learn the ins-and-outs of litigating appeals in the field criminal justice, including general appellate strategy and skills, and emerging issues in the criminal justice system. Under the supervision of the director of MJC's D.C. Office, students will have the opportunity to make a substantial contribution to the office's ongoing appellate cases, including performing research and draft legal analysis for briefs that will be filed in federal court. Depending on the particular matters students work on, this may also include participation in client interaction and strategic decision-making, analysis of factual records, and participation in moot oral arguments (depending upon the stage of their assigned appeals). Students will also have the option of continuing the clinic remotely in the spring semester, allowing more substantial involvement in their assigned appeals and increased exposure to appellate litigation.

MJC is one of the nation's premier civil rights organizations and champions criminal justice reform through litigation, in areas that include police misconduct, rights of the accused, issues facing indigent prisoners, the death penalty, and the rights of detainees. The organization's Washington, D.C. office focuses specifically on appellate litigation as a vehicle for achieving change in these areas. Examples of issues raised in MJC appeals include:

Unsettled questions of criminal procedure under the Fourth, Fifth, and Sixth Amendments (search & seizure, privilege against self-incrimination, right to a jury, right to counsel);

Issues facing indigent prisoners, including the constitutional rights of prisoners to be free from cruel and unusual treatment by prison officials and access to courts;

Constitutional challenges to the use of solitary confinement in the prison system;

Fundamental trial rights under the Due Process Clause, including issues unique to capital trials;

Challenges to certain discriminatory executive actions outside of the criminal justice system, including discriminatory practices of Immigrations and Custom Enforcement and discrimination against Muslim travelers at the border.

Students admitted to the clinic will be supervised by Amir H. Ali, founder of MJC's Washington, D.C. office, who serves as the organization's Supreme Court & Appellate Counsel.

Application:

Students interested in this clinic should submit a resume, an unedited writing sample, and a statement of

Open to 3Ls only
Required Class Component: Criminal Justice Institute: Defense Theory and Practice (3 fall classroom credits + 1 winter classroom credit). This clinic and course are bundled; your enrollment in the clinic will automatically enroll you in this required course.
Additional Co-/Pre-Requisites: Trial Advocacy Workshop (TAW) and Evidence. Students must enroll in both classes separately from the clinic enrollment. Failure to meet the pre/co-requisites by the clinics add/drop deadline will result in the student being dropped from this clinic and class.
By Permission: No.
Add/Drop Deadline: Please note this clinic has an early drop deadline of August 28, 2018.
LLM Students: This clinic is not available to LLM students.
Multi-Semester: This is a winter-spring clinic (1 winter clinical credit + 5 spring clinical credits).
Placement Site: HLS.
Mandatory Meetings: All students enrolled in the clinic (Fall-Winter and Winter-Spring) must attend mandatory orientation sessions (times indicated below) on Wednesday, September 26, Thursday, September 27 AND Friday, September 28, 2018. Additionally, each student is required to attend (as assigned) one day of court observation followed by a facility tour, which will be held on Monday (Sept. 24) or Tuesday (Sept. 25). Students will examine the nature, functions, dynamics, and ethics of such tasks as interviewing, investigation, examination and cross-examination of witnesses, argument, and other aspects of criminal defense advocacy, both in and out of the courtroom. They will also examine the theory and practice of defense advocacy for minors accused of delinquency, focusing on the constitutional framework of the juvenile justice system. Students will study the Massachusetts juvenile courts, examining the history and philosophy of a separate juvenile system, juvenile court jurisdiction, and the impact of various state agencies on the administration of justice in juvenile court. The class component will attempt to develop a variety of operational and ethical frameworks within which students can understand and evaluate their practice experience. Students can expect to represent clients on criminal and juvenile delinquency cases in the local courts. In the course of representing clients, students may be required to visit correctional institutions, which necessitate a background check. They may also provide representation to minors in school disciplinary hearings or represent adult clients in appellate or other post-conviction legal proceedings. Students will be responsible for providing complete legal representation to their clients during the course of the term and are expected to work a minimum of twenty hours per week at the Criminal Justice Institute under the supervision of a clinical instructor at the Institute. Students will receive one-to-one supervision, individual critique of their courtroom work, and participate in regular group sessions with their supervisor. Classroom reading and discussion will draw upon and complement the students experiences as defense counsel. The teaching method will include exercises and discussions on the Code of Professional Responsibility and the Model Rules of Professional Responsibility. Students will become familiar with the Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, and Fourteenth Amendment rights of both adults and juveniles accused of delinquency, as well as the law of evidence and sentencing. There will be a review of essential lawyering skills in criminal practice. The clinic and class will start the week after Fall TAW, September 24 - September 28, 2018. During this first week, all students must attend a number of mandatory orientation sessions. Each student is required to attend (as assigned) one day of court observation followed by a facility tour, which will be held on Monday (Sept. 24) or Tuesday (Sept. 25) from Each student is required to attend (as assigned) one day of court observation followed by a facility tour, which will be held on Monday (Sept. 24) or Tuesday (Sept. 25) from 8:45 AM - 3:00 PM. Additionally, all students must attend the mandatory orientation sessions on Wednesday (Sept. 26) from 12:00 PM - 5:00 PM, Thursday (Sept. 27) from 2:00 PM - 5:00 PM, as well as on Friday (Sept. 28) from 9:00 AM - 2:00 PM. Starting this first week and throughout the Fall, class will meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM. During the Winter, class will meet on Wednesdays and Thursdays from 12:00 PM - 2:00 PM. There will be a mandatory orientation session on Thursday, January 3, 2019, for students enrolled in the Winter/Spring clinic. Arraignments for those enrolled in the fall-winter clinic will be held during the month of October. Those enrolled in the winter-spring clinic will be attending arraignments during the month of January. All students must have at least one morning available for court, Monday through Thursday. Juvenile cases are heard only on Mondays, Tuesdays, and Wednesdays. Students enrolled in the fall-winter clinic will submit a reflection paper in mid-January. Those enrolled in the winter-spring clinic will be submitting their paper the first week of May. This course satisfies the professional responsibility requirement.

Criminal Justice Workshop

Course #: 2314 Term: 2019SP Faculty: Lanni, Adriaan; Crespo, Andrew Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Constitutional Law & Civil Rights; Criminal Law & Procedure; Human Rights; Procedure & Practice

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times: Location

Wed 3:00 PM - 5:00 PM LEW214A

Course Description: Prerequisites: Enrollment by written application to the professors; limited to 20. JD and LLM applicants should submit a short (not more than a page) statement of interest to Professor Lanni's assistant, jminnich@law.harvard.edu by October 11th.
Exam: No Exam
This seminar is geared toward students interested in reading and discussing legal scholarship on issues related to criminal justice and will be especially useful to students interested in pursuing careers in legal academia in the broad field(s) of criminal justice. Weekly seminars will alternate between discussion based on assigned readings and workshops in which criminal justice scholars of varying methodologies will be invited by the professors to present their work to the seminar for discussion (and other members of the community will be invited to attend, as well). Students will be expected to write short weekly response papers.

Tue 10:20 AM - 11:40 AM	WCC1019

Course Description: Exam Type: In Class

This course considers the basic themes of substantive criminal law, including criminal responsibility, the significance of act, intent, causation and result, justification and excuse, and the rationales for punishment. General doctrinal principles of the criminal law and illustrative crimes are studied, including attempts, conspiracy, and the law of accomplice liability, defenses such as self-defense and insanity, and aspects of the law of homicide and rape. The course also considers some important issues in the administration of the criminal justice system, with special emphasis on the phenomenon of discretion. The rationales for allowing discretion, the proper scope of discretion, and the practical effects of discretion are examined in the context of particular institutional actors, with focus on prosecutorial charging discretion, the practice of plea bargaining, and current debates about sentencing discretion. The focus is not on criminal procedure in the conventional sense, but rather on the quintessentially substantive problem of understanding the criteria by which culpability and punishment are actually determined in the contemporary American criminal justice system.

Crimmigration Clinic

Course #: 8043 Term: 2018FA Faculty: Torrey, Philip Credits: 3.00

Type: Clinic Subject Areas: Not Applicable

Delivery Mode: Clinic

Days and Times: Location

Course Description: Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.
Enrollment in this clinic will fulfill the HLS JD pro bono requirement.
Required Class Component: Crimmigration: The Intersection of Criminal Law and Immigration Law (2 fall classroom credits). Students who are accepted into this clinic will be enrolled in the required clinical course component by the Office of Clinical and Pro Bono Programs.
Additional Co-/Pre-Requisites: No.
By Permission: Yes - applications are due by August 15, 2018.
Add/Drop Deadline: August 28, 2018.
LLM Students: LLM students may apply to this clinic by submitting an application.
Placement Site: HLS.
In the Crimmigration Clinic students work on cutting-edge issues regarding the intersection of criminal law and immigration law. The content of the clinical projects will depend on the legal landscape and political climate at the time of clinical enrollment. In the past, students have worked on federal litigation concerning criminal bars to immigration relief, detention, and the crime-based grounds of removal. Students have also developed practice guidance for public defender offices around the country, and engaged in legislative advocacy on issues related to sanctuary policies. Clinical students will also work with the Harvard Criminal Justice Institute to provide advice to their case teams about the immigration consequences of potential criminal convictions.
Clinical work will largely be performed at HLS, under the supervision of Lecturer on Law and HIRC Managing Attorney Phil Torrey. On litigation and policy matters, the Clinic will collaborate with non-profit organizations, such as the the National Immigration Project of the National Lawyers Guild and the Immigrant Defense Project, which specialize in crimmigration-related litigation and policy initiatives.
Enrollment in the Crimmigration Clinic is by application only (applications are due to Phil Torrey - ptorrey@law.harvard.edu). Students should include a resume and short statement of interest (250 words or less) in their application. Applications are due by August 15th, 2018. Application decisions will be communicated to students by August 20th. Once accepted, students will work with the Office of Clinical and Pro Bono Programs to finalize their registrations.

Crimmigration: The Intersection of Criminal Law and Immigration Law

Course #: 2597 Term: 2018FA Faculty: Torrey, Philip Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Criminal Law & Procedure; Human Rights; International, Comparative & Foreign Law

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times: Location

Tue 1:10 PM - 3:10 PM WCC3018

Course Description: Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: In Class

The intersection of criminal law and immigration law is a growing field of law that is at the forefront of today's immigration debate. As immigration laws have become more "criminalized" and criminal laws have become more "immigrationized" it is increasingly important for immigration attorneys and criminal law attorneys alike to understand the immigration consequences of criminal convictions and the myriad ways in which these two areas of law intersect. The goal of this course is to give students the skills to recognize and examine immigration consequences of criminal convictions and to analyze how those laws have developed in light of historical trends related to immigration detention, border security, race, poverty, and national security.

Some seats in this course are reserved for students in the fall Crimmigration Clinic. Students who enroll in this course under a clinical seat have an early drop deadline of August 28, 2018. For more information, please view the clinic's Course Catalog description.

Critical Race Theory

Course #: 2279 Term: 2019SP Faculty: Mack, Kenneth Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Constitutional Law & Civil Rights; Legal & Political Theory

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times: Location

Mon 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM HAU102

Course Description: Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: No Exam

This course will consider one of the newest intellectual currents within American Legal Theory -- Critical Race Theory. Emerging during the 1980s, critical race scholars made many controversial claims about law and legal education -- among them that race and racial inequality suffused American law and society, that structural racial subordination remained endemic, and that both liberal and critical legal theories marginalized the voices of racial minorities. Course readings will be taken from both classic works of Critical Race Theory and newer interventions in the field, as well as scholarship criticizing or otherwise engaging with Critical Race Theory from outside or at the margins of the field.

Exam Type: No Exam

In today's economy, transactions are becoming increasingly global in nature, often crossing more than one border and implicating the laws and market practices of more than one jurisdiction. Cross-border transactions present unique challenges from both the seller's and buyer's perspective that require an in-depth understanding and appreciation of the key practical and theoretical issues they present. This course will familiarize students with these types of transactions and the unique challenges they present in order to aid them in their transition into the practice of modern-day corporate counsel.

This semester-long course will be divided into three segments. The first segment will consist of four sessions structured as interactive lectures focused on the fundamentals of cross-border M&A transactions, the unique cultural and state challenges they present, basic finance and the basics of an organized sales process. The second segment will consist of five sessions in which students will participate as parties to a transaction and engage in a simulated auction process for the sale of a business division of an international company with a diverse pool of potential buyers. Student groups will negotiate the material aspects of the transaction and mark-up an auction draft purchase agreement. The third segment will consist of three classes where each of the student teams will be asked to present their final proposals to a simulated board of directors by providing their board with an overview of the final purchase agreement, key terms of the transaction, and an explanation of the risks and benefits associated with the negotiated terms.

This course is designed for students interested in transactional work and those with a desire to understand the real-world implications of today's global economy.

Note: There will be one make-up session scheduled on Wednesday, February 13, 2019 from 7pm to 10pm.

Fri 9:00 AM - 12:15 PM	WCC1010

Course Description: Prerequisites: None. This course is designed for students with and without prior programming experience.

Exam Type: No Exam

Educational Objectives
This course is a variant of Harvard College's introduction to computer science, CS50, designed especially for law students. Whereas CS50 itself takes a bottom-up approach, emphasizing mastery of low-level concepts and implementation details thereof, this course takes a top-down approach, emphasizing mastery of high-level concepts and design decisions related thereto. Ultimately, it equips students with a deeper understanding of the legal implications of technological decisions made by clients.

Through a mix of technical instruction and discussion of case studies, this course empowers students to be informed contributors to technology-driven conversations. In addition, it prepares students to formulate technology-informed legal arguments and opinions. Along the way, it equips students with hands-on experience with Python and SQL, languages via which they can mine data for answers themselves.

Topics include algorithms, cloud computing, databases, networking, privacy, programming, scalability, security, and more, with a particular emphasis on understanding how the work developers do and the technological solutions they employ may impact clients. Students emerge from this course with first-hand appreciation of how it all works and all the more confident in the factors that should guide their decision-making.

Audience
This course is designed for future attorneys who expect to work closely with and advise decision-makers on legal matters that impact or intersect with technology.

The Internet has changed the world of business, commerce, communication, and also crime. The borderless nature of the Internet has complicated the investigation and enforcement of cybercrime. Each day brings news of a new cyberattack on a company, a government entity, and even, perhaps, on the very foundations of our democracy. Meanwhile, new technologies seem to create new ways of committing crimes almost as rapidly as they create new legitimate business opportunities. Neither law enforcement nor businesses have a good idea how to respond.

Substantive criminal law and criminal procedure are straining to catch up with this rapidly evolving criminal landscape. The ability of criminals to operate nearly anonymously and across multiple jurisdictions creates new challenges for judges, prosecutors, defense attorneys, and crime victims. At the same time, new cyber tools and techniques are coming into play that might be used to track cyber criminals, but the constitutionality and privacy implications of these tools are subject to question. This course will explore, among other questions: In what ways does the cross border nature of cybercrime impact legal practice? What are the unique legal barriers to prosecuting cybercrime? What constitutional protections attach to people or data abroad? What international issues arise from the different legal and cultural approaches to privacy and security in different jurisdiction?

In addition to examining the case law and statutory framework, the class will include case studies drawn from my experience as a US federal prosecutor and as an international data breach investigator and lawyer as well as from recent public examples to teach practice and policy in the area.

This course will be of interest to future prosecutors, defense lawyers and criminal justice policymakers.

Course #: 2445 Term: 2019SP Faculty: Subramanian, Guhan Credits: 4.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Business Organization, Commercial Law, and Finance; Procedure & Practice

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times: Location

Mon 1:15 PM - 3:15 PM

Tue 1:15 PM - 3:15 PM

Course Description: Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.
Prerequisite: For JD students, you must have completed Corporations prior to enrolling in this course, and you must have completed or be concurrently enrolled in the Negotiation Workshop. For JD students unable to take Negotiation, contact Dahnie Tran (dtran@law.harvard.edu) to inquire about waiving that prerequisite.

For LLM students, Corporations or its equivalent is a prerequisite, and the Negotiation Workshop is highly recommended.

Exam Type: No Exam

Evaluation will be on the basis of class participation and deal presentation.

This advanced negotiation course examines complex corporate deals. Many of the class sessions will be structured around recent or ongoing deals, selected for the complex issues of law and business that they raise. Student teams will research and analyze these transactions in order to present their most important aspects and lessons to the class. For many of these presentations (as well as some more traditional case studies and exercises), the lawyers, bankers, and/or business principals who participated in the transaction under discussion will attend class, listen to the teams assessment, provide their perspectives, and suggest broader negotiation insights.

Topics developed throughout the course include: how negotiators create and claim value through the setup, design, and tactical implementation of agreements; complexities that can arise through agency, asymmetric information, moral hazard, and adverse selection; structural, psychological, and interpersonal barriers that can hinder agreement; and the particular challenges inherent in the roles of advisors as negotiators. The course will also explore the differences between deal-making and dispute resolution; single-issue and multiple-issue negotiations; and between two parties and multiple parties.

This course is jointly-listed with HBS. The class will be compromised of approximately an equal number of students from HBS and HLS.

Note: This course is held on the HBS campus, with the exception of three meetings. On 2/18 & 4/15 from 1:15-3:15, and on 3/28 from 7-9pm, class will be held at HLS in WCC B015.

Democracy and the Rule of Law Clinic

Course #: 8049 Term: 2019SP Faculty: Florence, Justin; Schwartztol, Larry Credits: 5.00

Type: Clinic Subject Areas: Legal & Political Theory

Delivery Mode: Clinic

Days and Times: Location

Course Description: Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.
Enrollment in this clinic will fulfill the HLS JD pro bono requirement.
Required Class Component: Legal Tools for Protecting Democracy and the Rule of Law in America (2 spring classroom credits). The clinic and course are bundled; your enrollment in the clinic will automatically enroll you in this required course.

Additional Co-/Pre-Requisites: None.

By Permission: No.

Add/Drop Deadline: January 11, 2019.

LLM Students: International students on F-1 student visas are required to have Curricular Practical Training (CPT) authorization; LL.M. students are not eligible for CPT.

Placement Site: Students will participate in an externship with The Protect Democracy Project, a nonpartisan nonprofit founded by former White House and Department of Justice attorneys and dedicated to holding the President and the Executive Branch accountable to the laws and longstanding practices that have protected our democracy through both Democratic and Republican Administrations. Most clinical work will be done remotely, although there may be opportunities for travel to Washington, D.C.

Students in the Democracy and the Rule of Law Clinic will work with The Protect Democracy Project ("Protect Democracy") to safeguard the key features of a democratic society through litigation and other means. The Clinic will focus on issues such as ensuring the impartial application of the rule of law; safeguarding healthy civic institutions that allow for public participation in political debate; prohibiting official corruption; and challenging government if it targets certain people or groups in our society.

Specific topics and projects will be determined by enrolled students in conjunction with the clinic leaders and other attorneys at Protect Democracy. Students will be divided into small teams, and each team will help to develop and manage at least one (and, more likely, several) projects. Some examples of such projects include:

Developing litigation memoranda setting forth proposed legal theories and possible causes of action, and assessing approaches to overcome justiciability barriers.

Identifying potential plaintiffs for litigation and selecting optimal jurisdictions.

Drafting complaints, preliminary injunction motions, dispositive motions and other briefs.

Assisting with discovery, including document requests and deposition planning.

Assisting with appellate briefing.

Drafting amicus briefs, white papers, op-eds, blog posts, and letters or memoranda to government officials.

Participating in moot courts and assisting counsel with preparation for oral arguments.

Democracy, the Incomplete Experiment

Course #: 2485 Term: 2019SP Faculty: Robinson, Stephanie Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Constitutional Law & Civil Rights; Government Structure & Function

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times: Location

Tue 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM WCC5052

Course Description: Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: No Exam

This course interrogates the ways in which democracy, as practiced in the United States, continues to form. In doing so, it explores provocative themes and questions of citizenship, self-governance, accountability and inclusion in American democracy while grappling with issues of race, class and gender. It moves beyond limited representations of democratization as the quest for universal suffrage and fair elections to a more fluid, real-time construct of competing interests, negotiated outcomes, stressed and malleable institutions, and tumultuous changes. It further clarifies the democratic process as one subject to ongoing interpretation, challenge and renewal.

Delivery Mode: Reading Group

Days and Times: Location

Mon 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM

Course Description: Location: This class will meet in Austin 102.

Prerequisite: Enrollment is limited to 12 students and is by permission of the instructor. A prior course in Islamic Law is helpful, but not necessary. Interested students should email Professor Rabb (irabb@law.harvard.edu): (1) a resume, (2) a two-paragraph statement of interest that details (a) any prior background or familiarity with Islamic law, and (b) the proposed topic(s) or sources for four short essays on primary sources of legislation, judicial decisions, or other historical and contemporary legal documents from the Muslim world. All applications for current students are due August 1, 2018. Additional slots will be open in the fall, for which applications are due September 4, 2018. Students will be notified after this date of their status in this course.

Exam Type: No Exam

This course provides an opportunity for students interested in assessing the way Islamic law functions in contemporary and historical contexts to work on discrete research projects in a collaborative, interactive setting. Students will select one or more topics in legislation and interpretation in a Muslim-majority or Muslim-minority country to explore during the semester. Typical research areas may include (but are not limited to) issues of Islamic criminal law, family law, and comparative constitutional law. We will meet six times over the course of the semester, and will schedule tailored library-research sessions and a short tutorial for uploading materials onto an online blog. Students will be evaluate on the basis of four short papers (500-1000 words), to be published as individual posts with accompanying primary sources used on the online portal or blog for SHARIAsource.com-a portal for content and context on Islamic law. The sources and analysis for the site are modeled on an Islamic-law version of WestLaw and SCOTUSblog. Students will also have opportunities to track online debates, engage with leading scholars in the field, and identify new developments and sources for Islamic law related to their chosen research projects.

Note: This reading group will meet on the following dates: 9/17, 9/24, 10/1, 10/15, 10/29, 11/12

Exam Type: No Exam

According to World Bank estimates, persons with disabilities comprise 15% of the global population, or an estimated one billion individuals. Nevertheless, until the adoption of the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (CRPD), the worlds largest minority group was largely excluded from global human rights protection (e.g., UN human rights treaty work), global initiatives (notably the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs)), and national level law and policy programming with the majority of States having uncoordinated health or social welfare initiatives. The CRPD has now been ratified by 172 States, making it the fastest ratified human rights treaty. Meanwhile, the MDGs successor program, the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) were adopted by consensus at the UN in 2016 and require the inclusion of persons with disabilities in their social transformation mandate. In consequence of these global schemes, States are struggling to develop coordinated and efficient national level programming for their disabled populations, until-now their typically neglected yet largest minority group. This course examines how States develop national level programming to include persons with disabilities across a variety of sectors including health, education, employment, community inclusion, and social welfare and development. Throughout the course we will examine critically the tension between human rights and their aspiration of full human flourishing and the constraints placed upon States by resource and other limitations. The instructor participated in the negotiation of the CRPD and has since been involved in disability law, policy, and development initiatives in some three dozen countries. He has also been consulted by UN agencies on the SDGs, and will draw on these experiences when analyzing how States respond to their legal and policy obligations.

Course #: 2059 Term: 2019SP Faculty: Viscomi, Rachel Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: International, Comparative & Foreign Law; Legal Profession, Legal Ethics & Professional Responsibility; Procedure & Practice

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times: Location

Tue 1:10 PM - 3:10 PM WCC3019

Course Description: Prerequisite: For JD students, the Negotiation Workshop is required to enroll.

There is no prerequisite for LLM students.

Exam Type: No Exam

Lawyers are often called upon to help design systems for managing and/or resolving conflicts that support or supplant existing legal structures. Implicitly or explicitly, every institution and organization has a system for managing disputes. In some cases, the system may be formal, with administrative hearings, courts, tribunals, and complex appeal and review processes. In other cases, organizations may have few if any formal means for managing conflict. In these instances, conflicts may either be handled through informal negotiation and mediation or by ignoring it altogether. As individuals, institutions, organizations, and nations become more aware of the ever-rising cost of conflict (in economic, relational, and human terms), many are seeking to design and implement systems to manage disputes with greater effectiveness and efficiency. Though lawyers have traditionally been viewed primarily as advocates who resolve already-ripened disputes through litigation and negotiation, a growing interest in more efficient and tailored approaches to conflict management has highlighted the special opportunity for lawyers to serve as creative "dispute process architects." This seminar will introduce students to the theory and promise of dispute systems design with an aim to train students to play this new and more creative professional role. After an overview of various dispute resolution processes and a thorough introduction to the basics of dispute systems design, the course will offer for analysis several domestic and international case studies of dispute systems design in practice. These may include an examination of cross-border e-commerce, university harassment policies, transitional justice programs and truth commissions in the aftermath of atrocities, and institutional integrated conflict management systems in U.S. organizations.

15 seats are reserved for students enrolled in the spring Negotiation and Mediation Clinic. A student's enrollment in a reserved clinical seat is dependent on the student's enrollment in the spring Negotiation and Mediation Clinic. There will be no final exam or research paper -- instead, students will write a 300-500 word reading response for each day of class, except for the final class, for which the reading response is 600-1,000 words.

In this course, we will examine the ways in which various types of diversity -- such as class, culture, disability, ethnicity, gender, race, religion, and sexual orientation -- impact the way we negotiate and resolve conflict, including the effects of intersectionality and privilege. Although the main focus of the class will be on readings and discussion, we will also use experiential exercises, including role plays, to enhance our personal understanding of how diversity affects our experience of conflict and our ability to manage difficult conversations involving identity and diversity.

Teaching Assistant Rabiya Akande (who is an S.J.D. candidate at HLS) will participate as a co-leader of discussions.

Readings will include excerpts from Mahzarin Banaji, Ta-Nehisi Coates, Kim Crenshaw, Richard Delgado, Carol Gilligan, Trina Grillo, Michele LeBaron, Carol Liebman, Larry Susskind, and Kenji Yoshino.

Course Description: Prerequisites: None

Exam Type: Any Day Take-Home

Class participation (10%); short mid-term "bench memorandum" in mid-October (40%); final exam (open book) in November (50%).

More product liability lawsuits are filed against prescription drug manufacturers than against all other industries combined. As one scholar put it, the pharmaceutical industry is now "in tobacco-land in terms of how much people hate it," and drug product liability litigation is a "growth industry." This course, which will be taught by a practitioner with 25 years of experience trying such cases, will consider the theory and practice of such litigation before and after the Supreme Courts landmark decision in Wyeth v. Levine.

At the outset, we will focus on the similarities and differences between pharma cases and other product liability cases, using the "Phen-Fen" (Diet Drug) cases tried by the instructor as a model, and on the special context of FDA regulation. We will then consider the legal doctrines governing such lawsuits, such as "failure to test"; inadequate warning; learned intermediary; medical causation; and various forms of damages. We will discuss these issues both in their classic formulations in a single lawsuit, but also in the way those principles are applied in the context of a mass pharmaceutical litigation where there may be several thousand individual claimants and multiple jury trials.

The course will also consider the practical application of these doctrines, including the special evidentiary problems when doctors are witnesses; discovery tactics where regulatory agencies are involved; techniques to present complex scientific material to juries; approaches to trial examination; jury selection strategies; and the problems in structuring mass tort settlements. Again, we will review both the legal principles governing these issues and the way they are often mutated in the context of mass claims and trials.

Note: The two-credit version of the course will meet on the following dates: Sept. 4, 5, 11, 12, 25, 26; October 2, 3, 10, 17, 24, 31; and Nov. 6. In each of these classes, we will discuss the legal and scientific materials governing those doctrinal and practical issues in this type of litigation.

There is also a three-credit version of this course. You can view the details under a separate offering in the course catalog.

Note: There is also a two-credit version of this course. See the description in the course catalog. The three-credit version of the course will include all of the classes and materials in the two-credit version. In addition, the 15 students who elect to take the three-credit version will review, in detail, the transcript of an actual trial of a drug product liability case. They will then each prepare a 4-5 page (with Powerpoints) section of competing statements they will present, in teams, to a jury composed of Cambridge residents (not members of the HLS community). The jurors, in turn, will provide their reactions, much as the jury research most sophisticated practitioners conduct prior to major product liability actions. The three-credit version will include additional class time to work as a team on the presentation. The presentation to the jurors will be a final (3 hour) class.

The three-credit version of the course will meet on the following dates: Sept. 4, 5, 11, 12, 25, 26; October 2, 3, 10, 17, 24, 31,; and Nov. 6, 13.

What effects does law have? Do corporations pollute less, market safer products, and adhere more often to their contractual obligations in order to avoid suit? Is innovation spurred by intellectual property rights? Are individuals led to comply with the tax rules, drive more carefully, and commit fewer crimes by the prospect of sanctions for wrong doing?

Such questions about the influence of legal rules on outcomes––and about the social desirability of the outcomes––have been investigated by legal scholars and economists in a systematic manner since the 1970s. Their approach is widely considered to be intellectually important and to be of significant value in practice.

This course will survey the field of economic analysis of law and illustrate its relevance to judicial decisions, legal argument, expert witness work, and public policy. The subjects covered are the major building blocks of law: torts, contracts, property law, criminal law, and the legal process.

The course will also address the tension between functional, economic arguments and those phrased in moral terms. The course is aimed at a general audience of students; no background in economics is needed to take it.

Education Advocacy and Systemic Change

Course #: 2063 Term: 2018FA Faculty: Cole, Susan Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Family, Gender & Children's Law

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times: Location

Thu 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM WCC5050

Course Description: Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.
Required Clinic Component: Education Law Clinic: Externships (3-5 fall clinical credits). This clinic and course are bundled; your enrollment in the clinic will automatically enroll you in this required course.
Additional Co-/Pre-Requisites: None.
By Permission: No.
Add/Drop Deadline: Please note this clinic has an early drop deadline of August 3, 2018.
LLM Students: International students on F-1 student visas are required to have Curricular Practical Training (CPT) authorization; LL.M. students are not eligible for CPT.

Exam type: No Exam. Each student will present a rounds presentation on a relevant topic in system change legal work.

Grading for this course will be based on active involvement and preparation for class discussions and a final student rounds presentation on a topic related to the student's externship work and the role it plays in the organization's system change effort.

This course will explore a model of system change in education law that involves stakeholders in identifying system problems, understanding their complexity, understanding solutions, and choosing from a variety of strategies to bring about needed improvements in the educational system. The class will focus on pro-active aspects of system change lawyering, that is, the point in time when lawyers and affected stakeholders have identified a problem and must delve into the complex work of determining what solutions will bring about effective change.

Overarching learning goals include: 1) preparing students interested in system change in education to analyze the theory of change operating in the organizations and agencies in which they work 2) introducing students to the process of engaging with affected stakeholders to build consensus around the most effective solutions to complex problems; and 3) exploring the array of strategies that lawyers can use to achieve the sought after solutions.

We will apply this model of change to each of the organizations in which students are placed with an eye towards understanding how the students' work not only fits into the overall system change goals of their organizations but also responds to the broader concerns of the organizations' stakeholders. Additionally, we will learn from examples of past system change legal efforts, including those that sought to enforce rights in existence and those that turned to the legislature or public opinion to create new rights. Guest speakers will discuss their work with the class, addressing topics such as the role of politics and media, the level and type of community involvement, the legal rights available at the time decisions were made, what went into the decision of which strategy to choose for addressing the problem. Readings will include original sources, theories of organizational change, and doctrinal background to the system change efforts we explore.

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times:	Location

Tue 1:40 PM - 3:10 PM	LEW214A

Course Description: Prerequisites: None

Exam Type: No Exam

This course will survey several contemporary legal and policy issues in American elementary and secondary education, which may include school finance litigation; school discipline and the rise of "Zero Tolerance" policies; school culture and school climate; bullying prevention and intervention; testing, accountability and the Every Student Succeeds Act (ESSA); special education and bilingual education; the (re)segregation of historically disadvantaged groups; and the school choice movement; among others. To help us understand these current education reform problems, we will consider the role that a variety of legal doctrines (e.g., the First Amendment, the Due Process Clause, compulsory education laws, federal civil rights laws, state constitutions, etc.) plays in shaping the structure and process of public education. We will also read and discuss non-legal texts of various kinds by educators, journalists, sociologists and others. We will trace the rise of the so-called Global Education Reform Movement (GERM) -- and its associated focus on accountability, measurement, top-down management and market-based solutions -- and consider its impact on U.S. public education. We will use tools from Critical Race Theory (CRT), feminist theory, disability studies, trauma theory, and other intellectual traditions to help us understand the current challenges faced by American public education. Several recurring themes and questions will guide our analysis, including: How should the law allocate authority for deciding how children should be educated and what they should learn? What constitutes equal educational opportunity and what measures should we use to determine whether or not it exists? Similarly, how should we measure student achievement and remedy gaps that exist between the achievement levels of various subgroups? How does education policy get made and what role can and should law and lawyers play in designing solutions to problems in education policy? We will consider how courts, legislatures and other stakeholders have answered these questions and how their answers have been shaped by competing ideological narratives about the necessary and appropriate role of public education in a democracy. Class participation will be part of the grade for this course as will a research project that will be assigned at the beginning of the semester. There is no final examination in this course.

Education Law Clinic: Externships

Type: Clinic Subject Areas: Family, Gender & Children's Law; Government Structure & Function; Procedure & Practice

Delivery Mode: Clinic

Days and Times: Location

Course Description: Enrollment in this clinic will fulfill the HLS JD pro bono requirement.Required Class Component: Education Advocacy and Systemic Change (2 fall classroom credits). This clinic and course are bundled; your enrollment in this clinic will automatically enroll you in the required course.
Additional Co-/Pre-Requisites: None.
By Permission: No.
Add/Drop Deadline: Please note that this clinic has an early drop deadline of August 3, 2018.
LLM Students: International students on F-1 student visas are required to have Curricular Practical Training (CPT) authorization; LL.M. students are not eligible for CPT.
Placement Site: Various externship placements.
The Education Law Clinic: Externships focuses on the educational rights of students with an emphasis on the educational success of at-risk, low income students, particularly those who have been traumatized by exposure to adverse experiences, have disabilities, have been or are homeless, or have experienced other barriers to success such as the achievement gap, bullying (including cyberbullying), truancy, suspensions and expulsions. Many are caught in the school to jail pipeline. Law students will intern with organizations that are addressing these issues. Each student will be placed in either a non-profit organization (such as Massachusetts Advocates for Children, EdLaw Project) or a government agency (such as the Massachusetts Department of Elementary and Secondary Education, Attorney Generals office, the Bureau of Special Education Appeals).
Placements: Students who enroll in this clinic will be contacted by Liz Solar in the Office of Clinical and Pro Bono Programs to begin the placement process of matching students with externship organizations. Some of the placement organizations ask for a minimum of 15 hours of work. The concurrent course will provide time to reflect upon each students clinical experience and place the work they and their organization are doing to engage in the process of system change.
This is an externship clinic. Students must have at least one full business day available in their schedule to work on-site at their placement organization. Any remaining clinical hours should be worked in blocks of at least 5 hours. Most placement organizations are open Monday-Friday from 9am-5pm.

Placement Site: HLS.

Students must attend a mandatory orientation session on Friday, September 7, 2018 from 1:00-4:00 PM. The Education Law Clinic engages students in individual special education advocacy and systemic change projects to advance the school success of children who have endured highly adverse childhood experiences. Students use the legal tools contained in the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), McKinney Vento Homeless Assistance Act, Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1972, federal and state statutes regarding confidentiality and other laws to advocate for individual remedies that will enable their clients children to succeed in school. Students will utilize research from psychology, neurobiology, and education about the effects of trauma on learning and behavior as part of their representation. Depending on the posture of the cases in the clinic, students will represent clients either at the first administrative hearing level -- the team meeting -- or at the administrative appeal level -- the Bureau of Special Education Appeals. Past students have made enormous differences in the lives of children by reversing school exclusions and obtaining needed supports for individual children at school. Though the major focus of students clinic work will be direct client representation, students will also engage in a smaller systemic project that furthers TLPs broader mission. Student systemic work has included setting up a legislative briefing at the MA state house on the impact of trauma on learning; presentations to expert evaluators and to child welfare attorneys on the laws regarding special education; setting up a domestic violence outreach project at shelters across the state; and participating in a legislative campaign to make school-wide environments Safe and Supportive.

The Education Law Clinic is part of the Trauma and Learning Policy Initiative (TLPI), a collaboration between HLS and Massachusetts Advocates for Children, the mission of which is to ensure that all children traumatized by exposure to violence and other adverse childhood experiences succeed in school. The clinics direct legal representation of individual families is a key strategy in TLPs ongoing multi-strategic advocacy campaign to create safe and supportive school environments where all students can learn.

Emerging Issues in Refugee Protection: The Representation of Child Asylum Seekers

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Constitutional Law & Civil Rights; Family, Gender & Children's Law; Human Rights; International, Comparative & Foreign Law; Regulatory Law

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times: Location

Mon 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM WCC3015

Course Description: Prerequisites: Prior exposure to asylum or immigration law is helpful but not required.

Exam Type: No Exam

According to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), children, including those who are unaccompanied by an adult, comprise 51% of the total global refugee population. In recent years, the U.S. government has recorded a dramatic rise in apprehensions of children fleeing from the Northern Triangle (Guatemala, Honduras, and El Salvador) to the United States: 46,893 in FY 2016, compared with 3,933 in FY 2011. Most recent reports show a 17% increase in apprehensions of this population in the first five months of 2017 over the comparable period in 2016. A central reason for this flight is the rise of powerful "maras" or gangs, which focus much of their violence on young people whom they seek to recruit into their ranks.

Like all refugees, childrens claims to legal protection are primarily governed by the 1951 UN Refugee Convention and the 1967 Protocol Relating to the Status of Refugees to which the United States is a party, as well as the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Right. The Convention on the Rights of the Child is particularly salient, interpreted as creating a childs rights framework in approaching these claims.

Children flee violence and persecution for reasons similar to adults, but also for other reasons that are unique to their status and experiences as children. Childrens claims to refugee protection must be evaluated in light of their age and special circumstances. UNHCR and U.S. asylum guidelines recognize that the key term "persecution" in the definition of refugee may be interpreted differently in the case of children, with heightened consideration of trauma, emotional harm and the vicarious experience of harm to family members. Children have unique emotional vulnerabilities as well as cognitive and developmental differences from adults that must be considered in evaluating their testimony. Such testimony is the key evidence presented in any asylum claim.

This seminar will focus on the growing body of domestic and international law governing the rights of children to special consideration in the refugee determination process. It will focus especially on the innovative ways in which childrens claims have been structured to meet the Refugee Conventions criteria. It will draw from cases decided by U.S. administrative bodies and courts, and will also reference the jurisprudence of other states parties to the Refugee Convention and international tribunals. The course will draw upon case work of the Harvard Immigration and Refugee Clinical Program (HIRC) , including key U.S. precedents established by the Clinic. Special attention will be paid to HIRCs experiences in successfully preparing and presenting child asylum claims in administrative proceedings - including through videos and in-person interviews of children and caretakers, case narratives and affidavits.

The seminar will examine the historical background to the current conflict in Central America. It will also explore issues of credibility and corroboration particular to child asylum claims, including the use of documentation and expert testimony regarding conditions in the country of origin. The seminar will consider comparative perspectives, including other conflicts in which children have been especially targeted for violence and persecution.

This course will consider a range of issues in empirical law and economics. Empirical methods are increasingly used in legal practice and policy. The aim of this course will be to give students a sense of the empirical methods that have been applied to the study of legal issues, the key issues to which such methods have been applied, and how to evaluate and criticize such empirical studies. Among the subjects we may cover are empirical work on policing and crime, judges' decision, discrimination, corporate governance, and securities litigation. Special attention will be given to efforts to identify causality. Some session will feature speakers who do current empirical research.

Readings will be mainly from articles in law reviews and economics or finance journals.

Note: The course will not meet on all Wednesdays and Thursdays during the semester. Rather, it will meet for twelve 2-hour sessions which will take place during the first two months of the semester and take place during the time slot of the course.

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times:	Location
Wed 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM	HAU101

Course Description: Prerequisite: There are no prerequisites for this course. Some background in economics, finance, or empirical methods will be helpful, but no technical knowledge in these areas will be necessary. Students who have questions regarding whether the course would be suitable for them should feel free to contact the instructors.

Exam Type: No Exam There will be no exam. Instead, students will be asked to submit, before most sessions, a brief memo on the research to be discussed in the session, and grades will be based primarily on these memos.

Empirical tools have been increasingly used in litigation, regulation, and policymaking in corporate law, corporate governance, and securities regulation and litigation. This course will aim to expose students to, and enable them to engage with, empirical work in these fields. To this end, at most of the meetings, professors from law schools and business schools will present and discuss their empirical research with the students.

Students who wish to do so may choose to do an additional one- or two-credit independent research project in conjunction with the course.

Note: The course will meet on the following dates: 9/5, 9/12, 9/26, 10/3, 10/31, 11/14

Exam Type: One Day Take-Home

This course will examine civil rights law in the workplace, one of the most hotly litigated bodies of law in recent decades. Although employers have great latitude when making employment decisions under common law, a variety of statutes regulate decisions that are based on protected characteristics, such as race, gender, age, religion, national origin, or disability. On the federal level, those statutes include Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the Americans with Disabilities Act, the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, the Equal Pay Act, the Family & Medical Leave Act, and more. Over time, those statutory protections have been subject to constant review and revision, both by courts called upon to resolve conflicting values and norms and by legislatures responding to competing political pressures. In studying core aspects of the doctrine that have remained relatively stable, as well as aspects that have changed over time, we will examine the forces that have influenced the ongoing development of this area of law. The course will cover various topics related to rights and procedures, including the increased prevalence of mandatory arbitration agreements and the role of class action litigation.

This course will be taught in an accelerated manner, with coursework to be completed during the first half of the semester.

This course will develop lawyering skills in the context of employment law. After a brief overview of relevant doctrine and procedure, the course will address - through readings, lectures, and exercises - skills related to legal writing, oral advocacy, discovery, depositions, negotiations, counseling, and ethics. The course will follow the progress of a typical civil rights lawsuit involving a terminated employee. For example, one class session will require students to engage in a mock deposition of an opposing witness in a hypothetical sex discrimination case, and the next class will require students to engage in a negotiation in the same case.
A more general goal of the course is to develop the ability (1) to identify what skills make a lawyer effective, and (2) to implement strategies for independently identifying and improving those critical skills. Because this goal is advanced by exposure to actual lawyering, all students will have a clinical placement with the Employment Law Clinic. The workshop will require completion of an individual or group project that will connect clinical placements with course topics.

This course will examine how lawyers can use different strategies to effect social change, with a special emphasis on advancing the right to be free from workplace discrimination based on protected characteristics such as race and sex. After surveying the relevant law and reviewing empirical information about the nature of civil rights violations, we will evaluate possible strategies for social change, including government action, individual and class action litigation, self regulation, alternative dispute resolution, organizing, and social entrepreneuring. All students will have a clinical placement through the Employment Law Clinic. All clinical placements will include exposure to some aspect of employment rights and will play an important role in bringing diverse perspectives to the workshop. The workshop will require completion of an individual or group project. Projects may include some combination of empirical research, legal analysis, program evaluation, or other approaches to examining and improving the effectiveness of existing workplace protections.

Exam Type: No Exam

Scheduling Note: This course will meet from 8-10pm in September and October, and 7-9pm in November to accommodate meeting electronically with colleagues at Renmin University of China.

This one unit course will examine the role that China has been playing in a world order in flux. Models of development, trade, and rights are among the areas likely to be addressed. We will consider, inter alia, China's engagement of existing global norms, ways in which China may (or may not) now or in the foreseeable future be shaping such norms, and their impact on China. The intention is to hold all but one of our likely six 2-hour sessions of the class jointly with a comparable class at Renmin University of China, via electronic means — hence, our evening meeting times. (8-10 pm in September and October, 7-9 pm in November due to the Daylight Saving Time change). Each session will cover a specific topic. In past years topics have included legal education, the legal profession, corporate social responsibility, corporate governance, the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act, rights (through the prism of disability), trade, law and development, climate change and the roles of the US and China in Africa - with the precise configuration for 2018-19 to be determined closer to the start of the semester. We conclude the semester with a mock negotiation done jointly with students from Renmin University School of Law.

Note: This reading group will meet on the following dates:
Monday, September 17 from 7pm to 9pm in the Morgan Courtroom
Monday, September 24 from 7pm to 9pm in the Morgan Courtroom
Monday, October 22 from 8pm to 10pm in WCC room 5048
Monday, October 29 from 8pm to 10pm in WCC room 5048
Monday, November 5 from 7pm to 9pm in WCC room 5048
Monday, November 19 from 7pm to 9 pm in WCC room 5048

Thu 1:30 PM - 4:15 PM	WCC1010
Fri 1:30 PM - 4:15 PM	WCC1010

Course Description: Prerequisites Students must complete one of the following courses in order to enroll: Copyright, Copyright and Trademark Litigation, Trademark and Unfair Competition, Intellectual Property Law, Intellectual Property Theory, or Intellectual Property Law: Advanced. If you do not meet the prerequisite, you will need to seek permission from the faculty member (kbasin@law.harvard.edu) to waive it.

Exam Type: No Exam
Students will participate in several problem-solving exercises in entertainment and media law, with written work for grading evaluation.

This course reflects an integrated approach to entertainment and media, particularly on legal doctrines and industry norms that are unique to this field. The course will focus on new challenges faced by the entertainment and media industries in response to the recent (and ongoing) paradigm shifts to digital production and distribution, with an emphasis on the role of lawyers in shaping current and future practice and policy. We will cover deal making norms in the motion picture, television, and digital entertainment and media industries; the challenges of reconciling contemporary technologies and business practices with long-standing legal doctrine; and the role of Congress and various federal agencies and departments (such as the FCC, FTC and the US Department of Justice) in establishing and enforcing entertainment and media policies and regulations. (Note that this course will not include substantial material on music law, which is covered in detail in other courses offered at HLS.)

Note: This course will meet over 10 sessions, ending on January 18th, 2019.

Exam Type: No Exam

What key agreements do entrepreneurs have to make in the chrysalis stages of their venture? What seminal decisions do they take in the earliest days that can have outsized downstream consequences? How do you give them the best possible legal _and_ business counsel?

This Simulation Course will examine critical moments of decision-making in relation to essential, dynamic topics such as co-founder agreements, corporate structure, venture capital, valuations, IP protection, relations with early employees, vesting schedules, contractor collaboration, temp-to-perm hires, business development partnerships, strategic investors, compensation, NDAs, board membership, advisory boards, key vendors, domiciling, for-profit or otherwise, strike prices, alternative capital formation terms such as PIK dividends, and incentive plans for fast-growing teams.

Students should be prepared to simulate key moments in corporate formation and growth. Special attention will be given to the realities of advising early stage, high-velocity startups, which must often deal with uncertainties and risk profiles that are dissimilar from those faced by larger-scale, mature corporations.

Note: This course will meet on the following dates: 4/17, 4/18, 4/19, 4/24, 4/25, 4/26.

Course Description: Prerequisites: None

Exam Type: One Day Take-Home

This introductory course will focus on the variety of legal mechanisms we use to address environmental harms such as air and water pollution, global climate change, and habitat destruction. We will focus on the key federal environmental statutes, including the National Environmental Policy Act, the Clean Air Act, the Clean Water Act, and the Endangered Species Act, and the leading cases in which these statutes have been interpreted by courts. The statutes will be studied in some detail so that students emerge with a basic understanding of their major regulatory provisions. Thematically, the statutes serve as illustrations of different regulatory approaches to environmental problems, from command and control standards to market-based instruments. In addition, we will discuss important matters of policy, including the Obama administrations efforts to address climate change through the use of Executive Power, and the Trump administrations efforts to rescind these policies. The course will also cover developments in constitutional law which significantly affect federal environmental law; and will cover the role of cost-benefit analysis in environmental regulation. Finally, we will discuss the political economy of environmental regulation, specifically the role played by interest groups (both industry and environmental organizations) in producing, implementing and enforcing environmental law.

Students need not be self-identified ""environmentalists"" to be interested in this course. Nearly every area of law is now affected by environmental regulation, including private law fields such as real estate, bankruptcy and financial regulation. The legal issues presented by environmental problems offer ample opportunities for students to develop important and transferable legal skills, including statutory interpretation, constitutional analysis and application of administrative law doctrines.

Laptops and other electronic devices will not be permitted in class. Regular attendance and participation in class discussion is expected.

The casebook for the class is Percival, Miller, Schroeder and Leape, Environmental Regulation: Law, Science and Policy, 8th edition, Wolter Kluwer. You will also need to purchase SELECTED ENVIRONMENTAL LAW STATUTES, 2018-2019 (Thomson West).

Cross-Registration: No undergraduates please, and cross-reg students allowed only with permission of instructor.

Type: Clinic Subject Areas: Environmental Law; Procedure & Practice; Regulatory Law

Delivery Mode: Clinic

Days and Times: Location

Course Description: Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.
Enrollment in this clinic will fulfill the HLS JD pro bono requirement.
Required Class Component: Environmental Law and Policy Clinical Course (1 spring classroom credit). This clinic and course are bundled; your enrollment in this clinic will automatically enroll you in the required one-credit course.
Additional Co-/Pre-Requisites: None.
By Permission: No.
Add/Drop Deadline: Please note that this clinic has an early drop deadline of January 4, 2019.
LLM Students: LLM students may apply to this clinic by submitting an application.
Placement Site: Most clinical work is done on campus; some placements are available at externship locations (government agencies and nonprofits). Students are carefully matched to their projects/placements by the Clinic Director approximately 4 weeks in advance of the semester. Certain projects and placements have a longer lead time. The Clinic Director speaks with each enrolled student to determine the appropriate project or placement.
This clinic is available for 4 or 5 clinical credits, plus 1 credit for the required class component. Students wishing to take the clinic for 3 clinical credits must apply to the Clinic Director to receive an exception and waiver; students approved to take the clinic for 3 clinical credits will still be required to take the 1 credit class component.
The Emmett Environmental Law and Policy Clinic (ELPC) offers students an opportunity to do hands-on, meaningful, real-life, and real-time environmental/energy regulatory, policy and advocacy work. Clinic offerings include local, national, and international projects covering the spectrum of environmental, energy and administrative law issues, under the leadership of Director and Clinical Professor Wendy Jacobs. Clinic students work on policy projects and white papers, regulatory and statutory drafting and comments, manuals and guidance to help non-lawyers identify and protect their rights, litigation and advocacy work, including developing case strategies, research and drafting briefs (filed in state and federal courts, including the U.S. Supreme Court), preparing witnesses and their testimony, meeting with clients and attending and presenting at administrative and court hearings. Our clients include state and municipal governments, non-governmental organizations, advocacy and community groups, and research and policy institutions. The subject matter varies each semester, but often includes climate change displacement, citizen science, climate change mitigation and adaptation, offshore drilling and water protection, sustainable agriculture/aquaculture, ethics in the study of human exposure to environmental contaminants, development of legal frameworks for emerging technologies such as carbon capture and sequestration, extraction of natural gas by hydraulic fracturing, and aiding environmental protection and advocacy groups to identify opportunities and strategies for participating in the review and permitting processes for significant energy infrastructure projects.

The interest may relate to environmental law or Supreme Court advocacy, or both. All materials must be submitted no later than Friday, October 5. Please forward all application materials both to Melinda Eakin at eakin@law.harvard.edu and to lazarus@law.harvard.edu.

Exam: No Exam

This reading group is designed to be a fun and engaging exploration of environmental litigation before the U.S. Supreme Court. The reading group will meet six times during the semester. During each meeting, we will likely focus mostly on one Supreme Court case. For each case, we will go beyond a traditional discussion of the Courts holding to consider the competing strategies of the advocates before the Court (and the Justices within the Court) that resulted in that holding. With one possible exception, the cases will all be significant cases already decided by the Court.

For each case, the weekly reading assignment will include briefs filed in the case by the parties, the oral argument transcript, and the Courts opinion. During the reading group meetings, I will also frequently introduce other material that reveals the often-less obvious litigation strategies of the opposing counsel behind the scenes in the case or what may have happened within and between the chambers of the Justices at the Court itself in deciding the case. For several of the individual cases, we will be joined (most often in digital form) by one of the arguing counsel in the case being discussed. They are an engaging and entertaining group of outstanding Supreme Court litigators.

The one possible exception to our focus on past Supreme Court environmental law cases will occur if the Supreme Court happens to be considering a significant environmental law case at the time the Reading Group is meeting next spring. If that happens, we will likely shift some of our attention to that case on a real-time basis. That could include discussions whether the Court should, or is likely to grant review. Or, if review is already granted, how best to prepare for argument in the case. And, if the argument is already complete, what the Court seems most likely to rule in the case. Again, we will review a wide range of readings and consult with counsel in our examination of the case.

Note: This reading group will meet on the following dates: 2/4, 2/11, 2/25, 3/4, 3/11, 4/22.

Course Description: Prerequisites: None

Exam Type: Any Day Take-Home

The course offers an overview of EU law and policy, covering institutional, constitutional and substantive aspects of European integration. It also examines the political context that enabled EU integration, comparing the EU with the United States and ASEAN, NAFTA and MERCOSUR, and the EUs impact on the United States and the rest of the world.

The course has three parts. Part 1 introduces the European Union, its main institutions, and legal doctrines. This part explores how the European Court of Justice and national courts have created a powerful supranational legal order. Part 2 explores the operation of the single market through the four fundamental freedoms and associated case law, as well as EU citizenship and fundamental rights. Part 3 looks at how EU regulation in diverse areas such as antitrust, data protection, the environment and food safety influences US firms and citizens, and non-EU residents more generally.

The course assumes no prior knowledge of EU law. In examining the dynamics and direction of EU integration, including major centrifugal tendencies such as Brexit, and the refugee and Eurozone crises, we keep a close eye on current events.

Exam: Last Class Take-Home and Short In-Class Examination There will be a take-home and an in-class exam. The take-home will be distributed on the last day of class and will be due by the start of the in-class exam.

The law of evidence regulates the presentation of factual information in the Anglo-American jury trial process and legitimates the outcomes of that process. In a wider sense, the concept of evidence embraces the process of proof of facts in any legal proceeding.

In this intensive "immersion" course, evidence law is presented and studied in the context of American trial advocacy with some comparative perspectives on fact-finding in various legal systems. The course is structured around the Federal Rules of Evidence but also includes evidence issues from other sources. The basic topics of relevance, hearsay, form of direct and cross examination, rules of exclusion, illustrative aids, impeachment, authenticity, expert testimony, best evidence, privilege, and unfair prejudice will be covered through study and discussion of numerous trial problems as well as of rules and cases. The course also includes computer-aided video exercises in simulated trial settings.

Assignments will be posted on the Course Web Site each week. Students will be expected to be prepared to participate in class discussion and solution of the assigned problems each day.

Evidence is a recommended prerequisite for the Trial Advocacy Workshop and can support certification for student practice in the Law Schools clinical offerings.

Text: The course text, lecture notes, assignments, and additional materials will be available on the course website. Most of the materials are also available in Green, Nesson and Murray, Problems, Cases and Materials on Evidence, 4th Ed. (Aspen 2017). The problems that will be assigned are available in Green, Nesson & Murray, Problems in Evidence. A current paperback copy of the restyled Federal Rules of Evidence will also be a convenience.

Executive and Board Turnover in the S&P 500: Research Seminar

Course #: 2530 Term: 2019SP Faculty: Kraakman, Reinier Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Business Organization, Commercial Law, and Finance

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times:	Location
Tue 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM	WCC5048

Course Description: Prerequisites: Familiarity with U.S. corporate law and a consumers interest in the relevant finance literature.

Exam Type: No Exam Seminar participants will be asked to present assigned articles and submit weekly memos evaluating their results and/or suggesting novel ways to explore their results.

This seminar reviews the literature on management and director turnover in U.S. public corporations. Topics to be addressed include the proximate causes of turnover (e.g., retirements, terminations, and takeovers); relationships between turnover and corporate attributes such as firm performance, size, and ownership structure; the relationship between managerial compensation and turnover; and the evolution of CEO and director turnover over time. Depending on available literature, the seminar may inquire into when turnover in the C-suite and the boardroom are "team" phenomena, including whether they sometimes correlate. Seminar readings will also address the implications of turnover for corporate governance. Should reformers encourage selective turnover by promoting term limits and fixed retirement ages? Alternatively, should boards to periodically disclose their succession planning to allow the market to assess the likely continuity of corporate leadership? And if so, should successors be named long before incumbent CEOs retire?The seminar materials will include an accessible dataset. When data permit, participants will be asked to make testable predictions based on their informed intuitions. Some predictions may actually be tested after their proponents firmly commit. But no hands-on data skills are required.

Fair Trial 2018 blends traditional classroom discussion with an online dialogic environment of pseudonymity in order to promote the exchange of sincere intellectual exchange and feedback amongst a diverse group of students. This course explores the concept of jury as its departure point and classroom mode. We use both real and cyberspace to transcend bias while creating a setting that optimizes for truth. We explore how truth is made in trial - both criminal and civil -- based on witness testimony. We consider credibility, reasonable doubt, the judicial requirement of record proof sufficient to convict, and jury power to acquit. Our goal is free expression in our jury room in which all feel responsible for our common discourse space. By introducing layered cyber and real space we intensify our engagement with each other in deliberating posed cases.

Family Law of Poor Families

Course #: 2648 Term: 2018FA Faculty: Halley, Janet Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Family, Gender & Children's Law

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times:	Location
Tue 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM	WCC3036

Course Description: Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: No Exam

Poor families are governed by bodies of law which have rarely, if ever, been organized as a distinctive topic in law. But for poor families themselves, the interaction of these legal structures is crucial to their poverty, to the family forms that they adopt, to their relationships to large social structures such as the labor market, housing, and mass incarceration. These dynamics have large implications for the wellbeing of poor individuals and families, for the gender patterns they adopt, and for the social networks the construct to survive and support each other. After an introduction to social science and social theory on families and poverty in the US, this course will examine the welfare system (the Poor Law, AFDC/TANF, Medicaid, public and publicly-subsidized housing, child support enforcement) for its explicit and implicit role in family formation and dissolution, and in the encounters between poor families and their members, on one hand, and social policy about them, on the other. Because marriage is not the predominant way in which poor adults set up their adult/adult relationships, we will study the “law in action” of informal family formation and dissolution, including parenthood. We will study the family law embedded in institutions that poor people, because of their poverty, encounter in a much more pervasive and intense way than others do: prisons, immigration, child protection/child welfare/foster care; child delinquency; homeless policy and provision; school discipline; and domestic violence response. Throughout, our focus will be on these materials from a family-eye perspective: how do poor families strategize in the network of law created by all these legal institutions and practices?

This seminar will be exploratory. Though anchored by core readings and visits to the class by local experts, the seminar will concentrate on new research by student teams, reports to the class, and collective decisionmaking about the most important topics and readings to include, were this topic to develop into a full-fledged 4-credit course.

This experiential course meets January 7 to 17, 2019 and is taught by Nana Sarian, General Counsel of Stella McCartney. The course will consist of interactive workshops featuring case studies on fashion law. Students will put themselves in the shoes of a lawyer advising a brand, working in small groups to tackle real legal challenges and scenarios faced by in-house fashion counsels on a daily basis from the office and atelier to the runway, with a particular focus on legal analysis and problem solving. Topics will range from intellectual property (including the protection of fashion designs, focusing on the differences between protection in the US and EU), franchise law, commercial law (including commercial arrangements to license the IP of a brand to third parties for the manufacture and sale of products which traditionally are not produced in-house by a brand, e.g. fragrance or sportswear), contracts for sale (to wholesale and retail customers) as well as the laws relevant to fashion shows/presentations (covering matters as broad as design rights, music licensing, fashion photographers and labor law), supply chains (with a focus on sustainability in fashion), the digital world and social media. Various international guest lecturers from the fashion industry will also be invited to present in class including from the world renowned college in England, Central Saint Martins, as well as Pier Luigi Roncaglia (an IP practitioner based in Italy who specializes in civil litigation in all areas of IP before all Italian courts, the General Court and the Court of Justice of the European Union as well as criminal litigation and anti-counterfeiting) and Claire Bergkamp (Head of Sustainability and Ethical Trade, Stella McCartney).

The goal of this course is to introduce students to the law and practice of government budgeting in the United States. Students will be introduced to the basic structure of the federal budget process, including the Presidents Budget and Congressional budget procedures. We will explore the roles of all three branches of federal government in setting budget policy in the United States, covering government shut-downs, debt ceiling crises, continuing resolutions, and ongoing debates over budget reforms and fiscal challenges. Based on student interest, we may also take up entitlement reform, defense spending, budgeting for infrastructure as well as topics related to state budgeting practices and federal-state relations in budget policy.

Readings will be from Fiscal Challenges: An Interdisciplinary Approach to Budget Policy (2007) (Howell Jackson, et al., eds.) and additional distributed materials.

In order to accommodate scheduling requirements for students from different parts of Harvard University, class sessions will take place during the first two weeks of the January Term, with ten two-hour classes in the mornings and roughly four luncheon presentations with outside experts. Students from across the University are welcome to enroll.

Students interested in writing a research paper on budget policy can sign up to write such a paper for independent credit in the Spring semester. Research topics should be arranged with permission of the instructor. Examples of student papers from past years are available at <http://scholar.harvard.edu/briefingpapers/home>.

The Federal Tax Clinic focuses on assisting low income taxpayers who have a dispute with the IRS. For clients who have a corresponding dispute with the Massachusetts Department of Revenue, the clinic will assist them as well. The Clinics main practice areas are representing taxpayers litigating in the United States Tax Court, engaging in the audit process and enduring the collection phase of the case. In addition to representing taxpayers from the Boston area, the Clinic takes clients from around the country in order to litigate issue of broad impact to the low income taxpayer community. It also comments on regulations and other types of rule-making that will impact this community.

Much of the practice involves working with the IRS as it administers the tax laws. Clinic students work with IRS revenue agents, revenue officers, Appeals Officers, automated call site collection operators and correspondence auditors. No matter which segment of the administrative agency we encounter, the Clinic seeks to provide a voice for the client in a process that can otherwise prove baffling. Students in this clinic gain a lot of direct client experience. Each student usually starts with 4-5 cases representing a variety of the practice areas of the Clinic. The student has primary responsibility for the case and works directly with the client. The supervisors in the Clinic exist to assist and to guide the students as they work with their clients but generally the supervisors have no direct contact with the clients.

Because Congress uses the Internal Revenue Code to deliver benefits through provisions such as the earned income tax credit and the advanced child tax credit, the taxpayers have a significant financial interest in their tax disputes. The benefit payments sometimes equal half of a taxpayer's annual income. Represented clients have a much higher statistical chance of prevailing and thus avoiding deep poverty. The Clinic represents clients so that they can retain these benefits in circumstances in which they might give up rather than fight with the IRS in a process they fail to fully comprehend. Additionally, the Clinic represents clients mired in debt. Each semester, the Clinic assists taxpayer in settling their tax debts with the IRS for a fraction of the amount owed and in some cases writing off hundreds of thousands of dollars. These outcomes can be life changing for some clients.

The Clinic also seeks to give students the opportunity to work on matters of broader impact in the low income taxpayer community. For the past year the Clinic has identified taxpayers dismissed from the Tax Court as a result of being told the wrong date to file their petition by the IRS. The Clinic filed an amicus brief in the fall of 2015 arguing that the Tax Court had the ability under applicable Supreme Court precedent to equitably toll the time period for filing the petition. The Tax Court rejected this argument though that case was resolved on other grounds and did not result in an appeal. Since that case, the Clinic has filed an amicus brief in the 9th Circuit in the case of a pro se petitioner misled by the IRS notice and filed briefs for clients in the 2nd and 3rd Circuits. The Clinic will argue this issue before the Circuit courts during the Spring 2017 semester. In addition the Clinic has three more cases with the same issue awaiting a decision by the Tax Court which will result in cases in the 4th and 10th Circuits. In the Spring semester

2017 Clinic students are working on writing comments to the IRS on proposed family status regulations as these regulations have a significant impact on our clients.

The seminar component of the Clinic seeks to complement the experience of working directly with the clients. Students work on case simulations, problems and IRS forms in the seminar in order to prepare and reinforce the skills needed for client representation. Almost every week the students prepare a different IRS form in preparation for the seminar class in order to learn about the subject, feel the frustrations clients experience in trying to prepare IRS forms and learn how to advocate within the constraints of a form. The seminar also serves as a place for the students in the class to discuss their cases with fellow classmates and work together to figure out the best way to approach difficult case problems. 2017 Clinic students are working on writing comments to the IRS on proposed family status regulations as these regulations have a significant impact on our clients.

The seminar component of the Clinic seeks to complement the experience of working directly with the clients. Students work on case simulations, problems and IRS forms in the seminar in order to prepare and reinforce the skills needed for client representation. Almost every week the students prepare a different IRS form in preparation for the seminar class in order to learn about the subject, feel the frustrations clients experience in trying to prepare IRS forms and learn how to advocate within the constraints of a form. The seminar also serves as a place for the students in the class to discuss their cases with fellow classmates and work together to figure out the best way to approach difficult case problems.

Federal Tax Clinical Seminar

Course #: 2822 Term: 2019SP Faculty: Smith, Carlton Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Procedure & Practice; Taxation

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times:	Location
Mon 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM	WCC4061

Course Description: Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.

Required Clinic Component: Federal Tax Clinic (3-5 spring clinical credits). This clinic and course are bundled; your enrollment in the clinic will automatically enroll you in this required course.

Additional Co-/Pre-Requisites: None.

By Permission: No.

Add/Drop Deadline: January 11, 2019.

LLM Students: LLM students may apply to the clinic by submitting an application.

Through the Federal Tax Clinical Seminar, students learn the substantive law, procedural context, advocacy skills, and ethical rules necessary for the effective representation of low-income taxpayers before the IRS and in federal court. The seminar will cover an array of topics, including tax practice and procedure at the agency level and in federal court, administrative law, client interviewing, fact investigation, offers in compromise, negotiation, refund litigation, audit reconsideration, innocent spouse defenses, Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC), and evidentiary hearings. The seminar will also consider, through the lens of students' clinical experiences, systemic questions about tax policy, anti-poverty policy, and access to justice for low-income taxpayers. Because the Clinic teaches lawyering skills applicable across numerous practice areas, students are encouraged to enroll whether they have an existing interest in tax law and practice or simply seek an immersive law practice experience through which they can learn valuable skills and provide pro bono representation to those in need.

Federalism and States as Public Law Actors

Course #: 2310 Term: 2019SP Faculty: Halligan, Caitlin Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Constitutional Law & Civil Rights; Government Structure & Function

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times: Location

Thu 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM HAU101

Course Description: Prerequisites: Constitutional Law: Separation of Powers, Federalism, and Fourteenth Amendment
Exam Type: No Exam
In recent years, states have become vital agents in shaping public law across the political spectrum, often pursuing litigation to advance their policy priorities. Examples include suits regarding immigration policies of both the Obama and Trump administrations; Massachusetts v. EPA, in which states compelled the Environmental Protection Agency to regulate greenhouse gas emissions, and subsequent challenges to other federal environmental policies; litigation regarding same-sex marriage; disputes over whether the federal government can withhold funding from "sanctuary cities"; and the use of state securities and consumer protection laws to advance agendas that diverge from federal regulatory priorities. This advanced litigation seminar will critically examine this practice. We will study relevant statutes and legal doctrines, as well as political and practical concerns that shape litigation options and strategic and tactical decisions by states in this arena. In addition to case law and scholarship, students will read briefs, complaints, and other court filings in recent and pending litigation around the country.

Grading will be based on 3 short responses to class reading, one 15-page paper, and class participation.

There will also be a paper option.

This course will examine and compare eight major strands of contemporary North Atlantic feminism: liberal feminism, dominance feminism, cultural feminism, socialist/materialist feminism, economic feminism in a liberal market frame, critical race feminism, postmodern feminism, and the relations between feminism and conservatism. We will read classics in feminist legal theory and case studies allowing us to examine and compare the ways in which various strands of feminism have engaged law and law reform.

Students will write response papers analyzing the reading materials. No prior knowledge of feminism will be presupposed. LLMs are welcomed to enroll.

Note: This course is restricted to first-year J.D. students only.

The drop deadline for 1L January Experiential Term classes is November 30, 2018. Students may not drop a course if they do not have an offer to enroll in a different January Experiential Term course. Most course enrollments are limited to 72 students.

1L January Experiential Term courses are intensive learning courses. Class attendance is required in each course every day of the term, beginning Monday, January 7th. Students should make their travel plans accordingly. Students should not take on other work commitments during the term.

Exam Type: No Exam

Lawyers routinely use and critically analyze financial statements and business valuations. Of course, corporate lawyers advise organizations and design deals that depend on these skills, and tax lawyers, commercial litigators, and international trade lawyers also use these skills. But less obviously, family lawyers need them in divorce cases, constitutional lawyers use them in takings cases, and class action lawyers use them in products liability cases. In fact, lawyers of all kinds, including prosecutors, other government lawyers, and public interest lawyers, use these skills to present and resolve disputes, and to propose, critique and defend regulation of businesses.

This course will provide students with an opportunity to engage in hands-on, law-related analysis of financial statements and business valuation and analysis. No prior background in these topics is required. We will first analyze basic financial statements; then move to more advanced financial statement analysis; then review basic methods of business valuation; then build information from financial statements into standard valuation model; then see how practitioners argue for wildly different valuations drawing on the same basic financial information. Students will work in teams, and build their knowledge through hands-on experience using case studies of real companies.

Note: There may be days throughout the winter term that require attendance beyond the scheduled times. Please refer to the course syllabus and page for more information.

Financial and Legal Needs of Low and Moderate Income Households

Course #: 2176 Term: 2019SP Faculty: Charn, Jeanne Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Family, Gender & Children's Law; Procedure & Practice

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times: Location

Thu 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM WCC3009

Course Description: Prerequisites: None

Exam: No Exam

The seminar will examine the opportunities and perils in consumer financial services available to low and moderate income households. We will begin with a survey of (i) sources of unsecured credit (e.g. credit cards, pay-day lenders, check-cashing services); (ii) homeownership as an asset building strategy; (iii) saving rates and policies that encourage saving. With a basic understanding of the financial services landscape, we will explore strategies for providing legal advice and assistance that may enable people to effectively access credit and to build and protect assets. We will focus on assistance for households in crises (such as foreclosure) but we will also consider transactional and preventive services to help people avoid crises. We will explore the role of the solo and small firm bar that serves people of moderate means and on market innovations designed to expand access -- for example, pre-paid and legal insurance programs, unbundled legal services, and self-help. We will pay particular attention to technology driven modes of service delivery. We will also look at legal aid in the UK, Europe and Canada where the needs of moderate income people are a main focus of legal aid policy.

In consultation with the course instructor, students will develop a research project that explores in greater depth any topic covered in class meetings. Students may work in pairs or groups and the course research project may satisfy all or part of the J.D. writing requirement.

Students are welcome to contact the course instructor via e-mail (charn@law.harvard.edu) with questions about the course.

The goal of this one-credit course is to explore the impact of emerging technologies on the financial sector. We will examine the ways in which innovations in digital technologies and changes in consumer practices are disrupting traditional business models and financial regulation. Possible topics for coverage include peer-to-peer lending platforms, initial coin offerings, new digital payment systems, robo-advising, algorithmic trading, and technologies employing blockchains and its variants. Class sessions will be built around case studies and reading materials based upon real world topics and cutting edge legal challenges facing entrepreneurs, regulators, lawyers and other gatekeepers. All classes will be scheduled to take place during the first two weeks of semester. There will be no examination, but students will be expected to present and comment upon case studies and also write a short reaction paper after the classes are over.

Note: This class will meet on the following dates: 1/30, 1/31, 2/1, 2/6, 2/7 and 2/8.

Drop Deadline: This course has an early drop deadline of January 31, 2019.

Course Description: The First-Year Legal Writing and Research Program (LRW) is a series of exercises introducing students to the way lawyers analyze and frame legal positions in litigation, conduct legal research, and present their work in writing and in oral argument. Students actively learn research and writing skills by preparing initial and final drafts of memoranda and briefs and by becoming familiar with accessing both print and electronic research materials. In the spring, each first-year student is required to participate in the First-Year Ames Moot Court Program as a part of LRW, and to brief and argue a moot appellate case in a team of two. The course meets once a week for two hours or in one-on-one conferences. It carries two academic credits each semester and is graded honors/pass/low pass/fail. First-year law students in the Program are instructed by fourteen Climenko Fellows--promising legal scholars with high academic achievements and a strong interest in pursuing a career in law teaching--as well as by research librarians and upper-class teaching assistants.

This course explores the full range of federal regulation of products subject to the jurisdiction of the Food and Drug Administration (FDA). These products include food, human prescription and nonprescription drugs, animal feed and drugs, biologics and blood products, medical devices, and cosmetics, which together comprise approximately 20% of the gross national product. The course examines the public policy choices underlying the substantive law, FDA enforcement power, and agency practice and procedure. The course covers such contemporary issues as protecting against unsafe or mislabeled food, controlling carcinogens, expediting approval of AIDS and cancer drugs, assuring the safety of prescription drugs before and after marketing, importing drugs from abroad, switching drugs from prescription to nonprescription status, balancing the benefits and risks of breast implants, the compassionate use of experimental products, regulating complex new medical device technology, control of such biotechnology techniques as gene therapy, requiring adequate consumer and professional labeling for FDA-regulated products, and the relationship among international, federal, and state regulatory requirements.

Enrollment in this course is limited to fifty-two students. The required course paper may be combined with the Option 1 Written Work Requirement. This applies to students who take the course as a 2L or a 3L. Students who know that they wish to choose this option should e-mail the instructor at phutt@cov.com.

Exam Type: No Exam

This seminar will present an overview of topics in food law and policy, and will examine how these laws shape what we eat. In recent years, increasing attention has been paid to a range of issues impacting the food system from farm to fork to landfill. In the past few years, major news stories have covered the U.S. farm bill, labeling of genetically engineered food products, soda taxes, efforts to regulate school meals, and the misleading and unregulated terrain of expiration dates.

In order to better understand these issues and some of their root causes, we will examine food policy via the diverse lenses of farmers, consumers, and corporations, as well as using diverse disciplinary perspectives. Each class will begin with ensuring a shared understanding of the relevant sources of law before delving into policy considerations and discussions of what the law could and should. We will concentrate on food law in the United States, but will also include comparative global perspectives when helpful.

We begin the course by looking at the basic regulation of food, focusing on the history and current issues in rules regarding food safety. We then analyze federal agricultural policy and farm subsidies, and the environmental, health, and safety implications of our agricultural system. The course will cover issues in food labeling, including nutrition information, health claims, GMO labeling, and organic labeling. Students will also examine the role the government plays in determining what foods are consumed, through its Dietary Guidelines, food assistance programs, and other attempts to increase healthy food access or consumption. Finally, we will evaluate a range of existing and potential policy interventions at the federal, state, and local level.

The reading materials will be provided in a course reader and on the course website, and include various book chapters, cases, regulations, news reports, and scholarly articles that present diverse viewpoints on the topics presented. The seminar is intended to spark debate between different sides of these often controversial issues.

The seminar is open to any student interested in food and agricultural policy and its implications on health and the environment, and no background or prerequisites are required. Rather than an examination, students will be required to submit short discussion posts via the online course discussion board; prepare for and participate in in-class role play debates; and write a policy paper that explains a food law problem and recommends a policy change intended to improve the health, nutrition, or environmental outcomes. Grades will be determined on the basis of these written submissions, in-class role plays, and class participation.

Enrollment in the seminar is limited to 20 students and it is open to LLM students by permission.

Placement Site: HLS.

The Food Law and Policy Clinic (FLPC) provides students with the opportunity to practice using legal and policy tools in order to address the health, environmental, and economic impacts of our food system. The FLPC utilizes substantive expertise in food law and policy and a robust policy skill set to assist clients and communities in understanding and improving the laws impacting the food system. Clinic projects aim to increase access to healthy foods, prevent diet-related diseases, assist small farmers and producers in participating in food markets, and reduce the waste of healthy, wholesome food.

Students enrolled in the Clinic get hands-on learning experience conducting legal and policy research for individuals, communities, and governments on a wide range of food law and policy issues. Students have the opportunity, for example: to comment on major federal regulations, such as the Food and Drug Administration rules impacting food safety on the farm; to identify and draft legislation to reduce the 40% of food that goes to waste in the U.S.; to train and empower food policy councils and other community coalitions to achieve their food system goals; and to research and recommend policies increasing access to healthy food at all levels of government.

Students will develop a variety of transferable skills in areas such as research, writing, creative problem-solving, project management, oral communication, and leadership. In particular, students will have the opportunity to draft memoranda, white papers, and regulatory comments; conduct statutory interpretation; compose legislation and regulations; petition for agency action; conduct interviews and fact-finding; and train communities about civic engagement, the food system, and policy change. Clinic clients are located around the United States, and some students will have the opportunity to travel, as we work closely with partners in New England, as well as places like Mississippi, West Virginia, and Navajo Nation.

For more information about the clinic, please email Professor Broad Leib at ebroad@law.harvard.edu or visit our clinical suite in the WCC 3130.

Enrollment in this clinic will fulfill the HLS JD pro bono requirement.
Required Class Component: Students in the spring clinic must enroll in either Food Law and Policy (2 spring classroom credits) or Policy Advocacy Workshop (2 spring classroom credits). Students who enroll in the spring clinic will be enrolled in one of the required courses by the Office of Clinical and Pro Bono Programs. Students are guaranteed a seat in one of these two required courses, but are not guaranteed their first choice. Students enrolled in either course under a clinical seat will lose their seat if they choose to drop the clinic.
Additional Co-/Pre-Requisites: None.
By Permission: No.
Add/Drop Deadline: January 11, 2019.
LLM Students: LLM students may apply to this clinic by submitting an application.
Placement Site: HLS.
The Food Law and Policy Clinic (FLPC) provides students with the opportunity to practice using legal and policy tools in order to address the health, environmental, and economic impacts of our food system. The FLPC utilizes substantive expertise in food law and policy and a robust policy skill set to assist clients and communities in understanding and improving the laws impacting the food system. Clinic projects aim to increase access to healthy foods, prevent diet-related diseases, assist small farmers and producers in participating in food markets, and reduce the waste of healthy, wholesome food.
Students enrolled in the Clinic get hands-on learning experience conducting legal and policy research for individuals, communities, and governments on a wide range of food law and policy issues. Students have the opportunity, for example: to comment on major federal regulations, such as the Food and Drug Administration rules impacting food safety on the farm; to identify and draft legislation to reduce the 40% of food that goes to waste in the U.S.; to train and empower food policy councils and other community coalitions to achieve their food system goals; and to research and recommend policies increasing access to healthy food at all levels of government.
Students will develop a variety of transferable skills in areas such as research, writing, creative problem-solving, project management, oral communication, and leadership. In particular, students will have the opportunity to draft memoranda, white papers, and regulatory comments; conduct statutory interpretation; compose legislation and regulations; petition for agency action; conduct interviews and fact-finding; and train communities about civic engagement, the food system, and policy change. Clinic clients are located around the United States, and some students will have the opportunity to travel, as we work closely with partners in New England, as well as places like Mississippi, West Virginia, and Navajo Nation.
For more information about the clinic, please email Professor Broad Leib at ebroad@law.harvard.edu or visit our clinical suite in the WCC 3130.

Food Law Lab

Course #: 2544 Term: 2019SP Faculty: Gersen, Jacob Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Health Law; Regulatory Law

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times: Location

Wed 3:00 PM - 5:00 PM WCC3009

Course Description: Prerequisites: None

Exam Type: No Exam

This seminar will explore the legal regulation of food. We will study the state, local, federal, and common law regulation of food, with an emphasis on both the historical evolution of legal regimes that govern production, labeling, and sale; and frontier policy issues like banned foods, obesity, dietary supplements, organics, bioterrorism, and genetic modification. Although our focus will be mainly domestic law, we will occasionally consider trade and international regulation as well. The writing requirement for the class is four substantive posts for food law lab blog. Students may write on topics of their choosing related to food law and policy.

Course #: 2484 Term: 2018FA Faculty: Robinson, Stephanie Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Constitutional Law & Civil Rights; Government Structure & Function

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times: Location

Tue 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM WCC5052

Course Description: Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: No Exam

This course traces the trajectory of select sentiment, ideology and media relevant to the changing conceptions and associated realities of racial identity in American society. While race has always been a loaded, contested and controversial construct in our American journey, its current and increasingly fluid representation is well removed from its dualistic, color line depiction at the turn of the 20th century. This course will examine these changing racial representations over time within their larger historical context while accounting for the key events and ideologies driving this transformation. Accordingly, such relevant factors as the formation of American racial identity, the long struggle for racial equality, the flaws and promises of traditional civil rights movements, changing demographics, evolving issues of race and marriage, anti-immigrant sentiment, economic turmoil, and sympathy for the loss of whiteness in traditional national identity will be discussed through literature, journalism, and visual media.

Gender Violence Legal Policy Workshop

Course #: 2513 Term: 2019SP Faculty: Rosenfeld, Diane Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Criminal Law & Procedure; Family, Gender & Children's Law

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times:	Location
Wed 1:00 PM - 3:00 PM	WCC4056

Course Description: Prerequisite: Students must register for either the Title IX course or the Gender Violence, Law and Social Justice course during this academic year.

Exam Type: No Exam

This workshop offers the student hands-on experience in analyzing, evaluating, and creating legal policy on a range of issues related to gender violence. The three main areas of concentration are campus sexual assault, intimate partner violence, and sex trafficking and prostitution. We advise government officials (local, state and federal); national, international, and local advocacy groups working to stop gender violence; and individuals needing assistance in knowing their rights or accessing services. Recent activities include submitting comments to the White House Task Force on Protecting Students from Sexual Assault; helping an advocacy organization on preventing domestic violence homicide; and preparing a training for Middlesex County Police Chiefs on investigating sex trafficking rings.

Gender Violence, Law and Social Justice

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Family, Gender & Children's Law

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times:	Location
Mon 1:30 PM - 3:00 PM	WCC3018
Tue 1:30 PM - 3:00 PM	WCC3018

Course Description: Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: No Exam

This course offers an in-depth examination of the phenomenon of gender-motivated violence. Following a consideration of the prevalence and variation of types of sexual violence and coercion around the world, we consider questions such as: How, if at all, is violence against women different from other types of violence? How effective have legal strategies to address violence against women been, and what shifts in thinking about gender-motivated violence would be necessary finally to eradicate it? How does the toleration of sexual violence shape people's expectations and sense of entitlements? What are the implications of gender-based violence for the constitutional guarantee of equal protection of the laws? Does equal protection itself have a gendered meaning and reality? Among the types of violence against women we will consider are: intimate-partner violence; domestic homicide; prostitution; rape; sex trafficking of women and children; and violence against women facilitated by the Internet. The readings consist of primary and secondary materials drawn from several disciplines: law, social science, political science, psychology, evolutionary biology and women's studies.

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Human Rights; International, Comparative & Foreign Law; Legal & Political Theory

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times: Location

Mon 10:15 AM - 11:30 AM

Wed 10:15 AM - 11:30 AM

Course Description: Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: Midterm and final, administered through HKS

This course will examine the interplay of geopolitics and human rights, with a focus on how the changing dynamics of the international system are influencing the strategy and statecraft for confronting issues with major security and human consequences. We will probe how such factors as the rise of China, divisions within the U.N., and the challenges facing democracies have shaped international responses to past and present global challenges like climate change, Ebola, and the Syrian civil war. We will also look ahead to potential responses to emerging issues like cyber-interference. The course will use concrete cases to understand the factors behind successful crisis management or mitigation, asking what these lessons portend for the future, and for the actions of governments, NGOs, and activists.

Note: This course is jointly-listed with HKS as IGA-140 and will meet at HKS.

Course Description: Prerequisite: Enrollment is limited to 12, and is by permission of the instructor. Interested students should email Professor Stephenson (mstephen@law.harvard.edu); the email should include a current CV and a statement of interest (preferably including one or two topics you might be interested in writing about). Please also indicate whether you intend to enroll in both semesters of the Lab, or only the Fall. (Enrollment in both semesters is not required, but preference will be given to applicants who intend to enroll for the full year.)

Exam Type: No Exam

This course will provide an opportunity for students interested in anticorruption (from legal, social scientific, or policy perspectives) to work on independent research projects in a collaborative, interactive setting. Students will select one or more topics of interest to explore during the semester; we will meet each week to discuss one another's research, and to brainstorm new topics. In lieu of a long final paper or short weekly response papers, students will instead be expected to contribute four substantive posts (1-3 paragraphs each) to the Global Anticorruption Blog. Participants will also be expected to participate in online discussions and debates about other blog entries. Students interested in expanding their research into a full paper may do so for an appropriate number of additional independent writing credits.

Delivery Mode: Reading Group

Days and Times:	Location
Thu 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM	WCC3036

Course Description: Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: No Exam

In this reading group, we will explore the cutting-edge issues in global mass tort litigation: what are the forces that conspire to prevent access to justice for victims of mass harms; what might be solutions to the access to justice problem; what are common strategies employed by corporate defendants to evade/avoid liability; what are common strategies employed by plaintiffs and their lawyers to nonetheless prevail and; how are legal systems around the world changing their laws in a chase to either facilitate or block transnational mass tort litigation. We will do so by reading through my forthcoming book, "The Case for an International Court of Civil Justice."

In addition to exploring the above issues, the book -- and our class discussions -- will look in-depth at three such cases: the Bhopal litigation (industrial mass accident in India), the Chevron & Ecuador litigation (largest and longest-running environmental dispute of all times) and Kiobel (human rights abuses in Nigeria). I will also assign one or two movies that do a good job of illustrating and humanizing the complexities of transnational mass tort litigation for discussion.

Exam Type: No Exam

A paper will be required in lieu of an examination.

The course will examine the roles and responsibilities of the prosecutor, with a particular focus on federal prosecutors. The course will consider questions concerning the politics of prosecution, the role of the prosecutor in the adversarial system (and whether that system is the best for achieving justice), and the autonomy and discretion of the prosecutor. We will look at issues that arise at the policy level for prosecutors, as well as those that face individual prosecutors in their work. Some specific topics that will be addressed will include prosecutorial ethics; disclosure and discovery issues; pretrial publicity; investigations (including use of the grand jury); sentencing; federalization of crime; and dealing with informants, cooperators, and victims. We will consider these issues in the context of different areas of criminal prosecution, including white-collar crime, organized crime, urban violence, and terrorism.

Some seats are reserved for students in the fall or spring Government Lawyer: United States Attorney clinic. Students who are accepted into the fall or spring Government Lawyer: United States Attorney clinic will be enrolled in this course by the Office of Clinical and Pro Bono Programs. Course #: 8016 Term: 2019SP Faculty: Wroblewski, Jonathan Credits: 8.00

Type: Clinic Subject Areas: Government Structure & Function

Delivery Mode: Clinic

Days and Times: Location

Course Description: Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.

Enrollment in this clinic will fulfill the HLS JD pro bono requirement.

Required Class Component: Government Lawyer: Semester in Washington Clinical Seminar (3 spring classroom credits). Students who are accepted into the clinic will be enrolled in both the clinic and clinical seminar by the Office of Clinical and Pro Bono Programs.

Additional Co-/Pre-Requisites: None.

By Permission: Yes. Applications are due August 24, 2018.

Add/Drop Deadline: January 11, 2019.

Placement Site: Various externship placements in Washington D.C.

Students spend the entire spring term (except for spring break) in Washington, D.C. working as legal interns in a variety of federal offices while taking an evening seminar course (twice a week during the term) on government lawyering. Students are required to work at least 32 hours a week in the spring term, although most work full-time. Clinical work exposes students to the distinct forms of lawyering practiced by government attorneys in diverse policy positions in the federal government. Placements are principally in federal government offices where lawyers conduct research and provide legal advice and assistance on policy, legislative or regulatory matters, rather than investigating and litigating cases. Placements in past years have included the House and Senate Judiciary Committees, the Departments of Justice and State, the White House Counsels Office, the Central Intelligence Agency, and the Federal Communications Commission. Placements are coordinated by the clinic director, Jonathan Wroblewski, in consultation with students. Students admitted to the clinic will meet individually with the clinic director to discuss their areas of interest and placement possibilities. Every effort will be made so that students can find placements to meet their interest. During the clinic, the director will be available to meet one-on-one with students to discuss their ongoing work experience and progress.

Given the nature of government office hiring and the timing of security clearances, it is possible that placements may not be finalized until after committing to this clinic. Every effort is made so students can find a placement in his or her interest area.

This option is for the spring clinic. There is also a separate winter-spring clinic option, where students also spend the Winter Term in Washington, D.C. working full-time at their placement offices.

To get an inside view of the Program, students may access the Semester in Washington iSite, which contains detailed information about the current years syllabus, course requirements, events, funding, housing, placements, etc.

Enrollment is by application and limited to 2L and 3L students. Students must be enrolled full-time at Harvard Law School to apply. Interested students can apply by submitting an application form, current resume, and a writing sample of no more than 10 pages. Apply through an online application form by August 24, 2018.

Students should be aware of their yearly HLS credit minimums, as the spring semester is spent entirely off campus (student will receive 8 spring clinical credits + 3 spring course credits for a total of 11 spring semester credits).

Course #: 8016 Term: 2019WS Faculty: Wroblewski, Jonathan Credits: 10.00

Type: Clinic Subject Areas: Government Structure & Function; Procedure & Practice; Regulatory Law

Delivery Mode: Clinic

Days and Times: Location

Course Description: Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.

Enrollment in this clinic will fulfill the HLS JD pro bono requirement.

Required Class Component: Government Lawyer: Semester in Washington Clinical Seminar (3 spring classroom credits). Students who are accepted into the clinic will be enrolled in both the clinic and clinical seminar by the Office of Clinical and Pro Bono Programs.

Additional Co-/Pre-Requisites: None.

By Permission: Yes. Applications are due August 24, 2018.

Add/Drop Deadline: November 30, 2018.

LLM Students: International students on F-1 student visas are required to have Curricular Practical Training (CPT) authorization; LL.M. students are not eligible for CPT.

Multi-Semester: This is a winter-spring clinic (2 winter clinical credits + 8 spring clinical credits.)

Placement Site: Various externship placements in Washington D.C.

Students spend the entire winter and spring terms (except for spring break) in Washington, D.C. working as legal interns in a variety of federal offices while taking an evening seminar course (twice a week during the spring) on government lawyering. Students are required to work full-time over the winter term (40 hours per week) and at least 32 hours per week in the spring term, although most work full-time during the spring term as well. Clinical work exposes students to the distinct forms of lawyering practiced by government attorneys in diverse policy positions in the federal government. Placements are principally in federal government offices where lawyers conduct research and provide legal advice and assistance on policy, legislative or regulatory matters, rather than investigating and litigating cases. Placements in past years have included the House and Senate Judiciary Committees, the Departments of Justice and State, the White House Counsels Office, the Central Intelligence Agency, and the Federal Communications Commission. Placements are coordinated by the clinic director, Jonathan Wroblewski, in consultation with students. Students admitted to the clinic will meet individually with the clinic director to discuss their areas of interest and placement possibilities. Every effort will be made so that students find placements to meet their interests. During the clinic, the director will be available to meet one-on-one with students to discuss their ongoing work experience and progress.

Given the nature of government office hiring and the timing of security clearances, it is possible that placements may not be finalized until after committing to this clinic. Every effort is made so students find a placement in his or her interest area.

This option is for the winter and spring clinic. There is also a separate spring only clinic option. To get an inside view of the Program, students may access the Semester in Washington iSite, which contains detailed information about last years syllabus, course requirements, events, funding, housing, placements, etc.

Enrollment is by application and limited to 2L and 3L students. Students must be enrolled full-time at Harvard Law School to apply. Interested students can apply by submitting an application form, current resume, and a writing sample of no more than 10 pages. Apply through an online application form by August 24, 2018.

Students should be aware of their yearly HLS credit minimums, as the winter and spring semesters are spent entirely off campus (student will receive 2 winter clinical credits + 8 spring clinical credits + 3 spring course credits for a total of 13 winter and spring semester credits).

Course #: 2104 Term: 2019SP Faculty: Wroblewski, Jonathan Credits: 3.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Government Structure & Function; Legal Profession, Legal Ethics & Professional Responsibility; Procedure & Practice

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times: Location

Course Description: Students who enroll in this course may count the credits towards the JD professional responsibility requirement.
Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.
Required Clinic Component: Government Lawyer: Semester in Washington Clinic, either during winter-spring (2 winter clinical credits + 8 spring clinical credits) or spring clinic (8 spring clinical credits). Students who are accepted into one of these two clinic offerings (winter-spring or spring) will be enrolled in the clinic and clinical seminar by the Office of Clinical and Pro Bono Programs.
Additional Co-/Pre-Requisites: None.
By Permission: Yes. Applications to the clinic are due August 24, 2018.
Add/Drop Deadline: November 30, 2018 for winter-spring clinical students. January 11, 2019 for spring clinical students.
LLM Students: International students on F-1 student visas are required to have Curricular Practical Training (CPT) authorization; LL.M. students are not eligible for CPT.
This course is offered as part of the Government Lawyer: Semester in Washington Clinic. Students spend the entire spring term (except for spring break) in Washington, D.C. working as legal interns in a variety of federal offices while taking an evening course on government lawyering. Students may also begin the clinical work in the winter term. Students are required to work full-time (40 hours per week) over the winter term (if they begin their clinical placement then) and at least 32 hours per week in the spring term, although most students work full-time in the spring term. Clinical work exposes students to the distinct forms of lawyering practiced by government attorneys in diverse policy positions in the federal government. Placements are principally in federal government offices where lawyers conduct research and provide legal advice and assistance on policy, legislative or regulatory matters, rather than investigating and litigating cases.
Students attend the evening seminar course twice a week during the spring term. Readings and classroom discussions will be supplemented by guest speaker events and visits to government offices on several occasions throughout the semester. Case studies will supplement the core readings. The course will focus on the role of the government lawyer in policymaking and the many forces that influence the work of policymaking generally, and the government lawyers part in that process specifically. The course will examine the skills required of government attorneys in policymaking, the unique ethical, legal, and moral issues they face, and the impact of politics and ideology on their work. The course will explore the role of think tanks and interest groups on policymaking, how these organizations have proliferated in Washington over time, and how their work and their influence have changed. The course will look at the discourse in policymaking in Washington, whether and why it has changed, and the implications of the state of discourse for the government lawyer involved in policymaking, legal advice, and advocacy. Finally, the course will explore the process of policymaking, the use of data and research in policymaking, and the role of the bureaucracy. The course will include student discussions of their experiences in their clinical placements. Students will be required to come to class prepared to discuss relevant elements of their work. Guest speakers, including government lawyers, issue advocates, and think tank scholars, will visit the class periodically throughout the semester. Students will be expected to research the background of the guests and participate in class interviews to explore their work. The course may also include visits to government offices to examine, for example, how data used in the policymaking process is actually collected and synthesized. A course paper relating to the students work or to classroom subjects will be

Course Description:

Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.

Enrollment in this clinic will fulfill the HLS JD pro bono requirement.

Required Class Component: Government Lawyer (3 fall classroom credits). Some seats are reserved for clinical students. Students who are accepted into this clinic will be enrolled in the required course by the Office of Clinical and Pro Bono Programs. If a student drops the clinic, they will also lose their seat in the required course.

Additional Co-/Pre-Requisites: None.

By Permission: Yes - applications are due March 28, 2018.

Add/Drop Deadline: May 11, 2017.

LLM Students: This clinic is not available to LLM students.

Placement Site: Various externship placements at the U.S. Attorneys office in Boston.

This clinic must be taken for 5 clinical credits (20 hours per week).

Students must attend a mandatory training session during the first week of classes.

The Government Lawyer clinic allows students to examine firsthand the roles and responsibilities of a federal prosecutor. Students are placed at the United States Attorneys Office in Boston. Work may include research, writing, trial and witness preparation, and attending depositions, hearings, and trials. The U.S. Attorneys Office offers placements in the following criminal divisions:

Appeals Unit: The Appeals Unit is responsible for reviewing and approving all appellate briefs before they are filed.

Anti-Terrorism and National Security Unit: The Anti-Terrorism and National Security Unit handles anti-terrorism investigations, those involving breaches of national security.

Computer Crimes Unit: Investigates and prosecutes computer related crimes, including hacking, identity theft and other forms of computer fraud.

Economic Crimes Unit: The Economic Crimes Unit handles complex economic crimes expected to require grand jury or other investigative effort.

Health Care Fraud Unit: The Health Care Fraud Unit investigates and prosecutes complex health care fraud committed by corporate and individual defendants.

Major Crimes Unit: The Major Crimes Unit handles violent crime, property crimes, fraud, theft, civil rights violations, and other matters of primary federal interest.

Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force: Drug Unit cases range from "buy/bust" prosecution to sophisticated money laundering prosecution.

Organized Crime Strike Force: The organized crime unit handles complex long term matters, utilizing extensive grand jury and electronic surveillance, often using statutes such as RICO.

Public Corruption and Special Prosecution Unit: The Public Corruption Unit handles sensitive cases involving allegations of corruption against elected and appointed federal, state, and local officials.

Important: All students must be U.S. citizens and complete a lengthy security clearance process by the Department of Justice, which involves numerous forms and fingerprinting. This process takes between 8-10 weeks for final clearance, which is then valid for only six months. This clearance process is not just a formality, and in some instances clearance has been delayed or denied. This process is coordinated between the Office of Clinical and Pro Bono Programs and the Human Resources department of the U.S.

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Constitutional Law & Civil Rights; Legal History

Delivery Mode: Reading Group

Days and Times: Location

Thu 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM WCC4063

Course Description: Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: No Exam

Students will be required to submit one or two very short "reaction emails" based on the readings.

What makes a case great? Why do some cases take on a life of their own, requiring study and comment from every angle by generation after generation of lawyers, law professors, law students and students of the Supreme Court? In this reading group, we shall focus on great cases over the course of the history of the Court -- Marbury, Brown, Roe v. Wade, Loving, Miranda, Gideon, and others. The predominant focus will be to discuss the historical context surrounding these cases and dissect them in a manner that will inform their role in the Courts history. The majority of the readings will be the cases.

Note: Meeting dates are as follows: September 6, 13, 20, October 11, 25, and November 1.

Add/Drop Deadline: August 28, 2018.
LLM Students: LLM students may apply to this clinic by submitting an application.
Placement Site: Either HLS or GBLS (downtown Boston).
For thirty years, the Harvard Immigration and Refugee Clinic (HIRC), in partnership with Greater Boston Legal Services (GBLS), has focused on direct representation of individuals applying for U.S. asylum and related relief, as well as representation of individuals who have survived domestic violence and other crimes and/or who seek avoidance of forced removal in immigration proceedings (i.e., VAWA, U-visas, Cancellation of Removal, Temporary Protected Status, etc.). HIRC is also involved in appellate and policy advocacy at the local, national, and international levels.
HIRC students take the lead in representing clients from all over the world who are seeking protection from being returned to human rights abuses in their country of origin, protection from exile after years of living in the United States, or reunification with their families. About forty students are placed each year with HIRC either at Harvard or at its partner clinic, Greater Boston Legal Services, Bostons oldest legal services organization (located in downtown Boston). Students typically work between sixteen and twenty hours per week (4-5 clinical credits).
Students who have taken the course "Emerging Issues in Refugee Protection: The Representation of Child Asylum Seekers" may request a clinical seminar waiver by contacting the clinic directly.

The Harvard Legal Aid Bureau is a student-run civil legal aid organization composed of approximately 50 second and third year Harvard Law School students who provide free civil legal services to a diverse population of low-income clients in the Greater Boston area. Students are supervised by practicing attorneys with extensive public interest and private practice experience, who train students, accompany them to court, provide strategic advice, and assist in case management. The Bureau specializes in four major areas of practice: housing law, including evictions and housing discrimination; family law, including divorce, child custody, paternity, visitation, support, and Special Immigrant Juvenile Status issues; fair wage law, including nonpayment or underpayment of wages; and government benefits law, including appeals of the denial or termination of unemployment or social security disability benefits. Because the Bureau is student-run, students take the lead in setting organizational policy and exploring potential new areas or modes of practice. Enrollment is by application during the spring of the students 1L year; participants commit to at least 20 hours per week of clinic work for the following two academic years.

LLM Students: Due to the pre-requisite, LLM students are not eligible to enroll.
Placement Site: HLS.
Students in the Harvard Negotiation and Mediation Clinical Program (HNMCP) work on advanced client matters related to negotiation, mediation, and conflict management. For example, students may assist an organization in conducting a conflict assessment, designing a dispute resolution system, assessing an ongoing set of dispute management processes, or resolving a current conflict or series of conflicts. In some instances, clinic teams design and deliver a tailored negotiation/mediation curriculum, offer strategic negotiation advice, or conduct a mediation or consensus-building session. In addition to applying the skills and concepts learned in Negotiation Workshop, students will develop a new set of skills that may include conducting interviews for stakeholder assessments, facilitating learning dialogues, running focus groups, leading teams, and presenting to clients. Each semester the clinic will offer a mix of public, private, domestic, and international projects. Past clients include federal and state agencies, nonprofits, religious organizations, transnational corporations, small start-up companies, professional sports teams, municipalities, local government officials, and universities.
Students in the clinic will have the chance to manage senior level client relationships and are asked to work through difficult concepts and problems directly with clients and their clinical supervisor. Students work in a team of 2 to 4 students, typically collaborating on single project for one client during the entire semester. By working for a single client, students have the unique chance to collaborate on a project from start to finish. For a listing of current and past clinic clients, please visit the HNMCP website.
The Negotiation Workshop is a required prerequisite for the Negotiation and Mediation Clinic.

Since its enactment in 2010, the Affordable Care Act has had enormous effects upon insurers, businesses, medical practitioners, and individual consumers of health care. It has also had significant consequences in the areas of constitutional law, statutory interpretation, and administrative law. In this reading group, we will examine health care reforms broader implications for these domains of public law. Our primary focus will be on the Affordable Care Acts statutory and regulatory framework and on the legislative, administrative, and judicial responses to that framework.

Note: This reading group will meet on the following dates: 9/11, 9/25, 10/2, 10/16, 10/30, 11/13

Drop Deadline: September 12, 2018 by 11:59 pm EST

Exam Type: No Exam

Health care has become a dominant political issue in contemporary America - to the point of swaying national elections and consuming congressional calendars. Underlying this political debate is the fundamental question whether Americans enjoy a basic entitlement to health care. This course will briefly trace the history of the American conception of health care rights through the last half-century of administrative and political cycles. We will contrast a diverse array of ideological perspectives over this progression to understand the context of the current climate.

Building on this background, we will consider a broad range of rights-affording sources across the landscape of the modern American health care system: Federal civil rights statutes; the laws and agreements that govern public and private health insurance arrangements; data privacy and ownership rights; and other state and federal statutes that govern health care consumers, insurers, institutions and spending. We will also consider negative rights in the context of the now defunct individual mandate of the Affordable Care Act and relevant Religious Freedom Restoration Act developments. We will place congressional and common law health care rights provisions in the broader context of civil rights jurisprudence, including anti-discrimination regimes. Applying a lens of civil rights and enforcement to these sources of law, we will consider differing avenues available to achieve enforcement of health care rights, including through administrative and policy-based advocacy, as well as more formalized litigation.

The seminar is designed to be limited lecture, incorporating debates, role-plays, and other interactive sessions. Class participation is expected. The seminar will culminate in a student project arising from the course materials. Students will have the option of further honing their health care rights skills by participating in the Health Law and Policy Clinic in conjunction with this seminar.

The seminar will appeal to law students interested in working across the spectrum of the health care field generally, to those interested in the intersection between law and health care, and to those who aspire to be civil rights lawyers.

Some seats are reserved for students in the fall Health Law and Policy clinic. If a student drops the fall Health Law and Policy clinic, they will also lose their reserved seat in this course. Please note that this course has an early drop deadline for students enrolled in reserved clinical seats.

Health Law and Policy Clinic of the Center for Health Law and Policy Innovation

Course #: 8033 Term: 2018FA Faculty: Greenwald, Robert Credits: 5.00

Type: Clinic Subject Areas: Health Law; Procedure & Practice

Delivery Mode: Clinic

Days and Times: Location

Course Description: Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.
Enrollment in this clinic will fulfill the HLS JD pro bono requirement.
Required Class Component: Students in the fall clinic must enroll in either Public Health Law and Policy (2 fall classroom credits) OR Health Care Rights in the Twenty-First Century (2 fall classroom credits).
Students who enroll in the fall clinic will be enrolled in one of the required courses by the Office of Clinical and Pro Bono Programs. Students are guaranteed a seat in one of these two required courses, but are not guaranteed their first choice.
Additional Co-/Pre-Requisites: None.
By Permission: No.
Add/Drop Deadline: August 28, 2018.
LLM Students: LLM students may apply to this clinic by submitting an application.
Placement Site: HLS.
Students enrolled in the Health Law and Policy Clinic will work on cutting-edge legislative, regulatory and litigation projects at the state and national levels aimed at increasing access to quality, comprehensive health care for low-income individuals and families. Student projects involve: informing current debate on health reform efforts; providing law and policy analysis to national and state coalitions advocating to protect Medicaid, Medicare and discretionary health and public health programs; investigating best practices for initiatives to address health disparities and reduce barriers to health care for our most vulnerable populations; and litigating to address unfair and discriminatory public and private health insurance practices.
National level work involves advising government actors and leading chronic illness and disability partnerships to promote health and public health reform initiatives. State level work (currently in Massachusetts, Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Texas) allows students the opportunity to travel to facilitate trainings and meetings and to support advocacy and litigation strategy development on a broad range of current health and public health concerns. (See the clinic website at www.chlpi.org for a more in-depth description of current clinic projects.)
Over the course of a semester, students gain a wealth of hands-on experience in current and emerging health law and policy issues, and develop written products such as fact sheets, in-depth reports, comment letters, testimony, presentations, draft legislation, regulatory guidance and litigation-oriented document production. Students have the opportunity to develop a range of problem-solving, policy analysis, research and writing, oral communication, advocacy and leadership skills.
Students who would like to participate in the clinic must enroll through clinical registration. Clinical placements are available for 3, 4, or 5 clinical credits. Students who enroll in the clinic will also be enrolled in the required seminar (Public Health Law and Policy or Health Care Rights in the Twenty-First Century, 2 fall classroom credits) by the Office of Clinical and Pro Bono Programs. Their enrollment in this seminar is dependent on their clinical enrollment (should they drop the clinic, they will also be dropped from the seminar).
For more information about the clinic please email Professor Robert Greenwald at rgreenwa@law.harvard.edu or visit our clinical suite in the WCC 3130.

Course Description: Prerequisites: None

Exam Type: No Exam

This seminar will feature the presentation and discussion of cutting edge scholarship on health law, health policy, biotechnology and bioethics. The evaluation mechanism is that students must submit brief written comments on a number of the papers during the course. Because the papers are different every term, students can take the class as many times as they wish. Presenters will come from a wide range of disciplines and departments, and papers may feature doctrinal, economics, philosophical, political science, or other methods, but students need not have prior training in these disciplines. To determine whether this workshop is a good fit for their interests, students are encouraged to browse the listing of papers presented in past years that can be found here:

Hedge and Private Equity Funds: Law and Policy

Course #: 2768 Term: 2019SP Faculty: Spamann, Holger; Mital, Manish Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Business Organization, Commercial Law, and Finance

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times: Location

Mon 3:00 PM - 5:00 PM PND101

Course Description: Prerequisite: One of the following courses is required as a prerequisite: Bankruptcy, Corporate Finance, Corporations, Securities Regulation, or Taxation.

Exam: No Exam

Instead of an exam, students will write a 15-page paper on an assigned topic due on the last day of class.

This class will introduce private investment funds — namely hedge and private equity funds and related investment vehicles — from the practitioner’s perspective, and discuss the foundational issues of corporate, securities, regulatory, and tax law that they raise. The course will begin by introducing and defining these funds. The first part of the class will then examine the main structural issues relating to such funds’ organization, investments, internal operations, and relationships with investors. A particular focus will be the impact of regulations on structure, and the considerations and policy concerns of institutional investors. The second part of the class will survey issues raised by the intersection of funds with markets and the economy, in particular their relationship to the financial services industry and to the real economy. This part will consider externalities—positive and negative—of fund strategies, including systemic risk. The course will conclude with a macro perspective on the future of the fund industry.

Through reading materials, course discussions, and guest lectures, students will gain insight into the perspective of fund managers, advisors to these managers and their funds, investors in such funds, those who transact with such funds, and those who regulate the fund industry. One theme that will emerge is that fund strategies are at the center of many of the most pressing current issues in corporate and financial law. Funds drive industry transformations and undergird market efficiency but also continually attempt to exploit loopholes in the current regulatory and tax regime. They thereby expose the fault lines of the current regulatory and tax structure, which the course will reexamine. Sessions will be a mix of lectures and class discussions, and a number of sessions will feature guests with particular industry expertise.

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times: Location

Mon 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM LEW202

Course Description: Prerequisites: None
Exam Type: No Exam
This seminar will examine the history of policing in the United States. Topics include the emergence of a uniformed police force in the nineteenth century, the police professionalization movements of the Progressive Era and twentieth century, law enforcement during Prohibition, militarization, and the rise of community policing in the 1980s. We will consider the extent to which trends in American policing have been unique or reflected broader global shifts in law enforcement; the dynamic relationship between police practices and judicial rules governing state power; the role of unions; the relationship between municipal police forces and more specialized federal agencies; and the roles of race, class, and gender in law enforcement. Students may choose to submit either one longer seminar paper or two shorter papers over the course of the semester.

Course Description:

Laws, regulations and online privacy continue to clash and are on a collision course. Privacy issues, for better or for worse, are now front and center in the news, and in users everyday lives, perhaps as never before. Consumers are increasingly dissatisfied with the unspoken bargain that led to third party misuses of their data and are demanding greater rights to control how such parties collect and use their personally identifiable information ("PII"). Although policymakers may disagree on desired outcomes, it is clear that privacy law is facing a certain sea change.

This course will be conducted in a highly interactive discussion format. We will focus on various hot topics in privacy as a vehicle to examine these online collisions. Digital privacy has largely existed today under the model of industry self-regulation. But new laws and regulations have emerged to address the increasing misuses of PII and the unintended consequences that follow from technology and innovation. We will explore some possible causes for this shift, including whether platforms, intermediaries and tech companies may have knowingly or unknowingly contributed to the dramatically changing privacy environment.

We will take a look at governments acting as "Big Brother" and how governments may be using technology to invade users privacy, including through facial recognition software, Stingray devices or IMSI- catchers, drones, license plate readers and warrantless searches of users' cell phones, laptops and electronic devices when they cross borders. We also will look at the complex ecosystem of private companies who increasingly act as "Little Brother." How have corporate uses of big data, technology, and devices (even if originally created for the larger public good), now individually and collectively enabled them to compile and mine nearly omniscient profiles of users' online lives? We will examine some of the latest disruptive technologies, including AI, digital assistants, medical devices, wearables and drones.

One hot topic is Europes General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR), with its steep fines. How is the European Data Protection Board using its enforcement powers and how are companies, users and other governments responding? We will do a deep dive into the GDPR, its extra-territorial applications, and the positive and negative consequences that follow from this broad regulation.

The course will also look at different players in the digital privacy ecosystem. We will have the chance to hear from one or two "privacy professionals" working in the Privacy Office of large corporations. We will hear their challenges, including addressing privacy laws many grey issues, data breaches, and the challenge of balancing the demands of the business with the companys privacy policy and broader reputational interests. We will also hear from digital rights activists at nonprofits who are front and center in protecting users online privacy.

For the sake of focus, this course will largely focus on digital privacy chiefly outside the area of healthcare (e.g., HIPAA) although larger implications of healthcare on privacy rights will be included. Likewise, we will primarily be examining the U.S. and EU privacy landscape, although examples from other jurisdictions may also come into play.

This course will provide an introduction to U.S. housing law and policy with a focus on low- and moderate-income tenants and homeowners. We will examine the state of public housing and federal housing subsidies; code enforcement; foreclosures and neighborhood stabilization; gentrification and displacement; affordable housing development; fair housing and racial segregation; and evictions and access to justice. The class will draw on students experiences in clinical placements and other professional settings as well as the perspectives of a variety of players in the housing market -- among them developers, tenants, organizers, lobbyists, judges, government officials, and practicing lawyers -- who will appear as guest panelists. Through this course, students will develop the background necessary to understand and evaluate the various strategies that housing advocates and activists are using - or might use - to promote housing justice in the United States. The impact of housing law and policy on real people and communities is best understood through a combination of classroom work and practice in the field. Students are therefore encouraged, before or during this course, to apply for membership in the Harvard Legal Aid Bureau (during the Spring of 1L year) or to enroll in the Housing Law Clinic or the Predatory Lending and Consumer Protection Clinic at the WilmerHale Legal Services Center. The course is appropriate for students pursuing graduate work in other disciplines, including government, design, education, and business, and cross-registrants are welcomed.

As part of a broad coalition of legal services providers and community organizers, The Housing Clinic represents low-income tenants who are facing eviction and at risk of homelessness. Students defend evictions and prosecute affirmative cases to improve housing conditions and prevent utilities terminations. Students engage very actively in client interviewing and counseling, fact investigation, pre-trial discovery (including the taking and defending of depositions), negotiation, and motion practice, as well as trying cases in court. Students also have the opportunity to engage in community lawyering and mobilization efforts with long term community partners and to work on legislative and other law reform initiatives. Students participate in a Boston Bar Association Attorney for the Day Program and offer "game day" advice to unrepresented litigants in Housing Court on the day of the litigants hearing or trial. As eviction cases are first scheduled by rule on Thursday mornings, students find it helpful if they are available for clinic work on Thursdays (from around 8:30 to 1:00) as many opportunities arise through the Attorney for the Day Program to argue contested motions and negotiate live client cases.

Housing Clinic students may also participate in the Housing Justice for Survivors Project which represents tenants who are survivors of domestic violence and sexual assault. Housing Justice for Survivors clients may be facing loss of housing as a result of abuse, or may need to quickly relocate to safer alternative housing. Students provide trauma-informed representation to survivors facing housing instability as a result of abuse in a variety of different settings including: housing court, housing authority/administrative proceedings, and affirmative cases.

The clinic is part of the Legal Services Center (LSC), a general practice community law office in the Jamaica Plain neighborhood of Boston. LSCs diverse clinics provide clinical instruction to second- and third-year law students and serve as a laboratory for the innovative delivery of legal services. Students are taught and mentored under the supervision and guidance of clinic directors, instructors and fellows and have an opportunity to meet students and advocates working in many areas of the law.

The Housing Law Clinical Workshop provides students, who are enrolled in the Legal Services Centers Housing Law Clinic, with the practical skills and substantive knowledge necessary to effectively advocate for tenants in and out of the courtroom. Objectives of the course include: understanding the statutes, cases and rules applicable in foreclosure and housing law cases; enhancing student understanding of the professional roles, values and ethics involved in the practice of law; developing practical lawyering skills (such as interviewing clients, negotiating settlements, arguing motions, and introducing evidence); and analyzing and proposing advocacy approaches to contemporary housing law issues (such as post-foreclosure evictions). A large part of the workshop is hands-on and group-oriented; students engage in small and large-group exercises and discussions. Throughout the course, we work on a hypothetical case from the initial client interview through the final disposition of the case. In addition, students will prepare a memorandum and conduct a presentation on one of their ongoing active cases at the Legal Services Center and will lead class discussion on the case. There is no final examination or paper for this course. Students will be evaluated based on their preparation for and participation in class exercises and discussions, especially in student led case rounds discussions. The course considers some of the most pressing global issues of our time through an overview of the history, theory, and practice of international human rights law, as well as the related fields of international humanitarian and criminal law. It identifies decades-long tensions about the legitimacy and meaning of human rights, with a focus on how those tensions are manifested in the case law of adjudicatory and quasi-adjudicatory legal institutions created by international and regional treaties, as well as by domestic courts. Much of the course is organized around in-depth and comparative study of the adjudication of human rights claims about matters including racial, gender, and sexual equality; rights to property, housing, and health; rights of indigenous peoples; religion and culture; and humanitarian law. As a part of the course, students will work in teams to select, edit, analyze, and present a legal opinion on human rights to the rest of the class.

Course Description: Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.

Required Clinic Component: International Human Rights Clinic (3-5 fall clinical credits). Students enrolled in the fall clinic must enroll in either this clinical seminar or Armed Conflict and Civilian Protection (2 fall classroom credits). Students are not guaranteed their first choice of clinical seminars. Clinical seminar selection and enrollment occurs once a student has enrolled in the fall clinic and is orchestrated by the Office of Clinical and Pro Bono Programs. Additional Co-/Pre-Requisites: None. By Permission: No. Add/Drop Deadline: August 28, 2018. LLM Students: LLM students may apply to the clinic by submitting an application.

Human rights norms and discourse are employed widely by advocates around the world in their struggles for social justice. This course explores what it means to be a human rights advocate, whether one is engaged in debates over U.S. policy at home and abroad, the role of corporations in alleged violations, or the role of rights in times of transitions from conflict. Through case studies and simulations, this seminar examines the various dimensions and limitations of human rights advocacy, including strategic, ethical, and tactical challenges. What are the different ways that human rights can be used? In developing strategies for meaningful change, how do advocates decide which tactics to use and when? The goal is for students to develop core advocacy skills while thinking critically about their work. To that end, the seminar engages seriously with the major critiques and dilemmas faced by human rights advocates, in particular by lawyer-advocates from the Global North. The seminar also grapples with the limits of established approaches of the movement such as litigation, naming and shaming, and explores community lawyering and human rights. How do we engage without perpetuating power differentials along geopolitical, class, race, gender, and other lines? How do we find ways to work in collaboration with directly affected communities and movements? In addition to case studies, students workshop and reflect on their participation in supervised clinical projects, which include fact-finding investigations, media work, negotiations, advocacy, and litigation. Critical reflection will not be the end, but rather the means to find responsible ways of advancing justice.

Advocates around the world rely upon human rights law, language, and methodologies in the struggle for social justice. While human rights law provides guidance on an astonishing range of issues—corporate accountability in South Africa, transitional justice in Myanmar, healthcare in Brazil, criminal justice in the United States, immigration policy in Europe, and beyond—advocates nonetheless face a host of challenges and dilemmas when seeking to translate law into meaningful, sustainable change.
This seminar aims to be a critical, contextualized, and participatory exploration of what it means to be a human rights advocate, from a lawyer’s perspective. The course examines fundamental concepts, skills, and approaches to human rights advocacy, including the ethical, strategic, and legal dimensions of this work. Through case studies, role plays, and guided discussion, we will grapple with tough questions that confront every human rights practitioner, including:
• What is the proper mandate of a human rights advocate?
• What is responsible, effective human rights advocacy?
• What are appropriate responses to critiques of the human rights movement?
• How can human rights be harnessed to successfully influence and change behavior?
• Is it possible to engage in human rights advocacy without perpetuating power differentials along geopolitical, class, race, gender, economic, and other divides?
• How does an advocate forge meaningful, collaborative partnerships with individuals and communities directly affected by abuse?
• What skills and methodologies are best suited to lawyering in the human rights field?
• How can human rights advocates practice self-care and cultivate resilience and optimism in the face of such challenging work?
This course is designed to encourage critical evaluation of the human rights movement, as well as the implications for practice today, while learning how to responsibly advance social justice. Students will workshop and reflect on their participation in supervised clinical projects, which provide rich material for discussions about skills such as fact-finding, media outreach, advocacy, constituency-building, and litigation. Students will also consider a series of identity-based dynamics (e.g., north/south, insider/outsider, donor/donee, lawyer/non-lawyer) that influence how and why advocacy is formulated and received. Finally, students will consider the limits of the human rights paradigm and its established methodologies, as well as alternative models and forms of advocacy, including the role of community lawyering in the human rights context.

Human Rights and Community Lawyering

Course #: 2360 Term: 2018FA Faculty: Atuguba, Raymond Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Human Rights; International, Comparative & Foreign Law; Legal Profession, Legal Ethics & Professional Responsibility

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times: Location

Mon 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM WCC3038

Course Description: Prerequisites: None

Exam Type: No Exam

"Human Rights" has become the "opium of the [poor] people", providing "a high", a "boom", and then a "dislocation". So, enter "Community Lawyering", a "very ambitious undertaking", "opaque and difficult", to assist. Innovative and compelling, Community Lawyering has a huge capacity for radical, significant, progressive change. Yet, it has hidden within its interstices, a broad breadth for not-so-easy-to-resolve tensions and then trade-offs. In recent times, it is not just poor, rural, underserved communities that are in need of Community Lawyering; rich, urban, upscale communities increasingly do, further muddying the waters.

In this seminar, and against this backdrop, we will locate ourselves at the intersection of the two concepts of "Human Rights" and "Community Lawyering", and examine how the rhetoric, language, and practice of Human Rights redefines, retrofits, re-energizes, and empowers communities of ideas, peoples, places and practice. We will also examine instances when it achieves the opposite.

Using student-led presentations on Community Lawyering efforts across the globe (successes and failures alike), we will explore deep theoretical questions about lawyering, activism, social movement, community, "em-power-ment", public interest, human rights, social justice, development, and their opposites.

This course will examine how visual representations affect the theory and practice of human rights advocacy and humanitarian efforts. Using both film screenings and written texts, we will examine the role of documentary storytelling and imagery in the human rights movement and the continued interconnectedness of media and advocacy in some of todays most pressing human rights issues. How have representations of human suffering simultaneously informed and reformed the social meanings we ascribe to them? This course will explore the visual representations that directly affect public recognition of rights and wrongs.
Additional time reserved for viewing films.
Note: This reading group will meet from 5-8pm on Tuesdays from January 29 through March 5.

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times:	Location
Thu 9:30 AM - 11:30 AM	WCC1019
Fri 9:30 AM - 11:30 AM	WCC1019

Course Description: Prerequisite: None. Students who have taken the International Human Rights course may not take this course.

Exam Type: In Class

This course examines critically what it means to embody human rights conceptions in law at the international level, and how human rights law can be implemented through cooperation among national and international institutions. Topics will include the historical origins of modern human rights law; background international law rules that structure human rights law; connections between civil, political, social, and economic rights; comparative discussion of some specific human rights; and global and regional methods of oversight and enforcement. The course will pay particular attention to the UN Human Rights Committee and to the relationship between the United States and the international human rights system.

Please note that laptops and other electronic communications devices may not be used in class.

Note: This is one of the 1L required international/comparative law courses and is only available to HLS first-year and LLM students.

Course Description: Prerequisite: By permission of instructor. Students who have taken either the 1L or upper-level International Human Rights introductory course at HLS do not actually need special permission to enroll, but for technical reasons they should contact the instructor so that he can facilitate registration; other students who have not taken that course but believe that they have equivalent preparation may contact the instructor for permission to enroll. Auditing will not be permitted.

Exam Type: No Exam

Grading will be based on class participation and a series of short reaction papers.

This advanced seminar-style course will focus on selected topics relating to the work of the UN human rights treaty bodies, especially the Human Rights Committee (of which the instructor was previously a member). Topics vary from year to year, but may include such subjects as arbitrary detention, religious exemptions, military trials, forced evictions, "hate speech," rights of persons with disabilities, and international monitoring procedures. The course will meet six times during the semester, in two-hour sessions.

The course is required for LL.M. students in the LL.M. human rights concentration. Participation by J.D. students is also encouraged.

This seminar is for participants in the fall Immigration and Refugee Clinic and addresses substantive national and international refugee law, as well as advocacy skills relevant to students work at the clinic. The substantive portion of the seminar will provide an overview of international and domestic refugee law. It will examine selected topics typically encountered in the course of students casework in greater detail. Specific topics may include: The Refugee Convention and U.S. Law, Persecution and the Human Rights Paradigm, Issues of Credibility and Proof, and Gender-Based Asylum Claims. The skills component of the seminar will cover such areas as effective client interviewing, affidavit writing, cross-cultural lawyering, conducting immigration and human rights research, and preparation of cases and client testimony. In order to cultivate best practices in student advocacy and deepen the clinical experience, this seminar draws heavily for instructional examples on current clinical experiences of students (their actual cases and clients). It will also allow students to connect their understanding of refugee law and lawyering skills to actual casework through consideration of specific issues of doctrine and policy implicated by students cases. Students will have the opportunity to critically reflect on their experiences, models of advocacy, and social change. A clinical practice component is required of all students.
Students who have taken the course "Emerging Issues in Refugee Protection: The Representation of Child Asylum Seekers" may request a clinical seminar waiver by contacting the clinic directly.

Exam Type: No Exam

In 2007, the U.N. General Assembly adopted the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples. This ushered in a new era in Indigenous/State relations, with the international community overwhelmingly adopting a human rights-based approach to Indigenous Peoples issues. How did we reach this point in Indigenous/State relations and what does the Declaration signify for Indigenous Peoples rights in the future? This reading group will explore these and other related topics, such as the meaning of self-determination under international law and how indigenous rights are redefining this important human rights norm. The primary readings will be from Indigenous Peoples in International Law (S. James Anaya, Oxford Press) and The UN Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples: A Commentary (Oxford Commentaries on International Law). We will also consider cases filed with international and regional human rights bodies (such as the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights and the UN Special Rapporteur on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples) and explore how this advocacy is shaping the normative expression of rights under the Declaration and international law generally.

Tue 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM	HAU105

Course Description: Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: No Exam

Innovation in Legal Education and Practice will have students work in small teams to develop proposals for innovations in either legal education or legal practice. The course begins with exercises and teaching to create effective innovation teams. The course then introduces students to design thinking principles and tools in order to enhance their ability to innovate. The goal is to understand what makes for well functioning teams and how such teams can more quickly and more effectively reach innovative breakthroughs.

The second phase of the course focuses on providing support for student teams with the help of a variety of experts on legal education and legal practice. We will have informational sessions about various innovations happening in the law to help give context. Finally, as students develop focus for their projects, the faculty will actively coach them and provide them with learning around how to build and present an effective innovation proposal. Students will be challenged at the end of the semester to present their proposals in an interactive forum to panels of outside expert judges.

Presentations at the end of the course will be judged on the following criteria: innovation, practicality, impact, and quality of presentation. Students will also receive professional feedback on their ideas, and a significant amount of feedback throughout the course. Benefits of the course include the ability to leverage fellow team members strengths and experiences and to form close bonds with teammates.

Through the International Human Rights Clinic, students link theory with practice and learn core skills necessary to become effective and thoughtful human rights advocates. Students work on pressing and timely human rights problems around the world, in collaboration with leading international and local human rights organizations. Those in the Clinic have the opportunity to explore a range of approaches to advance the interests of clients and affected communities. For example, students interview survivors and document abuse; undertake legal, factual, and strategic analysis; and interact with media to build campaigns and advocate for human rights--all under the close supervision of the Clinics human rights practitioners. Students work in small teams on a variety of human rights projects and cases. When appropriate, students travel to investigate abuses or pursue advocacy outside Cambridge, participate in sessions before intergovernmental bodies and arguments before courts, and formulate policy to promote respect for human rights principles and the rule of law. In any given term, the Clinic delves into a wide range of issues, including extrajudicial executions, torture, and criminal justice; the unlawful use of cluster munitions and other weapons; civilian protection in armed conflict; sexual and reproductive rights; human rights and the environment; business and human rights; accountability litigation, including under the Alien Tort Statute and Torture Victim Protection Act; transitional justice; civil and political rights; economic, social, and cultural rights; and many more. Our clinicians have expertise in numerous regions and countries, including in Latin America, Southern Africa, Southeast Asia, and North America, including the United States. This wide range of skills, as well as thematic and geographic knowledge, exposes students to a variety of strategies and innovative techniques for promoting and protecting human rights. Fall clinic students must take either Human Rights Advocacy (2 fall classroom credits) or Armed Conflict and Civilian Protection (2 fall classroom credits). While each course is focused on a particular subject matter, both teach the key skills of human rights practitioners and include simulations related to fact-finding and field investigations, media work, and/or negotiation and legislative work. Clinical seminar selection and enrollment occurs once a student has enrolled in the fall clinic and is orchestrated by the Office of Clinical and Pro Bono Programs.

Through the International Human Rights Clinic, students link theory with practice and learn core skills necessary to become effective and thoughtful human rights advocates. Students work in small project teams on pressing and timely human rights problems around the world, in collaboration with leading international and local human rights organizations, as well as affected communities. Clinical students have the opportunity to explore a range of approaches to advance the interests of clients and affected communities. For example, students may interview survivors and document abuse; undertake legal, factual, and strategic analysis; and interact with media to build campaigns and advocate for human rights--all under the close supervision of the Clinics human rights practitioners. When appropriate, students travel to investigate abuses or pursue advocacy outside Cambridge, participate in sessions before intergovernmental bodies and arguments before courts, and formulate policy and legislation to promote respect for human rights principles and the rule of law. In any given term, the Clinic delves into a wide range of issues, including extrajudicial executions and torture; civilian protection in armed conflict; womens rights; human rights and the environment; business and human rights; accountability litigation; transitional justice; refugee rights and legal identity; civil and political rights; economic, social, and cultural rights; and many more. Our clinicians have expertise in numerous regions and countries, including in Latin America, Africa, the Middle East, Southeast Asia, and the United States. This wide range of skills, as well as thematic and geographic knowledge, exposes students to a variety of strategies and innovative techniques for promoting and protecting human rights.

Course #: 2177 Term: 2018FA Faculty: Engle, Karen Credits: 2.00
Type: Elective Subject Areas: Criminal Law & Procedure; Human Rights; International, Comparative & Foreign Law

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times:	Location
Wed 5:10 PM - 7:10 PM	WCC3013

Course Description: Prerequisites: None

Exam Type: No Exam

This seminar will study the relationship between international human rights and criminal law, with a focus on the relatively recent turn to individual criminal accountability as the primary means of enforcing human rights. This trend toward criminalization in human rights is in tension with the rising critique of criminal enforcement from both the left and the right in the United States. We will consider how and why human rights law and advocacy came to emphasize criminal prosecution, particularly as a way to "end impunity," in a variety of international and domestic contexts including transitional justice, gender-based violence, universal jurisdiction, and international criminal law. We will ask questions about why a reliance on criminal prosecution has developed in some areas more than others, and about how the turn to criminal prosecution might affect the priorities of the human rights movement and its ability to attend to other issues, such as economic inequality.

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times:	Location
Thu 1:15 PM - 2:45 PM	PND100
Fri 1:15 PM - 2:45 PM	PND100

Course Description: Prerequisite: Public International Law is recommended.

Exam Type: Any Day Take-Home

The law of war is one of the oldest branches of international law, but whether its centuries-old norms align with modern conflicts remains a contested area of legal practice and interpretation. This course will explore the primary branch of international law applicable to situations of armed conflict, often referred to as international humanitarian law (IHL) or the law of armed conflict (LOAC). We will examine foundational doctrines and concepts and then explore some of the foremost contemporary challenges. We will consider, for example, direct participation of civilians in hostilities; the geographic, temporal, material, and personal scope of armed conflict; the interplay between international human rights law, international criminal law, and IHL; and the relationship between the legal framework governing terrorism and IHL. We will investigate such questions as how does international law regulate the means and methods of warfare, protection of civilians, and humanitarian access in situations of armed conflict? How does international law classify and regulate different categories of armed conflict, and how does it distinguish armed conflicts from other situations of organized armed violence? How does the law seek to balance principles of military necessity and humanity? And how does the law address emergent technologies?

Note: This course will meet in various rooms throughout the term. Please contact the faculty or faculty assistant for more information.

Course Description: Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.

Prerequisite: The course is open to 2Ls, 3Ls, LLMs, and SJDs. No prior courses required, although broad familiarity with public international law and international commercial arbitration will be an advantage.

Exam Type: No Exam taken in Exam4, however, students will be asked to role play in a moot investment arbitration proceeding in lieu of the final examination.

In 1965, the World Bank adopted the Washington Convention, establishing the International Centre for Settlement of Investment Disputes (ICSID), and allowing private parties to resort directly to international arbitration against States for harm done to their investments. Since then, as a result of the wide adoption of bilateral and multilateral investment protection treaties, there has been an outbreak of investor-State arbitrations that neither the drafters of the Convention nor the international community at large had anticipated.

This course will explore where investment treaty arbitration stands today, after two decades of blooming and growth. In particular: Why have there been calls for reform and for the termination of investment protection treaties? To what extent has the interplay between investment arbitration and international law nourished each of these fields of law? How has the arbitral case law tackled the most complex questions of international law? These questions will be addressed through a deep immersion into the investment arbitration process, as well as through an examination of the concepts of jurisdiction and admissibility (notion of investment; nationality of investors, both physical and juridical persons; temporal application of treaties; abuse of process; etc.); the interaction between contractual and treaty breaches; treaty interpretation; and strategic options in investor-State arbitration.

Enrollment will be limited to 20. Only students who are prepared to make a firm commitment should enroll.

Note: This course will meet on the following dates: 10/29, 10/30, 10/31, 11/5, 11/6, 11/7, 11/12, 11/13, 11/14, and 11/19 from 5:00pm to 7:00pm; and on 11/20 from 5:00pm to 9:00pm.

Course Description: Prerequisites: Some background in international law is desirable, but not a formal prerequisite.

Exam Type: Any Day Take-Home

Investment treaties are some of the most controversial but least understood instruments of global economic governance. This course examines international investment law and investor-state arbitration. It addresses both substantive and procedural aspects of international investment law and arbitration, and explores their theoretical underpinnings and practical implications.

The course has three parts. Part 1 examines the historical origins and the economic and political rationales of the contemporary investment treaty regime. It focuses on the question of the costs and benefits of investment treaties for investors, states, and other stakeholders, and on why developed and developing countries entered into investment treaties. Part 2 examines substantive standards of investment protection such as non-discrimination and fair and equitable treatment. It also examines the host states right to regulate and the interaction of international investment law with other areas of international law such as international finance and international environmental law. Part 3 looks at investor-state arbitration, including jurisdiction, applicable law, interpretation, and remedies, as well as broader questions about the regimes functionality and legitimacy.

This course offers a rigorous introduction to the field of cyberlaw. We will investigate the evolving nature of online architecture and activities, and the ways in which law has been, and will be, leveraged to influence them.

Course themes include the complex interaction between Internet governance organizations and sovereign states, the search for balance between the ease of disseminating information online and the interest of copyright holders, privacy advocates, and others in controlling that dissemination, and the roles of intermediaries and platforms in shaping what people can and cannot do online. The course will entail an intense array of learning and teaching methods. Students will be expected to participate in a variety of activities. May include Berkman Center fellows and affiliates.

Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.
Required Clinic Component: Harvard Legal Aid Bureau 2L (4 fall clinical credits + 4 spring clinical credits). This clinic and course are bundled; your enrollment in the clinic will automatically enroll you in the required course.
Additional Co-/Pre-Requisites: Evidence and TAW. Students must enroll in Evidence and TAW separately from clinic enrollment.
By Permission: Yes. Applications are due to the clinic by March 19, 2018.
Add/Drop Deadline: July 30, 2018.
LLM Students: LLM students are not eligible to enroll.
Multi-Semester: This is a fall-spring course (2 fall classroom credits + 1 spring classroom credit).
This course introduces students to civil law practice and is required for all 2L members of the Harvard Legal Aid Bureau. Student practice experience at the Bureau is the primary material for all class meetings and discussions. The goals of the course are: (1) to provide a strong foundation for developing lawyering skills; (2) to enhance student understanding of what lawyers do, with particular attention to professional role, values, and ethics; and (3) to develop skills of peer and self-assessment so that students will have the ability to continue to learn in practice after law school. The majority of class meetings will focus on specific lawyering tasks such as client counseling and interviewing, investigation of claims, negotiation, and argument and case presentation, as well as the civil legal aid system and management of a major legal aid organization. With respect to each skill studied, attention will be paid to the ethical, relational, strategic, and tactical issues involved. Additional class sessions, led by Bureau Clinical Instructors, will provide opportunities for analysis of the substantive and procedural law applicable to the students clinical practice; development of litigation skills through role-play exercises; and rounds of discussions of challenging issues in the students casework.
There will be no examination, but students are expected to attend all class sessions and complete a final project or paper that addresses an ethical or professional issue related to their casework, the course readings, or other aspects of the legal profession.
Enrollment in this course is restricted to 2L Harvard Legal Aid Bureau members and will not be in clinical registration. The Office of Clinical and Pro Bono Programs will enroll all HLAB 2L members in this course. The classroom component of this clinical course satisfies the Law Schools professional responsibility requirement.

Introduction to Social Entrepreneurship combines both theory and practice with an end goal of equipping young lawyers to create a positive social impact.

First, the course covers the key fundamentals of the social enterprise movement as well as substantive cutting-edge legal doctrine relevant to the sector. Using the "case study method" typically used in MBA classes, students will examine the challenges of starting, counseling, serving, assessing and funding social ventures through the eyes of the entrepreneur, investor, attorney, board member and community leader.

The course provides an overview of the emergence and definition of social entrepreneurship and will explore the intricacies of establishing mission / vision / values, legal structures for both non-profit and for-profit social ventures, managing and sustaining growth, board governance, the profit and purpose tension, impact investing and creating shared value. This basic knowledge set will inform any student who seeks to advise, launch, and /or serving on the board of a social enterprise. By engaging with these case studies, students also learn the basics of leadership and management decision-making.

Second, the course provides an intensive introduction to consulting for a social enterprise on a student consulting team. Students have an opportunity to put their newly-learned skills into practice as they are grouped into teams and are partnered up with a social enterprise to help them solve a specific, real-time challenge they are facing. In the past, the challenges have been in the areas growth, revenue, marketing, programmatic issues, scale and legal complexities.

This experiential learning will not only give the students an opportunity explore innovative social enterprises through project-based, work opening their eyes to the realities of operating a social enterprise, but will also improve their skills in problem solving and client services.

During the Spring semester students will work on the written memo with their student consulting team. The Spring Term will culminate with the completion of the written report and a final presentation.

Note: The credit breakdown for this course is as follows: three total credits with two credits awarded in the winter and one credit awarded in the spring.

Please note Introduction to Trial Advocacy will not satisfy the Trial Advocacy Workshop pre-requisite requirements for upper-level clinics.

Exam Type: No Exam

In the U.S. legal system, a trial is the principle mechanism designed to resolve disputes between adverse parties. Partisan advocates on either side of an issue present evidence to a neutral arbiter - usually a jury, which, in turn acts as a finder of fact. An impartial judge decides matters of law and manages the trial process.

Trial Advocacy is both art and science. At bottom, an effective advocate paints a word picture of an historical event for strangers who were not percipient witnesses to the disputed event. Creating a compelling narrative is an art, which through study and practice, can be developed and mastered. The technique and structure of examinations, statements, and argument is in form similar to a science. It is tried and true method, which through study and practice, can be developed and mastered.

This course is an introduction to effective advocacy. It focuses on predicate areas of advocacy not traditionally covered in trial advocacy courses. ITA begins with a study of case theory. Case theory, as the phrase suggests, represents the narrative an advocate advances to persuade a fact finder to accept the advocates narrative. The course then moves to lawyer-client interaction, including the initial interview, and the thorny ethical issues that relationship may, on occasion, entail. Finally, the course teaches two of the most important tools in the trial lawyers toolkit, direct and cross examination.

Note: There may be days throughout the winter term that require attendance beyond the scheduled times. Please refer to the course syllabus and page for more information.

Quantitative research methods are increasingly used in the legal field. The purpose of this class is to provide an introduction to research design and the statistical methods employed in analyzing research data in the social sciences and legal fields. The course is hands-on and applied in nature, during which students learn to use Stata for data and graphical analysis and design surveys in Qualtrics. We will cover hypothesis testing, types of variables, bias and randomization and learn how to compute, interpret and report a variety of univariate statistics (such as mean, median, mode, and standard deviation) and bivariate statistics (t-test, z-test, chi2 and Anova). In the beginning of the class we will conduct a survey through Qualtrics/MTurk and use the Stata statistical software to analyze the derived data throughout the semester by applying various statistical methods. There are homework assignments, midterm and final exams. Close to the end of the class, students are expected to produce an empirical research paper and present their work to the class. No prior empirical background is required.

Prerequisites: Sound understanding of financial statements and valuation topics/models. The admission is by permission only and interested students should send a resume and a cover letter to the instructor at vbosiljevac@law.harvard.edu. In the cover letter interested students should explain why they want to take the class and outline their experience with financial statements, valuation and modeling. The deadline for upper-level JD and LLM applications is November 5. The deadline for 1L applications is November 15. Cross-registrants with are encouraged to apply - the deadline for them is January 20, 2019.

Exam Type: No Exam

This class (designed as a workshop) is intended for students who want to deepen and expand their knowledge of applied finance topics and concepts with a focus on equity investments in public and private markets. Students will explore these topics through case studies where they are asked to analyze potential investments using hedge fund and private equity tools and strategies. These case studies will span across different industries (e.g. technology/internet, retail, consumer goods, healthcare, industrials, etc.) and different geographies (developed and emerging markets). However, the primary focus will be the US. After learning various investment methodologies in the first part of the course, students (working in teams of two) will be required to independently develop (with inputs and feedback from the instructor) and pitch two investment theses/ideas in their industry of choice. That investment thesis will be thoroughly discussed (and challenged) in class. Active class participation is required. There will be no final exam.

LLM Students: International students on F-1 student visas are required to have Curricular Practical Training (CPT) authorization; LL.M. students are not eligible for CPT.
This weekly seminar examines through participant observation the functioning of the judicial process in our trial courts with special attention to different judicial roles in different trial courts. The focus of the class is on the various roles (adjudicatory, administrative, sentencing, educational and symbolic) that judges play in these courts. Students have the unique opportunity to observe and discuss the work of their assigned judges in a clerkship-type setting. Students are also expected to assist their judges with legal research and writing. The contributions of various scholars to understanding the work of judges in these courts is reviewed as well as distinct proposals for reform. Because of the variety of judicial placements, attention is also paid to common issues such as judicial accountability, judicial ethics, ADR, juries, and court innovations like treatment courts and restorative justice.
A fifteen to twenty page paper describing some aspect of the judiciary's work in these courts is required and serves as a basis for each student's grade. Three short reflective papers are also required during the semester.

Students undertake clinical fieldwork study of judicial performance through clerkship-like clinical placements with individual justices of the District Court, Boston Municipal Court, Juvenile Court, Housing Court, Land Court and Superior Court Departments of the Massachusetts Trial Court, as well as federal judges in the U.S. District Court and Immigration Court. Clinical students are expected to be available to do research and writing projects for their assigned judge, and are expected to observe and assist their judge for at least 2 clinical credits, or eight hours per week. Students may earn up to five credits for additional fieldwork hours spent with their judge.

Students must have at least one full day or two mornings available for their judicial placement. For more information, please contact Judge John C. Cratsley (Retired); cratsley@socialaw.com or jcratsley@law.harvard.edu.

Course #: 2140 Term: 2018FA Faculty: Goldberg, John Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Disciplinary Perspectives & Law; Legal & Political Theory

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times: Location

Tue 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM HAU104

Course Description: Prerequisites: None.

Exam Type: Any Day Take-Home
Course work consists of regular class attendance and participation and an any day take-home exam.

This course will introduce and explore basic themes in jurisprudence, including: (i) the relation among moral, political, and legal judgments; (ii) the nature of legal reasoning and its relation to other types of reasoning (moral reasoning, empirical scientific reasoning, and logical and mathematical reasoning); the role of reason and rationality in legal decision-making. Theories surveyed include "formalism," legal realism (e.g., O.W. Holmes, Jr., Karl Llewellyn, Felix Cohen), natural law (e.g., Lon Fuller, Ronald Dworkin, John Finnis), analytical legal positivism (e.g., H.L.A. Hart and Joseph Raz), and critical legal studies (e.g., Duncan Kennedy and Roberto Unger).

Readings are from legal theorists and philosophers, and illustrative materials from cases, statutes, and constitutional provisions.

The course does not require or presuppose any background in jurisprudence or philosophy. Some course materials explain and explore philosophical issues that are relevant to core jurisprudential questions.

Open to cross-registrants from other schools.

Course Description: Prerequisites: None
Exam Type: No Exam
The seminar will explore the ethical dilemmas of armed conflict, including the inherent difficulty of formulating a theory of jus ad bellum acceptable to all sides of a violent and massively destructive conflict. One aim will be to rethink the debate unleashed by Michael Walzers classic study, Just and Unjust Wars, in light of contemporary controversies about preventive war, targeted killing and humanitarian intervention. To achieve some level of historical concreteness, we will be focusing on the most recent wars. Finally, we will be devoting substantial attention to gratuitous violence and the psychological brutalization of combatants.

Evaluation: final take home essay.

How do ideas about law and science shape the contours of the contemporary world? Knowledge underwrites legal authority -- but how exactly? How do ideas about what is natural, right or ordained become powerful, hegemonic? Both law and science rely on experts to define the basic coordinates by which we locate ourselves and recognize each other, as members of collectives, actors in institutions, and selves possessing subjectivity. But how does each conceive the others role, and affirm or resist it? In this course, we will read and discuss literature from social theory, law, and science and technology studies that bears on these questions, alongside case studies that illuminate expertise in action in a variety of professional, scientific, and legal settings.

This course will focus on the statutory, judicial, and administrative law governing the collective organization of workers and the interaction between such collective organizations and employers. The course will introduce students to the basics of traditional labor law and will explore how labor law is evolving in response both to innovative forms of labor management relations and to changes in the composition of the U.S. labor force. The class will consider the legal status of privately negotiated processes for organizing and recognizing unions, state and local approaches to labor law innovation, and new forms of workplace organization. We will also explore the intersection of labor and immigration law, union participation in the political process, and emerging forms of worker organizing that rely not on the National Labor Relations Act but on other statutory regimes.

The social teaching of the Catholic Church--its teaching on political, economic, and legal justice, human dignity and rights, and the requirements of the common good--is a key part of its moral teaching. Since the Church is the largest single religious institution in the world, and an actor in its own right in public and international affairs, its teaching in this area is of significance and interest to people of all faiths and shades of belief. This seminar will examine the teaching, especially as it has been presented in the writings of popes beginning with the encyclical letter of Pope Leo XIII Rerum Novarum (1891) addressing the "revolutionary changes" confronting the Church and the world in the wake of the industrial revolution. Topics covered will include Catholic teaching on democracy and religious freedom and other human rights, and the Church's critiques of socialism and collectivism; laissez-faire capitalism and social Darwinism; scientific materialism and secularism; and expressive individualism; and its defenses of private property, the regulated market economy, and "subsidiarity."

Note: This seminar will meet over 8 sessions on the following dates: 9/5, 9/12, 9/19, 9/26, 10/24, 11/7, 11/14, 11/28.

This course is available to upper-level JDs, LLMs, and FAS graduate students.

In this workshop, students will have the opportunity to propose and develop short (10-minute) documentaries in collaboration with advisors and experts at The Boston Globe, and Joseph Tovaes, a media executive with extensive relationships in the documentary world. The goals are to strengthen the storytelling skills of emerging leaders, to encourage civic engagement and quality journalism informed by legal knowledge, and to foster the growth of innovative, quality, journalism attentive to analysis, facts, and competing points of view. Students will receive support from documentary makers, editors, and other professionals appropriate to the creation of films worthy of professional awards. Students will have the opportunities to learn about and contribute to new digital platforms and metrics for measuring viewer engagement and impact of documentaries.
Note: The workshop will have two organizational meetings in the fall (Tuesday, Oct. 30th at noon, and Friday, December 7th at noon) and will meet during winter term, with further work in the fall for students whose films are selected by the Boston Globe for distribution. Additionally, during the winter term there may be meetings with producers from the Boston Globe outside of regular class hours.

Course Description: Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: Last Class Take-Home

This course will explore past and present debates about the role of the legal order in economic development. We will explore the relationships among economic ideas, legal ideas and the development policies pursued at the national and international level in successive historical periods. We will focus on the potential for an alliance of heterogenous traditions from economics, law and other disciplines to understand development.

Open to all graduate students.

Law and Economics

Course #: 2146 Term: 2018FA Faculty: Kaplow, Louis; Shavell, Steven Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Disciplinary Perspectives & Law

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times:	Location

Course Description: Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: No Exam

This seminar will provide students with an opportunity to engage with ongoing research in the economic analysis of law. At most of the meetings, invited speakers--some from the Law School--will present works in progress. Students are required to submit, before sessions, brief written comments on the papers to be presented.

Enrollment in either or both terms is permitted. Some background in economics or law and economics is helpful; however, knowledge of technical economics is unnecessary.

Thu 10:00 AM - 11:30 AM WCC4059

Fri 10:00 AM - 11:30 AM WCC4059

Course Description: Prerequisites: None

Exam Type: No Exam

In this course we will explore concepts of inequality from a range of disciplinary perspectives. We will also consider meanings and effects of pernicious inequalities in several sociolegal contexts such as geography, race, and poverty/work/labor. Finally we will examine methodologies for "mapping" ways that various legal dynamics drive the genesis, elaboration, reinforcement and maintenance of hierarchies of privilege and disadvantage across individuals, groups, localities, regions and nations and more. As we identify key legal drivers in the production of specific adverse inequalities, we will also explore ways that changes in legal ordering might shift bargaining power, redistribute resources or otherwise ameliorate their negative effects. Students will work in clusters to research a domain of inequality and develop a legal inequality map of its drivers in order to analyze and engage with it.

Course Description: Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: In Class

This course will examine the various roles that law and legal institutions play in economic, social, and political development in both theory and practice. Its goal is to introduce students to some of the canonical writings on the subject and to critically examine ongoing debates in policy circles and academia by questioning their theoretical foundations and practical implications. While much of the law and development literature focuses exclusively on developing countries, this course seeks to place the debate about the role of law in development into a broader context and serves as an introduction to comparative legal institutional analysis.

Note: This is one of the 1L required international/comparative law courses and is only available to HLS first-year and LLM students.

Exam Type: No Exam
Face-to-face debates between candidates for President are a surprisingly recent development in American democracy, but have already surpassed all other campaign elements to become the most widely-viewed televised events in U.S. politics, and a successful American export to other democracies around the world. This seminar will study the legal, technological, cultural and political factors that created these debates, institutionalized them, and continue to shape them today. Topics will include the interaction between regulatory schemes and technological changes that have impacted political debates, the question of who "owns" these debates (and the consequences), the constitutional issues raised by the exclusion of non-major party candidates from debates, and the negotiation and enforceability of debate format agreements. The role of lawyers, and legal thinking, in formulating candidate debate strategies and in the preparation for debates will also be examined. The course largely focuses on U.S. Presidential general election debates, but will also study other political debates in the U.S., and campaign debates in other countries. The course concludes with a consideration of possible reforms of Presidential debates, and the legal, civic, technological and political factors that shape (and counsel for and against) such reforms. The seminar will hear from guest speakers from the Republican and Democratic perspective, as well as the media and non-partisan debate sponsors. Students will be assigned two short topical papers, a debate-format agreement negotiation exercise, and a longer final paper on debate reform. There is no final exam, but class participation is graded.

This seminar examines cutting edge and even controversial linkages between law and neuroscience. We seek to highlight neuroscientific basis for behavior patterns with legal implication including how neuroscience intersects with criminal law, its normative assumptions and criminal punishment, evidentiary rules, memory bias and enhancement, lie and deception detection, adolescent brains and juvenile law. We will look critically at efforts to use neuroimaging in court in connection with in the prediction of criminality and predispositions towards mental illness and addiction, as well as efforts to identify neurobiological influences on the brain. Is there such a thing as a criminally violent brain? Does it make sense to speak of the neurobiology of violence or the psychopathology of crime, and how are (or should) such concepts translated into criminal law. The seminar will necessarily lead us to consider the relationship between law and science, more generally, and neuroscience in particular. Speakers will provide insights into their work and research.

Course Description: Prerequisites: None

Exam Type: No Exam

Students will be asked to write short papers (1-2 pages) on each weeks readings. There will be no required final examination or term paper.

Love, jealousy, guilt, anger, fear, greed, compassion, hope, and joy play important roles in the lives of lawyers and those with whom they interact. The most effective lawyers are not just good thinkers, they are also empathic students of human emotions. This seminar will offer students a chance to explore what is missing from the traditional law school rational actor model of human nature through discussion of readings, primarily from psychology (but with contributions from economics, biology, philosophy, and literature), about the nature and operation of the emotions, the use of emotion in persuasion and negotiation, emotions and the good life, and the role of emotions in moral and legal decision making.

Using case studies, we will examine how social movements and organizations have worked with legal tools and institutions to push for changes not only in law but also in social life. Examples may include: racial justice, childrens rights, rights for persons with disabilities, LGBT rights, environmental protection, tobacco use, efforts to legalize use of school vouchers for religious schools, Prohibition (alcohol) and efforts to regulate access to pornography. In multiple short papers, students will have opportunities to explore past and current efforts and to assess successes and failures.

For an extra credit, a limited number of students may undertake related independent research projects.

This course is designed to introduce first-year students to the architecture of the international economic law system. Its emphasis is on elements of international law that affect cross-border economic transactions and deals. The first part of the course examines the nature and sources of international law. The course then shifts to provide an overview of international commercial litigation, the trade and investment regimes, and emergent areas such as international regulation of corruption and corporate social responsibility.

The course will introduce students to the various types of law that affect cross-border transactions (bilateral and multilateral treaties, customary international law, domestic law, foreign law, and hard/soft law) as well as the various dispute resolution mechanisms available to resolve cross-border disputes (including domestic courts, international courts, international commercial arbitration, and investor-state disputes).

Course Description: Prerequisite: Negotiation Workshop and permission of instructors.

Exam Type: No Exam

Lawyers facilitate. In contemporary practice, lawyers constantly work on matters that require groups of people to work together in order to solve problems, reach decisions, and resolve conflicts. This group work can include collaborating with lawyers and clients to develop complex legal strategies and coordinating with colleagues around duties and responsibilities. Lawyers may work with corporate and non-profit boards to make a decision or improve the decision-making process. Facilitation may include working with community stakeholders, multiple family members, or local officials to increase understanding, resolve a dilemma, or re-build trust. The typical lawyer in the U.S. will spend at least 10,000 hours in meetings during her/his professional career. And yet, few lawyers receive training in how to organize, run, and facilitate gatherings of people.

This 4-credit workshop introduces students to the theory and practice of facilitation, both in traditional legal as well as non-legal contexts. It also provides opportunities for students to develop the skills necessary for their role as a facilitator, whether a facilitator of meetings, with people in conflict, or with groups problem-solving together. Through simulations, exercises, readings, discussions, and videos, students will practice facilitation and will explore some of the challenges and dilemmas of this important, but often neglected, lawyering skill.

The Lawyer as Facilitator Workshop is scheduled for TBD. Enrollment will be limited to 12 students, selected by application (see more information on the application procedure below). A full schedule will be made available during the first week of class. Attendance at all sessions is mandatory in order to accommodate various group exercises and simulations.

Application Instructions:

To be considered for admission to the Facilitation Workshop, we ask you to submit a resume and a narrative statement of interest, no longer than one page, by March 30, 2018, to Tracy Blanchard . You will be notified by April 6, 2018 (before the elective registration begins), if you have been admitted into the Workshop.

The statement of interest should succinctly explain:

why you are interested in participating in the Facilitation Workshop;

what you hope to learn;

what you hope to contribute; and how you hope engaging in the Facilitation Workshop material will advance your professional interests.

Lawyering and Settlement

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Procedure & Practice

Delivery Mode: Reading Group

Days and Times:	Location
Tue 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM	WCC5050

Course Description: Prerequisites: None
Exam Type: No Exam
This reading group will examine lawyers roles with respect to the voluntary resolution of lawsuits. Settlement is, in many contexts, the most common conclusion for litigation. In what ways can lawyers add value to these outcomes? What level of visibility do (should?) clients have into the processes associated with settlement? How do (should?) clients exercise autonomy and informed choice in the context of the negotiations leading to settlement? What incentives, information asymmetries, procedural protections, ethical constraints, and practice norms serve to form the landscape within which settlement decisions are made? Lawyers roles are commonly viewed through the lens of traditional litigation, transactional, or compliance-focused practice. In what ways might we think of lawyering differently if we viewed it through the lens of settlement?

Many students come to Harvard Law School to learn to correct injustices they have experienced or observed. Lawyering promises to be a concrete method of social justice problem solving, a set of tools that the lawyer can use to make a positive difference. But what does it really look like to "lawyer for justice"? The strategies and tactics of public interest lawyers vary widely depending on their clients, their causes, their geography, and their own interests, talents, and expertise. How do you choose how to lawyer? What tools in the lawyers toolkit are best suited to your task? And what are the limits on the lawyers role? How do lawyers situate themselves in the ecosystem of change agents, offering their unique skills (and credentials) while making space to learn and benefit from other voices and methodologies?

This course will help first-year students explore these foundational questions through interactive sessions led by experienced practitioners teaching and lawyering in the HLS clinical programs and their community partners. Each day, a clinical teacher working on a different social justice problem - immigration, predatory lending, human rights, criminal justice, education, housing, building a solidarity economy, and more - will share their thoughts on what it means to lawyer for justice and will lead students through discussions and exercises that offer first-hand experience of a wide range of lawyering dilemmas and approaches. Collectively, the sessions will cover a diverse set of lawyering techniques, including impact litigation, legislative and policy advocacy, transactional work, community lawyering, media advocacy, system mapping, and the representation of individuals in proceedings in unjust systems. The course will end in a full-day "hackathon" in which students will apply human-centered design principles to the development of strategies and tactics to address one or more contemporary justice problems.

Capitalism cannot possibly be defined in economic terms alone. Many writers have highlighted specific institutional arrangements that characterize this system, including ownership of the means of production, labor relations, trade and exchange. Some writers have gone well beyond this and have described capitalism as essentially a legal system. This reading group will take a critical look at this line of scholarship and consider its implications for institutional reforms. Readings will include, among others, John Commons, Karl Polanyi, Geoffrey Hodgson, and Katharina Pistor.

Exam Type: No Exam. A research paper will be required rather than a final examination.
This seminar is designed for students who are genuinely interested in what has happened to them at law school and who would like to examine carefully the nature of their legal education. It is also a practical introduction to the many different careers available in legal education. We will commence with the English and Continental origins of legal scholarship and teaching, examine the development of formal legal education in America from the founding of the Litchfield and Harvard Law Schools to the rise of Legal Realism, and conclude with the pressing controversies facing Americas law schools today. Among the topics covered will be the relationship between formal legal education and the practicing bar, the changing composition of the faculty and the student body, the early pedagogical controversies, the different methods and ends of modern legal instruction, and the role played by law schools in fundamental disputes about jurisprudence, political ideology, economics, and social reform.
Note: This seminar will be jointly-listed with BC.

Ethical issues can arise in any type of practice and at any point in a lawyers work, often unexpectedly, in medias res. In this course, students will learn how to identify and respond to such issues. The course will focus on the types of problems a lawyer will encounter in daily practice, especially in litigation and transactional work, and on the rules of professional conduct, case law and other considerations that a lawyer is expected to take into account in resolving such issues. We will examine issues both from the perspective of a lawyer starting out in practice and a more experienced lawyer with supervisory responsibility, and will consider the different types of practice and the different institutional settings in which such problems arise. In addition, we will discuss challenges to the professions legal and regulatory framework posed by developments such as outsourcing, the continuing growth of large, multi-national law firms, the increasing role of in-house counsel, and innovations in the marketing of legal services.

This course considers three categories of materials. First, we will study the nature of professionalism in American society with readings and problems dealing with practical issues of professional responsibility faced by lawyers in the daily routine of private practice. Second, we will deal with issues faced by the profession as a whole, including the ways of providing effective legal services to all members of the community, regulation of competition, and the imposition of professional discipline. Third, we will also look at the organization and demographics of the profession, its units of practice, and what professional life is like in the twenty-first century. The course also invites students to address the questions: What kind of lawyer do I want to be, and to what kind of profession do I wish to belong?

This course offers a look at the organization, economics, operation, and ideology of the legal profession. We will discuss history, current trends and recent developments in the organization and operation of law firms, legal services offices, government legal offices, and corporate legal departments. We will consider professional autonomy, commercialism, and regulation (by clients, by the courts, and by regulatory agencies). We will contrast US legal practice and regulation with other professions in the US (e.g., medicine, accounting, engineering), as well as with legal practice and regulation in other countries, and the prospect for changes driven by globalization and cross-border trade in legal services. We will consider the effects of increasing demographic diversity on the profession. We will discuss ethical problems most often encountered in legal practice, and the effects of the regulation of legal practice on the organizations and institutions that deliver legal services. We will focus on issues and problems faced by entrepreneurs considering whether to start-up a new legal services organization.

Note: This course satisfies the Professional Responsibility requirement and will be included in the Legal Profession registration round. This course is only available to JD 3Ls and LLM students.

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times:	Location
Mon 8:30 AM - 10:00 AM	WCC1015
Tue 8:30 AM - 10:00 AM	WCC1015

Course Description: Students who enroll in this course may count the credits towards the JD professional responsibility requirement.
Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: In Class
Grades will be based principally on a final in-class examination but also, to some extent, on class participation or assigned classroom exercises.

This course considers three categories of materials. First, we will study the nature of professionalism in American society with readings and problems dealing with practical issues of professional responsibility faced by lawyers in the daily routine of private practice. Second, we will deal with issues faced by the profession as a whole, including the ways of providing effective legal services to all members of the community, regulation of competition, and the imposition of professional discipline. Third, we will also look at the organization and demographics of the profession, its units of practice, and what professional life is like in the twenty-first century. The course also invites students to address the questions: What kind of lawyer do I want to be, and to what kind of profession do I wish to belong?

The materials will be Kaufman and Wilkins, Problems in Professional Responsibility for a Changing Profession (6th edition and supplementary materials)), and Professional Responsibility Standards, Rules & Statutes (Dzienkowski, latest abridged edition).

Note: This course satisfies the Professional Responsibility requirement and will be included in the Legal Profession registration round. This course is only available to JD 3Ls and LLM students.

This course will explore the rules and the standards of professional responsibility and legal ethics through the lens of historical and modern examples of the challenges inherent in daily legal practice. We will draw on real world situations that confront lawyers as individuals and as members of larger organizations in a rapidly changing legal market in a variety of settings. We will examine the often competing pressures on lawyers and the standards of ethics that guide legal conduct, including reconciling the duties that lawyers have to their clients, to the courts, and to the bar as a whole. We will consider the ethics of invoking stereotypes and other strategies to advance a clients legal position, including in high profile trials and other narratives. In contemplating the kind of law you wish to practice and the kind of lawyer you want to be, we will explore issues of professional responsibility that arise as lawyers change jobs and areas of focus, in both the civil and the criminal settings, as plaintiff lawyers and defense lawyers, as criminal prosecutors, and as transactional lawyers. We also will consider lawyers professional responsibilities concerning access to justice, and the changing demographics of lawyers and clients. As we navigate each of these topics, we may discuss historical and literary perceptions of lawyers and their roles in society, and how these perceptions may inform your own career paths.

Whether in solo, small firm or not for profit legal aid offices, new modes of serving clients of modest means offer promise of expanded access to legal advice and assistance but also pose ethical and professional challenges for the bar. This course explores new modes of practice such as: discrete task representation (unbundled legal services), collaborative law practice, advice and hot line services, on-line advice services, virtual law practices, and participation in court based lawyer of the day and other on-site assistance for self-represented litigants. In addition to a focus on the law and ethics of the profession, we will consider the implications of a rapidly changing profession for legal education, law practice management, the response of the organized bar to less lawyer-centric services, assuring service quality, assessing the outcome and cost-effectiveness of different approaches to service delivery, understanding the legal needs of people of modest means, and assuring that prospective consumers of legal services understand the service options available to them. In lieu of a final exam, students will, in consultation with the course instructor, develop a research project that reports on and analyzes the ethics, efficacy, and feasibility of new approaches to service delivery.

Some seats are reserved for students in the fall Delivery of Legal Services clinic. Students who enroll in the fall Delivery of Legal Services clinic will be enrolled in this course by the Office of Clinical and Pro Bono Programs. If a student drops the fall Delivery of Legal Services clinic they will also lose their reserved seat in this course. Please note that this course has an early drop deadline of August 28, 2018 for students enrolled in reserved clinical seats.

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times: Location

Tue 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM WCC3016

Course Description: Prerequisites: None

Exam Type: No Exam

This seminar examines the changing nature of the legal profession. We will do so by engaging with leading academics and practitioners in a broad range of disciplines and settings who will present and discuss their work on cutting edge issues that are reshaping the profession and legal careers. Among the topics that the seminar will address are how globalization is reshaping the market for legal services particularly in Africa and other emerging economies, technology and other "disruptive innovations" in the market for legal services, diversity and inclusion in legal practice and legal education, new approaches to access to justice and professional development, and redesigning law schools and the workplace. Structured akin to a reading group, each session will revolve around an original piece of research on the legal profession relating to one of the themes. Students are required to write short response papers (around 2-pages) for each session, actively participate in the discussion, and to write a 10-page final paper on a topic relating to one of the seminars themes.

Note: This seminar will not satisfy the Professional Responsibility requirement.

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times: Location

Thu 4:00 PM - 7:00 PM WCC3019

Course Description: Students who enroll in this course may count the credits towards the JD professional responsibility requirement.
Prerequisites: This course is only available to JD 3Ls and LLM students.

Exam Type: Last Class Take-Home

In addition to the final exam, students will submit a one-page reading response for each class. Readings for the course will be photocopied materials.

The practice of law has been transformed in recent years by the emergence of Collaborative Law and the role of settlement counsel. In these new forms of practice, the lawyer focuses on problem-solving and achieving an interest-based solution that works for all parties. Collaborative Law practice has been approved as consistent with the ABAs Model Rules of Professional Conduct, in a 2007 opinion by the ABA Ethics Committee. This course examines how Collaborative Law meshes with the requirements of the ABAs Model Rules of Professional Conduct, and in particular the Rules requirement of "zealous" advocacy.

The course will examine such questions as the following: (a) in a setting in which the parties and counsel have agreed to negotiate cooperatively and share all relevant information, how do lawyers balance that expectation with the Model Rules requirement that lawyers protect the confidentiality of communications with their clients; (b) in Collaborative Law cases, where lawyers and clients agree that the lawyers shall be involved only in negotiations and are disqualified from representing the client in court, how do lawyers assure themselves that the clients are giving fully informed consent to these arrangements as required by the Model Rules; and (c) how do lawyers who are seeking to work cooperatively with each other and to seek solutions that meet the needs of all parties reconcile those objectives with their duty under the Model Rules of unfettered loyalty to their clients. This course will examine ethical dilemmas of this kind with case studies, role plays, and small group discussion. The course will also look comprehensively at the Model Rules and explore how lawyers can manage the tensions between the Rules and the norms of Collaborative Practice.

Course Description: Students who enroll in this course may count the credits towards the JD professional responsibility requirement.
Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: No Exam
A final paper will be required instead.

The course will focus on the rapidly-changing legal system that is designed to regulate government ethics. The course will allow students to explore the legal and associated challenges for lawyers who represent clients in ethics-related matters, as well as for lawyers in the government who are charged with applying these complex and onerous rules to federal employees.

Over the past few years, numerous ethics-related scandals have led to a substantial overhaul of federal ethics law for all three branches of government, with the result that government employees are now subject to more stringent ethical restrictions than they have been in the past. At the same time, growing media scrutiny has made the reputational consequences to individuals and companies caught up in ethics scandals exceptionally severe, even in cases where no legal violation is ultimately established. Providing effective counsel to public sector and private sector clients thus increasingly requires an appreciation of both the legal and non-legal dimensions of ethics-related representations.

The course will concentrate primarily on the ethics rules that apply to individuals appointed to or serving in Executive Branch positions, although comparisons with rules in the other Branches will be addressed. The course will follow the timeline for appointees from initial selection to Senate confirmation, and will use case studies from recent administrations. The course will analyze the legal and practical questions that lawyers must address at each stage of government service, from initial appointment to departure from office. The course will also examine the ethics issues that arise for appointees upon their return to the private sector.

The course will involve readings from a wide range of sources; examination of a number of case studies; analysis of statutes, regulations and case law; and discussion of various approaches to the regulation of ethical behavior by government officials. Students will be expected to become familiar with the principal rules and authorities and with the basic tools used to regulate ethical behavior of government officials and with the role of the lawyer -- both in the government and in the private sector -- in the representation of parties involved in the system of government ethics.

Note: This course is only available to JD 3Ls and LLM students.

There will be no paper or exam, and class will be graded credit/fail.

Legal skepticism is disbelief in laws coherence and laws rational constraint. We will look at skeptical writings in legal theory, mainly from the American schools of legal realism and critical legal studies. The skeptical picture of law shows law to be riven by incoherence and conflict and controlled by political choice. Our question throughout: is this picture correct?

Thu 3:00 PM - 5:00 PM WCC3012

Course Description: Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.
Required Clinic Component: Democracy and the Rule of Law Clinic (2-5 fall clinical credits). The clinic and course are bundled; your enrollment in the clinic will automatically enroll you in this required course.

Additional Co-/Pre-Requisites: None.

By Permission: No.

Add/Drop Deadline: August 28, 2018.

LLM Students: International students on F-1 student visas are required to have Curricular Practical Training (CPT) authorization; LL.M. students are not eligible for CPT.

This seminar is required for all students enrolled in the Democracy and the Rule of Law Clinic. The course will involve a brief introduction to the substantive issues relevant to the clinic, including risks to democracy in America, and traditional rule of law checks within and beyond the executive branch. We will then focus on the set of integrated advocacy tools available to the public and other government actors to protect our democratic and rule of law institutions. This will include transparency and oversight approaches; the development and conduct of effective litigation raising constitutional, administrative law, and statutory issues; and other tools to prompt pro-democratic reform. Finally, the course will end with consideration of longer-term legal and policy challenges to constitutional democracy in the United States, and potential solutions. Through regular presentations and discussions, students will also have the opportunity to generate creative advocacy ideas, develop their Clinic work, and receive feedback from their Clinic colleagues.

Exam Type: No Exam

Each class session will explore a factual situation that calls for a type of legal writing. After each class, there will be a short writing assignment asking the student to deal with the problem in a paper using the relevant type of legal writing. Between classes, students will meet with the instructor to go over his comments and edits in the way that a junior lawyer can expect to meet with a superior in a law office.

This course provides advanced training in legal writing across the range of situations typically met by the practicing lawyer and in the ways that different types of legal writing help to solve clients problems. Using the format of a small class and one-on-one sessions with the instructor, this course will examine the way that practicing lawyers use writing for the varying types of tasks which they perform. The course asks students to distinguish between the types of writing that lawyers use for transactions, litigation, statutes, and client communication and helps them to decide how to use those four types of legal writing in particular situations.

Note The course will be graded on a Credit/Fail basis.

Litigating in the Family Courts: Domestic Violence and Family Law Clinic

Course #: 8032 Term: 2018FA Faculty: Odim, Nnena Credits: 5.00

Type: Clinic Subject Areas: Family, Gender & Children's Law

Delivery Mode: Clinic

Days and Times: Location

Course Description: Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.
Enrollment in this clinic will fulfill the HLS JD pro bono requirement.
Required Class Component: Litigating in Family Courts: Domestic Violence and Family Law Clinical Seminar (2 fall classroom credits). This clinic and course are bundled; your enrollment in this clinic will automatically enroll you in the required course.
Additional Co-/Pre-Requisites: None.
By Permission: No.
Add/Drop Deadline: August 28, 2018.
LLM Students: LLM students may apply to this clinic by submitting an application.
Placement Site: WilmerHale Legal Services Center (Jamaica Plain).
Students in the Domestic Violence and Family Law Clinic work directly with clients in matters of divorce, custody and visitation, abuse prevention, paternity, child support, guardianship, and second parent adoptions. Under close supervision of the clinical instructor, students manage all aspects of a family law case, including counseling clients, conducting factual investigation and legal research, developing case strategies, conducting and analyzing discovery, and drafting pleadings. In addition, students may have multiple court appearances in both Family and District Courts for motion hearings, restraining orders, pre trial conferences, and/or status conferences. In addition, students negotiate directly with opposing attorneys, pro se opponents, and in court-mandated "dispute resolution" sessions. In cases scheduled for full trial, students conduct depositions, develop witness and exhibit lists, trial strategies and trial notebook, prepare and conduct direct- and cross-examinations of witnesses, make opening statements and closing arguments, and/or draft post-trial briefs and memoranda. Students may also have the opportunity to prepare and present trainings and workshops on relevant legal issues to health care providers and domestic violence advocates.
The Family Law Clinic addresses issues of custody, visitation, child and spousal support, health and life insurance, and the equitable division of marital property and debt in the context of divorce, paternity, modification, contempt, guardianship, and adoption actions. The clinic also provides some direct legal services to the LGBT community, with a particular emphasis on family-related legal issues, such as custody, support and visitation, and second-parent adoptions.
The Domestic Violence Clinic focuses on abuse prevention, safety, and making sure that domestic violence is not a barrier to a clients legal rights regarding custody, property division, and other aspects of family and domestic relations.
In addition to direct legal services, the Clinic actively participates in creating systemic change and policy reform to ensure safety for domestic violence victims and survivors, and to improve overall justice in the field of domestic relations.
Due to the litigation emphasis of the clinics and court-related schedules, students are strongly encouraged to enroll for 4 or 5 clinical credits, however, students who can only enroll for 3 credits will be accommodated.
Please keep in mind that most court hearings and trials take place starting at 8:30 or 9am. Its recommended that you arrange your schedule to have as much morning availability as possible, in order to maximize your court-related opportunities. In addition, having a block of three or more hours is better than trying to come to the Center for fewer hours at one time.

The Domestic Violence and Family Law clinical course provides students who are concurrently enrolled in the Legal Services Center Domestic Violence and Family Law Clinic, with the practical skills and substantive knowledge necessary to effectively advocate for their clients in and out of the courtroom. Objectives of the course include: developing practical lawyering skills to be applied in the clinical component and beyond; understanding the statutory and case law applicable in family law litigation; enhancing student understanding of the professional roles, values, and ethics involved in the practice of law; gaining insight into the unique challenges of low-income clients and victims of domestic violence; as well as analyzing and proposing legal advocacy approaches to contemporary family law issues. The course emphasizes a collaborative health-law approach to advocating for our client populations.

This course is hands-on and group-oriented. Most classes involve both small and large-group exercises and discussions. Throughout the course, students work on a hypothetical case from the initial client interview through the final disposition of the case. In a series of simulated group exercises, students conduct in-depth interviews with the client, write memoranda, prepare case and client theories, argue for and defend against Motions, manage discovery, counsel the client as the facts of the case evolve, engage in settlement negotiations on the clients behalf, and reflect on ethical issues encountered during the course of representation. In addition, students will prepare a memorandum and conduct a substantive presentation on one of their active real life cases at the Legal Services Center, and will lead class discussion on the case and on the larger ethical and legal questions it presents. There is no final examination or final paper for this course. Students will be evaluated based on their preparation for, and participation in, class exercises and discussions.

Due to the litigation emphasis of the clinics and court-related schedules, students enrolled in this course are strongly encouraged to enroll for 4 or 5 clinical credits, however, students who can only enroll for 3 credits will be accommodated.

This course examines the possibility and desirability of decentralization of power in America. In the process of doing so, it focuses on issues such as federal and state control of city decision-making, the conflict between central cities and suburbs and among the suburbs themselves, alternatives to city-delivered services and to city taxation as a source of local revenue, and the ways in which racial and ethnic division fracture American metropolitan areas. Above all, this is a course about local democracy. For that reason, among others, active class participation is an integral part of the course and will be expected of every student enrolled in it.

This is a course about how local power is administered in the United States. Virtually every public policy in the United States is implemented at the local level by an array of institutions with overlapping jurisdictions and conflicting sources of authority. Cities compete with the federal government to assimilate or police immigrants; homeowners' associations cooperate with business-improvement districts to attract or exclude classes of residents; neighborhood associations lobby school committees to allow or restrict charter schools; states pressure counties to earn revenue with taxes or cash bail. The legal rules governing how these institutions structure themselves and interact with one another can determine who is allowed to participate in local decisionmaking, the range of permissible decisions, and who most benefits from the decisions' execution. This course studies these legal rules to explore the actual and desirable manner in which local power is decentralized and democratically accountable.

This course will look at the role of mass movements, governmental leadership, and lawyers as we explore internal and external efforts to influence governmental, individual, and institutional policies and actions. We will examine diverse ideological goals, assess a range of political and legal approaches, and gauge outcomes. The course will explore several arguments around change: 1) big problems are rarely resolved with comparably big solutions, but instead are better met with small acts of reform; 2) coalition-building among strange bedfellows is usually indispensable; 3) agents of change fare best when they look to measure their impact and never lose sight of the real world results they seek, rather than the expressive highs along the way; 4) informational cascades are possible and critical; and 5) group polarization can be both desirable and dangerous.

The theme of this reading group is a variation on Josephine Teys The Daughter of Time: historians making up history. Instead of the trained skepticism of Teys police detective, we will apply that of a lawyer to determine the validity of a major piece of contemporary received historical wisdom. The focus of study will be on the prevailing view of the theory of torts developed by Oliver Wendell Holmes. According to that account, Holmes theory essentially created and controls the current shape and substance of tort liability. In particular, his moralistic and industrial-subsidy and other economic arguments for condemning strict liability won the day for the general rule of letting losses lie where they fall without negligence. Our inquiry will ripen into a genuine whodunit upon discovery that much of the historical record showing that histories of Holmes thinking have hidden and distorted the evidence showing that his theory supported use of Rylands vs. Fletcher and other rules of strict liability, most notably for industrial accidents.

To solve the mystery of who did what, when, how and why, we will examine Holmes writings and the changing understanding and representation of them over time. With legal history courses proliferating, and historical arguments exerting increasing influence on judicial decisions, our case study of the history of Holmes thinking can serve as an object lesson in the well-known but too often neglected rule of good practice: check the sources. More generally and positively, exploring Holmes jurisprudence will provide insights into the intellectual wellspring for the leading and enduring explanation of the purposes and processes of court-made law.

Note: This reading group will meet on the following dates: 2/6, 2/20, 3/6, 3/27, 4/10, 4/24.

Management and Leadership Skills for Lawyers

Course #: 2547 Term: 2019SP Faculty: Friedman, David Credits: 1.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Business Organization, Commercial Law, and Finance; Procedure & Practice

Delivery Mode: Reading Group

Days and Times: Location

Mon 7:00 PM - 9:00 PM WCC3036

Course Description: Prerequisites: None
Exam Type: No Exam
This Reading Group will study the practical, policy and ethical dimensions of management in various organizational settings, with a heavy emphasis on practical understanding and skills. Attorneys can – and should – develop management and legal skills from their very first day in practice. As your legal career advances, in the future you may be entrusted to run a government agency (or an entire government), a law firm, a non-profit organization, a company’s in-house law department, a court system, or a smaller division of any of these. We will examine principles, case studies and hypothetical problems with an eye to building awareness and habits that prepare you for management roles. And until you become a supervisor, understanding how managers and leaders function will better prepare you to be an effective counsel and to understand the people and entities with whom you work and interact.
We will cover the fundamental aspects of business management, with an eye to the unique dynamics, challenges and responsibilities that attorneys face in management and leadership roles. We will also explore how management roles and challenges vary across different legal practice settings, including government agencies and offices, for-profit companies, non-profit organizations, and law firms. Some of the specific questions and topics we will examine include:

How do you set goals and measure performance for attorneys when so much of what attorneys do cannot be easily quantified (providing sound judgment and counsel, pursuing justice, preventing disputes, etc.)?
What management and communication styles work most effectively in various settings and circumstances?
What decisionmaking approaches can managers and leaders use to facilitate good, sound decisions?
How can managers handle situations over which they have limited direct authority and control?
How can lawyers excel as leaders?
How do various compensation systems affect the management of lawyers and how can compensation be optimally structured?
How can managers successfully create change in their organizations?
How can junior attorneys develop leadership skills and practices that will prove valuable later on in their careers – and what are those key skills and best practices?

We will be joined by special guests for several sessions -- experienced lawyers who have held important management and leadership roles and who will share their own stories and experiences of managing and leading in different settings.

Note: This reading group will meet on the following dates: 1/28, 2/4, 2/11, 2/25, 3/11, 4/1.

Mass Incarceration and Sentencing Law

Course #: 2918 Term: 2019SP Faculty: Gertner, Nancy Credits: 3.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Criminal Law & Procedure

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times: Location

Tue 1:00 PM - 4:00 PM WCC3016

Course Description: Prerequisites: None

Exam Type: No Exam

This course will first put 20th century sentencing law in sociological and historical context. It will examine the history, philosophy, and administration of the criminal sentencing process, the causes of growth in the US penal population, the historical roots of that growth from the mid 20th century to the present, and the impact of those policies on communities of color and the crime rate. We will then examine more closely the legal framework that enabled those policies, including the war on drugs, emphasis on retribution over rehabilitation, the changes in sentencing law and the structure of sentencing decisionmaking. Particular attention will be devoted to substantive sentencing standards (the insights of neuroscience, evidence based lessons from diversion programs) in addition to the procedures governing those decisions. The course will explore different kinds of sentencing regimes-state guideline systems, international models on which sentencing standards have evolved from common law decision making or judge-imposed guidelines (Australia, Israel, England), in addition to the federal sentencing guidelines. We will consider the interplay between principles of proportionality, severity, and parsimony on sentencing law.

This course will be divided into two parts: the first part of the term will involve the substantive law of sentencing, and the sociological and historical context in which it evolved as described in the original course description. But the second part of the term will be somewhat unusual. I will invite judges (federal and state), prosecutors, defense lawyers to join the class in addressing particular sentencing issues, with discussions centered around hypothetical cases. All the participants will sentence; they will review the cases, determine the sentences, and discuss them at the class sessions. The issues will be cases involving addiction and drug offenses, mental health, the neuroscience of childhood adversity, juvenile offenders, sex offenders, and issues of race and gender. The idea is not only to look at sentencing at the meta level, but also at the level of the concrete case, which may challenge the generalizations of the sentencing law.

Note: The first class will meet on February 5, 2019. An additional makeup session will be scheduled at a later date.

Mass Media Law

Course #: 2038 Term: 2019SP Faculty: McCraw, David Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Business Organization, Commercial Law, and Finance; Constitutional Law & Civil Rights; Disciplinary Perspectives & Law; Intellectual Property, Cyberlaw and Technology, and Arts & Entertainment

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times: Location

Mon 1:10 PM - 3:10 PM PND100

Course Description: Prerequisites: None
Exam Type: In Class
The class examines how the First Amendment, in combination with tort law, statutes, and common-law principles, shapes the rights and legal limitations for publishers of news and opinion, in both traditional and digital media. Topics include libel, protection of confidential sources, prior restraints on publication, invasion of privacy by publication, criminal liability for publishing classified information, legal limits on newsgathering, and access to information.

Mediation

Course #: 2183 Term: 2019SP Faculty: Hoffman, David Credits: 3.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Disciplinary Perspectives & Law; Procedure & Practice

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times: Location

Thu 4:00 PM - 7:00 PM WCC3019

Course Description: Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: No Exam
Students will write a research paper in lieu of a final exam. Students will also do some writing during the semester about the readings -- approximately one page per week.

Mediation is having an increasingly profound impact on the way law is practiced in the U.S. and internationally, and clients expect both transactional lawyers and litigators to have a working knowledge of the mediation process. This course focuses on the theory and practice of mediation. Students will have opportunities to try mediating and serving as an advocate in mediation. The readings and discussion will address legal, ethical and policy issues arising from the use of mediation -- such as confidentiality and privilege, credentialing of mediators, the institutionalization of mediation in courts and world of business, differing styles of mediation and mediation advocacy, and the role of gender, class, culture and psychology in the mediation process.

There is no required text other than photocopied materials.

Mediation Clinic

Course #: 8026 Term: 2019SP Faculty: Hoffman, David Credits: 1.00

Type: Clinic Subject Areas: Procedure & Practice

Delivery Mode: Clinic

Days and Times: Location

Course Description: Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.
Enrollment in this clinic will fulfill the HLS JD pro bono requirement. Required Class Component: Mediation (3 spring classroom credits). Some seats are reserved for clinical students. Once a student enrolls in this clinic, the Office of Clinical and Pro Bono Programs will enroll them in the required course. If a student drops this clinic, they will also lose their seat in the required class component.
Additional Co-/Pre-Requisites: None.
By Permission: No.
Add/Drop Deadline: January 11, 2019.
LLM Students: This clinic is not available to LLM students, with limited exceptions by permission.
Placement Site: HLS and Boston-area courts.
Mandatory Trainings: All students must attend a 32-hour mandatory training session in either the fall or spring semester.
Clinic placements are with the Harvard Mediation Program (HMP), and entail the opportunity to observe and conduct mediations in Boston-area court sessions for small claims cases and harassment prevention orders. Clinic students must (1) complete HMPs mandatory 32-hour basic mediation training in either the fall or spring semester; (2) attend a court session weekly to mediate or observe; (3) work one hour per week in the HMP office; and (4) submit a weekly journal reflecting on their mediation experiences plus a short "final report" at the end of the semester. The court session commitment is the same day and time every week (generally Wednesday, Thursday or Friday morning, or Tuesday afternoon as detailed in the HMP application, and usually requires about three hours, including travel time. For more information about this clinic, including training session dates and scheduling information, please visit the Harvard Mediation Program website.

Mergers and Acquisitions

Course #: 2186

Term: 2018FA

Faculty: Strine Jr., Leo

Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective

Subject Areas: Business Organization, Commercial Law, and Finance

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times:

Location

Mon 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM

WCC1015

Course Description: Prerequisite: JD students should have already taken Corporations. LLM students should be taking Corporations concurrently, or if they have taken a comparable basic business organization course or have comparable work experience to contact the faculty to request a waiver.

Exam: In Class

The class assumes a knowledge of the fundamentals of American corporate law and without that, a student will be at a profound disadvantage.

Cross-registering Business School students (whom the teacher very much welcomes) need not have taken Corporations; cross-registrants from other parts of Harvard should seek permission to enroll by emailing Chief Justice Strine's HLS assistant, Kathy Goldstein: kgoldstein@law.harvard.edu.

This course, taught by the Chief Justice of the Delaware Supreme Court and former Chancellor of the Delaware Court of Chancery, will focus on the law affecting corporate mergers and acquisitions including both third-party and going-private deals. Though state corporate law will be heavily emphasized, it will also address laws affecting cross border M&A and expose students to key recurring issues of comparative law relevant to M&A practice. The course will also deal substantially with merger agreements, considered as contracts, and the important contractual principles and issues that are relevant in almost every M&A transaction. The course will have a practical bent and will address the real-world problems faced by parties contemplating, attempting, or resisting acquisitions, as well as the policy dilemmas faced by courts called upon to assess such transactions. To further this goal, several key classes will involve the participation of leading practitioners.

This course overlaps with Professor Coates Mergers and Acquisitions Processes and Structures offering; students may only enroll in one of these courses.

Thu 1:00 PM - 4:45 PM	WCC1023
Fri 1:00 PM - 4:45 PM	WCC1023

Course Description: Prerequisite: Corporations or permission to waive the requisite.

Exam Type: In Class

Successful M&A lawyers (and bankers) provide leadership and judgment in the boardroom and tactical execution at the negotiating table. Taught by a Mergers & Acquisitions partner at Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz, this workshop is intended to give students exposure to both the macro strategic issues faced by directors in M&A situations (buy-side and sell-side; hostile, friendly and crisis) as well as the tactical issues involved in negotiating acquisition agreements and other transaction documents. Topics to be explored include how buyers select, and then woo, their targets and what tactics buyers might pursue to keep the price low and eliminate competition; how target boards respond to acquisition overtures and evaluate bids; how to best structure a sale or auction of a public company; management-led buyouts and the potential for conflicts of interest; distressed company acquisitions and negotiating key provisions of an acquisition agreement, such as representations, "deal protection", closing conditions, walk-away rights and related penalties, and deal financing. The workshop is based around case studies of several real transactions or strategic situations, and makes use of real transaction documents. Students will be expected to make presentations and participate in class discussions and mock strategy and negotiating sessions. Some sessions may feature guest speakers who have been involved in recent deals.

Business school students are very much welcome to cross-register into this course (and have done well in this course in the past), and spaces have been reserved for you. Business School students need not have taken Corporations; students cross-registering from other parts of Harvard should seek permission from Prof. Gordon.

Migration and Human Rights

Course #: 2424 Term: 2018FA Faculty: Bhabha, Jacqueline Credits: 1.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Human Rights; International, Comparative & Foreign Law

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times: Location

Tue 10:15 AM - 11:30 AM

Thu 10:15 AM - 11:30 AM

Course Description: Migration is a central moral issue of our time and its impacts will alter our world throughout this century. It affects the lives of millions, unsettles established governments, creates sharply polarizing policy dilemmas and posits far-reaching administrative, economic and political challenges. This course will focus on distress migration, including refugee flight and other forms of forced displacement, evaluated through the lens of human rights. It will address the multifaceted drivers of this complex phenomenon, including armed conflict, environmental stress and climate change, global inequality, demographic pressures and increasing globalization. Migration actors from a range of field sites will contribute; some will attend in person, others will be skyped into the classroom conversation to create a more global classroom discussion and to enhance project based learning.

The course will consider historical precedents to the current refugee and migration "crisis," using case studies of massive past population displacements (eg Greek-Turkish population exchange post World War I, partition of British India and Palestine peri/post World War II) as instructive guides for contemporary problems. The course will raise ethical and philosophical issues related to the duties owed to "outsiders" to probe the moral, religious and political underpinnings of current approaches. It will introduce students to the international and regional legal framework governing refugee protection and migration more broadly. It will engage with the multiple risks migrants face before, during and after their journeys and with and with current policy developments, at the municipal, national, regional and international level, including the ongoing efforts of the United Nations to craft two new Global Compacts on Refugees and on Migration. Finally the course will enable students to apply legal and other approaches to the analysis of migration challenges. The material for this will be a range of contemporary case studies, including refugee situations in the Mediterranean and Sub Saharan Africa, conflict-fueled migration as well as migration flows arising from environmental displacement in the Middle East, disaster fueled migration in Asia, irregular migration in the Americas, and seasonal internal migration in Asia involving bonded-labor.

Note: This course is jointly listed with HKS as IGA-355M. It is held at HKS during their Fall 1 term (9/6-10/19/18).

Mind and Criminal Responsibility in the Anglo-American Tradition

Course #: 2831 Term: 2019SP Faculty: Kamali, Elizabeth Papp Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Criminal Law & Procedure; International, Comparative & Foreign Law; Legal History

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times: Location

Wed 3:00 PM - 5:00 PM WCC3036

Course Description: Prerequisites: None.
Exam type: No exam. Grades will be based upon short responses to each week's readings and class participation.
This seminar will explore the deep roots of the modern doctrine of mens rea and will consider a variety of related issues, including insanity, infancy, provocation, and duress. Readings will include a variety of primary and secondary sources from a broad time span in Anglo-American history, from the medieval to the modern. Our goal will be to understand the role of mind in defining the bounds of criminal responsibility at various points in time over the long duration of common-law history, relying upon secondary literature as well as close readings of primary source texts. Students will develop a comparative perspective on issues of mind that continue to perplex lawyers today, while also building a set of critical reading skills that are essential to the work of legal historians and practicing lawyers alike.

Misdemeanor Justice

Course Description: Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: No Exam

Misdemeanors comprise the vast bulk of the American criminal system, approximately 80 percent of criminal dockets, yet they are under-scrutinized and under-theorized. This class will explore all aspects of the misdemeanor phenomenon, including its economic, racial, and democratic implications, with an eye towards reconceptualizing the entire criminal process from the perspective of the petty offense. Readings will include legal theory and and sociological research as well as litigation documents, government investigations, non-profit reports, and media coverage.

Monuments and Memorialization

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Constitutional Law & Civil Rights; Legal History

Delivery Mode: Reading Group

Days and Times: Location

Tue 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM WCC5044

Course Description: Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: No Exam

As always, there is no examination or formal paper, but each student will be expected to write one "response paper" of approximately 750 words during the semester in order to help set the agenda for that weeks particular discussion.

The past year especially has seen intense controversy over the use of public space to display monuments designed to memorialize ostensible heroes or events. As it happens, the Duke University Press will be publishing in the early fall a 20th Anniversary edition of the 1998 book by Professor Levinson, Written in Stone: Public Monuments in Changing Societies, by Professor Levinson. It will contain a new 17000-word Afterword, focusing particularly, but not exclusively, on debates about Confederate monuments in the United States. Special attention is paid to the decisions made at a number of prominent universities, including Harvard, Yale, Princeton, and the Universities of Texas, Virginia, and Mississippi. Law enters the discussion with regard especially to determining what level of government should control any such decisions. There have also been (unsuccessful) suits claiming denial of Equal Protection inasmuch as some monuments can legitimately be seen as valorizing white supremacy.

The new Foreword to the 2018 edition begins with the destruction of the monument of Saddam Hussein in Baghdad shortly after the US ostensibly conquered Baghdad in 2003. And the Afterword discusses, for example, the fate of statues of Cecil Rhodes in South Africa and the UK and the debate over renaming the main tennis court in Melbourne now named after Margaret Court.

In addition to the new edition of Written in Stone, students will be expected to read several of the reports issued at the various universities (including the Harvard Law School, concerning the official crest of HLS) and a remarkable speech by Mayor Mitch Landrieu of New Orleans. No doubt other examples will arise by the time the course begins meeting in September 2018.

As always, I have requested that some seats be left open for LL.Ms or SJD students who might be interested, insofar as the issue of monuments and memorialization is clearly a world-wide one.

Note: This reading group will meet on the following dates: 9/25, 10/2, 10/16, 10/23, 11/6, 11/13.

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Intellectual Property, Cyberlaw and Technology, and Arts & Entertainment

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times: Location

Mon 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM WCC3007

Course Description: Prerequisites: A prior course or other background in copyright law would be useful but is not required.
Exam Type: No Exam
This course explores a variety of legal issues relating to the creation, exploitation, and protection of music and other content. The seminar focuses on traditional legal regimes and business models and the ways in which new technologies (particularly the evolution of digital media and the Internet) have affected legal and business strategies involved in the making and distribution of content. The courses primary emphases are music and the ways in which legal principles manifest themselves in practice in the music industry. The seminar builds off a discussion of music rights to address issues surrounding content rights in other contexts, and it reviews the ways in which traditional concepts and practices in this area are challenged by and evolving in the digital world. The course balances discussions of big-picture doctrinal, policy, and theoretical considerations with a focus on day-to-day legal and business practices and specific skills (transactional, client counseling, and litigation) that are relevant to practitioners in this area.

Delivery Mode: Reading Group

Days and Times: Location

Thu 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM WCC5044

Course Description: Prerequisite: Enrollment is by permission of instructor. Interested students should email a CV and statement of interest to Mr. Baker at jimbaker1234@yahoo.com.

Exam Type: No Exam Students will be required to write 3 short thought papers during the semester.

This reading group will address various aspects of the law governing national security. Topics will include constitutional issues regarding national security, electronic surveillance conducted pursuant to the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act (FISA), investigative tools authorized under the USA PATRIOT Act, and related topics. National security law is often inaccessible, and can be particularly hard to follow when divorced from the context of historical tradition, governmental structures, and the operational reality in which it functions. The course will aim to present national security law in context, exposing students as much as possible to the real-world effects of applicable legal standards and rules.

The credit breakdown for this seminar is as follows: four total credits with three credits awarded in the winter and one credit awarded in the spring.

Most lawyers, irrespective of their specialty, must negotiate. Litigators resolve far more disputes through negotiation than by trials. Business lawyers -- whether putting together a start-up company, arranging venture financing, or preparing an initial public offering -- are called upon to negotiate on behalf of their clients. Public interest lawyers, in-house counsel, government attorneys, criminal lawyers, tort lawyers, and commercial litigators all share the need to be effective negotiators.

This Workshop, by combining theory and practice, aims to improve both the participants understanding of negotiation and their effectiveness as negotiators. Drawing on work from a variety of research perspectives, the readings and lectures will provide students with a framework for analyzing negotiations and tools and concepts useful in negotiating more effectively. Participants will spend much of their time in a series of negotiation exercises and simulations, where as negotiators and critical observers, they will become more aware of their own behavior as negotiators and learn to analyze what works, what does not work, and why.

The Workshop is intensive and time-consuming. Participants should have no other work commitments during the winter term. Specifically, participants should be available each day from 9:00am until 5:00pm (although class will often end earlier). There will be simulations and videotaping on some evenings and some weekends. Class attendance is essential and required at all sessions including the evening and weekend sessions. Students may not take the Workshop if they have other courses or any other significant obligation during the winter term that conflict with the required course sessions of the Workshop. There will be no Workshop classes during the spring term.

Class attendance is required at all sessions, and please particularly note participants cannot miss any of the first day. The Workshop will begin at 9:00 am sharp on Monday, January 7, 2019. No one will be admitted to or allowed to complete the course who is not present when the course begins. Participants should adjust their travel plans accordingly. Please also note that the Workshop will have class on Saturdays (specific dates TBD). The Workshop will meet for its final class on Friday, January 25, 2019.

The Workshop will be limited to 144 students who will be divided into six working groups of 24 each.

Plenary sessions of the full class will be devoted to demonstrations, discussion problems, lectures, video and film. Much of the time devoted to exercises and simulations will take place in the smaller working groups, each of which will be led by an experienced instructor and a teaching assistant.

In addition to participating in the daily activities, students will be expected to keep a journal and write a short paper. The journal is submitted weekly. This course has no final examination and the short paper will be due during the spring semester in light of the intensity of the Workshop during the winter term.

During the first week of the Workshop, JD and LLM students will be given an opportunity to elect to take the Workshop on a credit/fail basis. For cross-registrants, the availability of the credit/fail option is dependent on the policies of their home school.

Please note: The Workshop has an early drop deadline of Friday, November 2, 2018. The course may not be dropped after this date without the written permission of the instructor. Students who drop after this date will receive a WD on their transcript.

Course Description: Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.
Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: No Exam

*Cross-Registrants: Please note that students interested in cross-registering must participate in the application process (see below for more information on how to apply). The deadline to apply is noon on Friday, October 5, 2018. For more information please visit the course website:
<http://hnmcp.law.harvard.edu/negotiation-workshop/>.

Most lawyers, irrespective of their specialty, must negotiate. Litigators resolve far more disputes through negotiation than by trials. Business lawyers -- whether putting together a start-up company, arranging venture financing, or preparing an initial public offering -- are called upon to negotiate on behalf of their clients. Public interest lawyers, in-house counsel, government attorneys, criminal lawyers, tort lawyers, and commercial litigators all share the need to be effective negotiators.

This Workshop, by combining theory and practice, aims to improve both the participants' understanding of negotiation and their effectiveness as negotiators. Drawing on work from a variety of research perspectives, the readings and lectures will provide students with a framework for analyzing negotiations and tools and concepts useful in negotiating more effectively. Participants will spend much of their time in a series of negotiation exercises and simulations, where as negotiators and critical observers, they will become more aware of their own behavior as negotiators and learn to analyze what works, what does not work, and why.

The Workshop is intensive and time-consuming. It meets Wednesdays and Thursdays from 3:10 p.m. to 7:20 p.m. In addition, students will need to be present for exercises for portions of one weekend during the term. These sessions are required.

The Workshop will be limited to 168 students who will be divided into seven working groups of 24 each. Plenary sessions of the full class will be devoted to demonstrations, discussion problems, lectures, video and film. Much of the time devoted to exercises and simulations will take place in the smaller working groups, each of which will be led by an experienced instructor and a teaching assistant.

In addition to participating in the daily activities, students will be expected to keep a weekly journal and to produce a number of short, written products throughout the term. This course has no final examination.

During the first week of the Workshop, upperclass and LL.M. students will be given an opportunity to elect to take the Workshop on a credit/fail basis. For cross-registrants, the availability of the credit/fail option is dependent on the policies of their home school.

Nietzsche For Lawyers

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Legal & Political Theory

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times:	Location

Course Description: Prerequisites: None

Exam Type: No Exam

"Truly speaking, "wrote Emerson "it is not instruction, but provocation, that I can receive from another soul." In this course, we'll read selections by Nietzsche [plus one book: The Genealogy of Morals] in that spirit. The premise is that provocation by this Master Provocateur may be just the therapy that law students need. One former law student, after all, advised that anything we read "must be the axe for the frozen sea within us." [Kafka.]

In our last meeting, we'll discuss a great movie: Deer Hunter.

No prior study of Nietzsche is needed. His biography; his "intent"; the phases of his twenty-year career; the context [historical, philosophical] in which he wrote; his interpretation by others; indeed "the" meaning of his writing ... all of that fosters erudite avoidance ... and so will be out of bounds. The course is for "amateurs" able to take Nietzsches passionate, enigmatic words personally - and, so, able to be provoked by them.

Each student will volunteer to initiate discussion of at least one passage or problem each week. Short final paper required.

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Employment & Labor Law

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times: Location

Tue 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM HAU101

Course Description: Prerequisites: None
Exam Type: No Exam
Wages have been stagnating for decades. Income inequality is growing. A new category of people -- "gig workers" -- don't even know if they have an employer. The right to unionize has been eviscerated. In the face of these trends, how can working people organize and mobilize for economic justice? And what does the law do to enable or impede their efforts? A new generation of leaders is experimenting with innovative ways to enable workers to gain power in their workplaces, our communities and the economy. This course will explore the legal framework and challenges for these new organizations and movements, analyze their potential in achieving the scale and sustainability necessary to make lasting change, and challenge students to predict how the law can and should evolve to meet the needs of the next generation of American workers.

This class covers the formation, operation, and liquidation of all entities taxable as partnerships including general partnership, limited partnerships, and LLCs. Distributive shares as determined under sections 704(b) and 704(c) are emphasized along with allocations of partnership indebtedness and optional inside basis adjustments. This is an important course for students interested in a career in tax law or in real estate.

The textbook is Doernberg, Abrams & Leatherman, Federal Income Taxation of Corporations and Partnerships (5th ed, 2014).

Roughly half of this course will examine and assess the legal rules in the United States and other countries governing patents. The other half will explore policy issues pertaining to patents. Those issues include: the nature and determinants of scientific innovation; the increasingly important roles played by “standard setting organizations” and the ways in which the legal system should regulate those organizations; the degree to which the patent system should differentiate among fields of technology; the appropriate treatment of reverse-payment settlement agreements; and the impact of patent law on the health crisis in the developing world.

Course Description: Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.
Prerequisite: For JD students there are no formal prerequisites, although a basic understanding of the rules of evidence and the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure is assumed throughout the course. For LLM students, permission of the instructor is required. No technical background or prior experience with patent law is required.

Exam Type: No Exam

This three-credit simulation course will allow students to act as trial counsel in a federal civil action, from the initiation of litigation through trial and judgment, in the unique context of a patent case. Patent trials present particular challenges for lawyers. Effective patent litigators must be strong courtroom advocates, but must also be able to teach technical concepts effectively to both judges and juries, all the while navigating the doctrinally complex and policy-driven world of patent law.

Students will prepare briefs, make oral arguments, take and defend depositions, develop and deliver opening and closing statements, and present and cross-examine witnesses. The course will follow a patent-focused hypothetical case through a motion to dismiss, a claim construction hearing, depositions, and trial. The first two thirds of the course will cover the pretrial and trial preparation period, and the last third will be a student-litigated simulated patent jury trial.

The course will focus on a patent case as an example of a challenging civil trial, and students will get some grounding in patent doctrine as part of the simulation. The focus of the course will, however, be on teaching the broader litigation skills necessary to present technically and legally complex cases to judges and juries.

The instructor for this simulation course is Louis Tompros, a partner at WilmerHale, who has fourteen years of experience litigating patent infringement cases in federal courts throughout the United States.

Harvard Law School graduates have a long history of becoming leaders in public service, the public interest world, and the non-profit sector, often drawing on the critical thinking, advocacy, negotiation, and technical legal knowledge and skills they have learned and practiced during law school. The Pathways to Leadership Workshop for the Public/Non-Profit Sector is a new course designed to provide students with frameworks, tools, and perspectives that will accelerate and enhance their ability to succeed in leadership roles in the future.

Through a mixture of leadership case studies drawn from the public/nonprofit sector, interactive exercises, visits from guest speakers, and extensive work in teams, students will explore the real-world skills that leaders call upon to catalyze change. Exercises and projects, undertaken in teams, will facilitate learning about intentional team-formation, leadership and working style self-knowledge, appreciation of diversity on teams and the different forms that intelligence and knowledge-acquisition can take, network development, negotiating conflicts, giving feedback, effective listening, the psychology of motivation and influence, and leadership-oriented communication and presentation skills. Instructors and teaching assistants will provide regular feedback to teams with respect to written and oral presentations. As a final exercise, student teams will integrate the skills and tools they have gathered during the workshop (as well as through their varied life experiences) and connect theory to application through working together to solve a difficult problem.

Note: There may be days throughout the winter term that require attendance beyond the scheduled times. Please refer to the course syllabus and page for more information.

Harvard Law School graduates have a long history of leading change, often drawing on the critical thinking, advocacy, negotiation, and technical legal knowledge and skills they have learned and practiced during law school. For the first time in decades, the legal profession is facing significant disruption across all sectors - private, non-profit, government and academic - due to forces including, but not limited to, globalization, complex market, regulatory and even demographic pressures, and new technologies and processes like artificial intelligence, machine learning, and data analytics/big data. In addition to technical legal skills and knowledge, this rapidly changing landscape will require the next generation of lawyers to develop broader and deeper professional networks and, most importantly, highly advanced leadership and professional skills. This section of the new Pathways to Leadership Workshop will focus on providing students with frameworks, tools, and perspectives that will accelerate and enhance their ability to succeed in leading change for our profession.

Through a mixture of leadership case studies, interactive exercises and extensive work in teams, students will explore the real-world skills that leaders call upon to catalyze change across our profession. To illustrate how to drive such change, prominent leaders and legal innovators will participate in class to share their perspectives on their efforts to spur the legal profession, for example, to adopt new technology like AI, implement design-thinking based solutions for the achievement of justice, use gamification to dramatically improve the way lawyers learn, end sexual harassment in the legal workplace, develop new models for venture philanthropy, make significant progress on becoming a more diverse and inclusive profession and revolutionize in-house legal practice through the new field of legal operations.

Class projects, undertaken in teams, will facilitate learning about intentional team-formation, leadership and working style self-knowledge and application, appreciation of diversity on teams and the different

Delivery Mode: Seminar

The Policy Advocacy Workshop is a hands-on seminar that will explore the methods, tools, and skills used to conduct legislative and regulatory advocacy. Many law students are interested in using their legal education as a pathway to engage in policymaking. This course will provide students with a range of active opportunities to learn about, discuss, and practice written and oral policy advocacy via simulations and assignments.

Students will learn about the process of issue spotting policy opportunities, developing policy advocacy campaigns, drafting legislation and regulations, and using written and oral advocacy to push for policy change. Students will learn how to effectuate policy reforms that could have real world application by drafting written materials and presenting oral advocacy to demonstrate an implementation strategy for a range of policy reform ideas.

After a few weeks of introductory reading and discussion, there will be short written assignments or preparation for in-class simulations due each week. The students not participating in the assignment for the week will workshop and provide input on the writing and presentations of their classmates, and discuss strategies and skills for improvement.

Each week will focus on a different type of skill or written document relevant to policy advocacy. These will include:

- Issue spotting and policy development
- Petitioning agencies and commenting on agency regulations
- Legislative research and drafting
- Writing policy briefs
- Communications and media strategy
- Grassroots advocacy
- Creating fact sheets and sign-on letters
- Testifying for policymakers

Classroom sessions will also include presentations from guest lecturers who have relevant policy experience, including advocacy organizations, think tanks, and policymakers. Rather than a final examination, grades will be determined on the basis of their written submissions, in-class role plays, class participation, and a final project.

Some seats are reserved for students in the spring Food Law and Policy Clinic or spring Health Law and Policy Clinic. Students who enroll in a clinical seat in this course and then drops their clinical enrollment will also lose their reserved seat in this course. Students will be expected to write a terminal reflective paper on the course.

In this course, we aim, together, to provoke a rethink of the concepts of "Africa", "African Policy and Law", and "African Development". In this century, and especially in the last decade, Africa has become a critical factor in global space, so we will explore the concept of "Africa", not as a destination, not in objectification, not in ideation, but in the starkness of its profound reality. We will then attempt a mental capitulation of the assumed singularity and mundaneness of "African Policy and Law" and examine the six levels of that concept, whilst illustrating with real case studies its resilience in the face of rabid assaults from the phenomenon of Euro-American liberalism, legal pluralism, militarism, neoliberalism, constitutionalism, globalization, and continuous terrorist attacks on the spaces it occupies in a typical African polity. Flowing from the above and finally, the course examines the capacity and limitations of the extant varieties of African Policy and Law to resolve the continents most crucial and intractable problem: the paradox of radical poverty in the midst of plenty.

Whilst the current concentration in many US Universities on African languages, African literature, African culture is important, they need a complement - African policy/lawmaking; the distinctiveness of African Law and its operationalization; and the deep prospects and huge limitations for the use of policy and law to get Africa out of the paradox of radical poverty amid plenty. This course proposes to fill this void.

Methodologically, participants will be divided up into small teaching teams, which will co-teach each of the topics using real case studies. This will be useful for students thinking of a career in teaching. The case studies will cover the full gamut of key issues that confront African polities on a daily basis: macro-economic stability; security and investor confidence; political governance; international trade; extractivism; local economic development; decentralization; human rights; regional integration; international relations; and multilateralism. These case studies will be examined against the backdrop of hard issues of terrorism; immigration; human trafficking; drug trafficking; illicit financial flows to and from Africa; the China in Africa phenomenon; and the role of IFIs, international organizations and NGOs.

The methodological focus of the course will be to improve attitudes, build skills, and transfer knowledge. The most important outcome will be to assist students gain a broader and deeper understanding of the African continent and the policies and laws that operate within her, leading to a change in their attitude towards the continent. This will be done through storytelling, testimonies and roleplays. Second, I will aim to build the skills of students in addressing practical policy and legal issues on the continent. This will be done through case studies, group discussions, and "fieldwork", where students will talk on the phone or via skype (or other means) to Africans working on real life issues, and relay the information acquired from those conversations to their colleagues in class. Finally, I will seek to transfer knowledge about Africa and African Law and Policy from personal experiences - having lived for over forty years in Africa, and worked

Exam: Takehome, not administered by HLS

The world's economic and political order reels under mounting challenges: the global financial crisis, the austerity debacle, a slowdown in economic growth and productivity, the aggravation of inequality and the inadequacy of conventional responses to it, the discrediting of the Washington Consensus, the globalization backlash, the re-emergence of nationalist politics in Europe and the United States, and a contest over the meaning, value, and requirements of democracy. We examine connections among these phenomena and explore alternative ways of thinking about contemporary market economies and their reconstruction. We organize the course around four related themes: the worldwide financial and economic crisis of the recent past and its management; the effort to promote socially inclusive economic growth in richer as well as in poorer countries; the nature, fate, and dissemination of the new knowledge-intensive style of production; and the past, present, and future of globalization.

Students should have some previous acquaintance with economics but no advanced economic training is required. The course is open to undergraduate and graduate students outside as well as within economics. Readings will be drawn from the classic and contemporary literatures of economics, political science, philosophy, and social theory.

Extended take-home examination/Writing assignments.

As always, there is no examination or formal paper, but each student will be expected to write one "response paper" of approximately 750 words during the semester, largely in order to help set the agenda for discussion during that weeks meeting.

For the past two years, one of my reading courses at HLS was "Aspects of Sovereignty." One of those aspects was "popular sovereignty," which in many ways becomes the shaping ideology of "legitimate" government at least since the 18th century and the American and French Revolutions. Indeed, I have argued that Woodrow Wilson, who contributed the associated notion of "national self-determination," is the most important single figure of the 20th century in terms of shaping the continuing discourse of the 21st century. Lenin and Communism are close to dead as motivating forces, but popular sovereignty, for good and for ill, continues to be ever-more important in political discourse. Beginning with a close examination of the Declaration of Independence, we will examine some of the classic texts and arguments associated with the notions of "popular sovereignty" and "national self-determination." A central question is how one defines the members of a group entitled to exercise such sovereignty (and who exactly gets to do the defining). And, inevitably, we will be addressing the question of secessionist movements predicated on the assertion of self-determination, including the American Secession from the British Empire in 1776, the attempted secession by the Confederate States of America in 1861, and more recent events in Canada, the UK (including Brexit), and Spain.

For obvious reasons, I would welcome the participation of LLM and SJD students from abroad who might be interested in this topic.

Exam Type: No Exam

This course uses a multidisciplinary lens to explore the linkages between global poverty, human rights, and development from an historical, theoretical, institutional, and policy-making perspective. Its departure point is the emergence of a recent "human rights and development" trend, both in academia and policy, as a result of the combined failure of development economics and the human rights movement to effectively address the challenge of global poverty and inequality.

The first part of the course draws on foundational readings from law, development economics, political science, moral philosophy, and social anthropology to introduce historically and normatively situated approaches to development and human rights. The second part explores key themes and current policy debates in the field as they play out at the levels of international financial institutions, national level development strategies, and the private sector. The third part focuses on how human rights to food, health, housing, and a decent livelihood, for instance, can be advanced in developing countries. In this final section of the course, student groups will design and teach workshops about bringing social rights, poverty alleviation, and equitable development together in grounded ways. In addition to readings, response papers, and class exercises, the course will require each student either to take part in teaching an in-class student workshop or write a final paper.

Students will have the option of adding an additional writing credit.

Powering the U.S. Electric Grid

Course #: 2931 Term: 2018FA Faculty: Peskoe, Ari Credits: 1.00
Type: Elective Subject Areas: Disciplinary Perspectives & Law; Environmental Law; Government Structure & Function

Delivery Mode: Reading Group

Days and Times:	Location
Tue 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM	WCC3013

Course Description: Prerequisite: None
Exam Type: No Exam

In this reading group, we will explore historic and ongoing legal and policy debates over the fuels that power the U.S. electric grid. We will begin with proposals by the federal government to construct mega-dams in the first half of the twentieth century and continue to current controversies about rooftop solar. The fuels that generate electricity have implications for economic growth and environmental quality (including climate change), and they have unfolded in a complex political environment. To provide context, we will read about the utility industry’s business model, the electric grid’s operations, and the tradeoffs among different energy sources, including fossil fuels like coal and emission-free energy sources like nuclear and wind. Through these debates, we’ll watch an industry evolve and speculate on where it may be headed.

Note: This reading group will meet on the following dates: 10/2, 10/16, 10/23, 10/30, 11/13, 11/27

Predatory Lending and Consumer Protection Clinic

Course #: 8035 Term: 2018FA Faculty: Bertling, Roger; Merrill, Toby; Connor, Eileen Credits: 5.00

Type: Clinic Subject Areas: Business Organization, Commercial Law, and Finance; Procedure & Practice; Regulatory Law

Delivery Mode: Clinic

Days and Times: Location

Course Description: Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.
Enrollment in this clinic will fulfill the HLS JD pro bono requirement.
Required Class Component: Predatory Lending and Consumer Protection Clinical Seminar (2 fall classroom credits). This clinic and course are bundled; your enrollment in this clinic will automatically enroll you in the required course.
Additional Co-/Pre-Requisites: None.
By Permission: No.
Add/Drop Deadline: August 28, 2018.
LLM Students: LLM students interested in this clinic should be in contact with the clinic directly.
Placement Site: WilmerHale Legal Services Center (Jamaica Plain).
The Predatory Lending/Consumer Protection Clinic focuses its advocacy efforts on combating abuses of consumers by the financial services industry and sellers of consumer goods, and fighting back against the negative consequences that can result from those abuses. The Clinic's practice consists of a robust general consumer protection and bankruptcy practice focused on debt collection, bankruptcy, car financing, utility and credit card debt, bankruptcy, and mortgage servicing, and a project attacking predatory lending by for-profit colleges, including class action litigation and other complex and federal litigation, as well as policy advocacy.
Our practice is primarily litigation and involves consumer, bankruptcy, administrative, and tort law.
The Clinic:

commences litigation in federal and state court against predatory for-profit colleges and high cost lenders, abusive debt collectors, car dealers and others who prey upon our clients.
represents borrowers who have been harmed by predatory practices of for-profit colleges through its Project on Predatory Student Lending.
defends consumers against unlawful debt collection practices in state court.
represent consumers seeking a fresh start through petitions for bankruptcy.

We enforce the rights of our clients using the Massachusetts Consumer Protection Act, consumer protection laws of other states, federal and state debt collection laws, the Administrative Procedures Act, the Fair Credit Reporting Act, the Telephone Consumer Protection Act, the Electronic Funds Transfer Act, the Higher Education Act, the Administrative Procedures Act, the Equal Credit Opportunity Act, and federal and state credit repair organization laws.
Students in the Clinic gain extensive experience interviewing clients, analyzing financial documents, drafting complaints, drafting and responding to discovery requests, and engaging in long-term case strategizing. Students who participate in the Project on Predatory Student Lending will also gain experience in high-impact federal and state class action litigation, administrative law and procedure, and occasionally, federal and state policy advocacy. Students may also have the opportunity to participate in discovery, negotiate with opposing counsel, argue motions, engage in bankruptcy work, and, on occasion, to work on legislative initiatives.
Students will work either in the general consumer practice or the Project on Predatory Student Lending, and may express a preference between the two practice areas. We will assign students to their preferred practice area subject to clinic needs.

The Predatory Lending and Consumer Protection Clinical Seminar is a required component of a clinical placement in the Predatory Lending and Consumer Protection Clinic at the WilmerHale Legal Services Center.
This workshop is the required classroom component that complements the work of combating abuses of consumers by the financial services industry and fighting back against the negative consequences that can result from those abuses. Specifically, our clinical work focuses on consumer debt collection, for-profit colleges, car financing, utility and credit card debt, bankruptcy, and mortgage servicing.
The seminar introduces students to the substantive law germane to the clinics areas of practice, trains students in the skills needed to litigate effectively, such as depositions, motion drafting and oral argument, and provides the opportunity for students to think strategically about their cases and to consider larger policy frameworks.
Students are graded based upon their participation in class, their completion of written work assigned for class, and performance of in-class exercises.
A clinical practice component is required of all students. Enrollment is through clinical registration. Clinical placements are with the Predatory Lending and Consumer Protection Clinic at the WilmerHale Legal Services Center. Please refer to the Office of Clinical and Pro Bono Programs website for clinical registration dates, early add/drop deadlines, and other relevant information.

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times:	Location
Mon 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM	HAU105

Course Description: Prerequisites: Constitutional Law: Separation of Powers, Federalism, and Fourteenth Amendment
Exam Type: No Exam
This course will explore the modern exercise of presidential power in foreign affairs, military and covert actions, domestic affairs, and executive actions. We will consider the Necessary and Proper Clause and the Take Care Clause; the Presidents war powers, treaties and other diplomacy; the appointment and confirmation of judges and other officials; and the power to grant pardons and commutations. Throughout, the course will examine the ways in which executive branch conflicts with the other two branches of government are addressed and resolved, and we will also examine recent efforts by the states to use judicial processes to register objections to executive branch policy actions. While focusing on contemporary issues and recent disputes, the course will draw on historical precedent to give students a grounded and contextual understanding of presidential power.

The establishment of the permanent International Criminal Court ("ICC") by the Rome Statute was an unprecedented development in international politics and in international law. This course will explore the origins, functioning and effectiveness of the ICC, with particular emphasis on its interactions with the UN Security Council. In only 13 years, the system established by the Rome Statute was set in motion. States parties have been financing the operations of the Court, cooperating with investigations, protecting witnesses and executing arrest warrants. Overall, the Court opened investigations in ten different situations, indicted 39 people including three heads of state and concluded its first trials. In addition, without changing the UN Charter, the Rome Statute system has contributed to development of international law by the UN Security Council. The Courts intervention was imposed in Darfur and Libya but there was no agreement to do the same in relation to Palestine or Syria. This course will first provide a brief introduction into international law on the use of force, international criminal law and to the politics of the United Nations Security Council. It will explore the emergence of doctrine of Responsibility to Protect ("R2P") and its impact on the emerging Security Council action in these cases. The course will use a series of cases simulate discussions involving the students on international political and legal developments. It will explore unresolved crisis like Libya, Syria, Ukraine and Palestine.

The last four decades have seen an exponential increase in the United States prison population, and the U.S. now houses more prisoners per capita than any country in the world. This rise of mass incarceration has created a prison industry whose incentives shape criminal justice policy. Most courses in criminal law focus on "front end" criminal justice practice -- the investigation and prosecution of crime, and the sentencing of those convicted. This course focuses on the "back end" of the criminal justice process, specifically, the law and policy of incarceration. It addresses questions about what obligations the state owes to those it incarcerates and what remedies are available to enforce the states obligations. Topics will include the scope of prisoners constitutional rights, the prison disciplinary system, and conditions of confinement. We will also examine recent reform efforts and reactions of criminal justice actors, paying special attention to regional and other differences that challenge conceptions of the prison industry as monolithic. This inquiry will highlight the roles and interests of key stakeholders in the criminal justice system -- including department of corrections leaders, local sheriffs, correctional officers, private prison executives, and prosecutors -- those decisions affect the future trajectory of the prison population. This course will also consider a broader, comparative frame, situating U.S. prisons in a global context.

Readings will include case law, social science literature, and comparative law texts.

An exploration of the past and future agenda of progressives, whether self-described as liberals or as leftists. What should they propose, now that they no longer believe in the usefulness of governmental direction of the economy or in the sufficiency of redistributive social programs? A basic concern is the relation of programmatic thought to the understanding of change and constraint.

In the recent historical period, progressives have sought to humanize the established order rather than to reimagine and remake it. Here the main focus is on institutional or structural change in the market system and in democratic politics. Among the themes to be discussed are the nature and future of the knowledge economy, the status of labor vis-à-vis capital, the relation of finance to production, the making of a high-energy democracy that no longer needs crisis to make change possible, and the education required by such economic and political alternatives. A central theme throughout is the content and implications of the idea of freedom.

This seminar provides an overview of the historical law and policy decisions that have shaped the U.S. health care system and are informing current debates about health reform. Incorporating varying perspectives, the seminar discusses federal and state policy options to address current public health and access to care challenges.

This seminar begins with an analysis of health systems in other countries. Next, we discuss the key policy decisions that have shaped the current patchwork of public and private insurance coverage options in this country. After providing this international and historical context, we analyze in detail the key elements of the current U.S. health and public health care systems through the lens of its impact on vulnerable populations. We look at the components of the federal approach to reform, including the national health care reform law the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act. We also consider several state initiatives that highlight how states are acting as laboratories of innovation to implement sweeping health and public health reforms. Finally, we discuss the current health law and policy climate in this country and explore both the opportunities and challenges for health policy solutions focused on increasing access to care and addressing public health concerns.

This seminar is open to students interested in health and public health law and policy; no background or prerequisites are required. The reading materials include various book chapters, cases, news reports, and scholarly articles that present diverse viewpoints on the topics presented. The course is intended to spark debate between different sides of these often controversial issues, and students participate in different in-class role plays and debates.

Enrollment in this seminar is limited to 20 students.

This seminar provides an overview of the historical law and policy decisions that have shaped the U.S. health care system and are informing current debates about health reform. Incorporating varying perspectives, the seminar discusses federal and state policy options to address current public health and access to care challenges.

This seminar begins with an analysis of health systems in other countries. Next, we discuss the key policy decisions that have shaped the current patchwork of public and private insurance coverage options in this country. After providing this international and historical context, we analyze in detail the key elements of the current U.S. health and public health care systems through the lens of its impact on vulnerable populations. We look at the components of the federal approach to reform, including the national health care reform law the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act. We also consider several state initiatives that highlight how states are acting as laboratories of innovation to implement sweeping health and public health reforms. Finally, we discuss the current health law and policy climate in this country and explore both the opportunities and challenges for health policy solutions focused on increasing access to care and addressing public health concerns.

This seminar is open to students interested in health and public health law and policy; no background or prerequisites are required. This is an introductory course to public international law. The first part of the course provides a classical foundation to the sources and subjects, as well as key tenets and core concepts, of international law. We will also discuss the role of public international organizations such as the United Nations in developing, interpreting, and shaping the international legal system. The second part of the course will focus on selected topics, including the use of force, international human rights law, international humanitarian law, and space law. These topics may change based on contemporary events and debates. We will also explore critical perspectives from within the field, as well as external challenges to the legitimacy of public international law.

Note: This is one of the 1L required international/comparative law courses and is only available to HLS first-year and LLM students.

Using the standard course outlines and foundational texts for International Law as a starting point, this course will question the assumptions, and then the worldview, from which the most dominant strain of International Law takes its ethos. Half-way through the course, and drawing inspiration from Jimmy Cliffs 1970s classic hit "Remake the World", we will begin to ask if "another world is possible", and how a re-making of International Law could contribute to such an agenda.

This is a survey course in racial justice and law. We will examine contemporary controversies at the intersection of race and law. The aim of this course is to critically examine the role that law has played in creating, maintaining, resisting, and dismantling a racial class system. The class will explore several different propositions about the role of race in American society, such as the propositions that race is less significant today in this supposed "post-racial" age; or that racial injustices arise only sporadically and as exceptions to an otherwise egalitarian system; or that race has been and remains central to American law, history, policy, culture, or society. Because this is a class about both law and race, we will pay particular attention to role that law has played in influencing both race and the settings in which race operates.

Though this class is about contemporary racial controversies, we will first try to understand the historical areas such as interracial intimacies and family formation; primary and higher education; employment discrimination; policing and criminal justice; voting; and hate speech.

Delivery Mode: Reading Group

Days and Times: Location

Mon 3:20 PM - 4:40 PM

Course Description: Please Note: This by-permission reading group is available only to current HLAB students. Harvard Legal Aid Bureau members see firsthand, on a daily basis, the impact of race on their clients' lives, their legal needs, their legal rights and responsibilities, and their ability to seek and secure justice in the civil court system. While we consider race-based inequality and the concept of "racial justice" in our broader discussions of legal ethics and professionalism, lawyering skills, and access to justice in both Bureau seminars, Introduction to Advocacy (2Ls) and Advanced Clinical Practice (3Ls), a deep study of the enormous impact of race on our work is beyond the scope of those courses. The racial justice reading group offers HLAB members the opportunity for a richer discussion and understanding of racial justice and the U.S. civil legal system, helping them to become more competent, more creative 21st century lawyers and social justice leaders. The reading group will be graded Credit/Fail based upon class participation.

Note: This reading group will meet on the following dates: 1/28, 2/4, 2/11, 2/25, 3/4, 3/11, 4/8, 4/15.

This course will provide a practical introduction to the exciting world of real estate law. It will canvas a broad range of sophisticated real estate transactions and explore issues relating to sales, purchases, mortgage financing, mezzanine financing, commercial leasing, ground leasing, joint ventures, "air rights" transactions, land use and private/public partnerships.

The course is designed to give students, who are interested in practicing real estate law, insight into the practical lawyering experiences of real estate attorneys practicing in major urban centers and to provide them with a head-start in pursuing their career interests. We will use documentation from actual deals to study each type of transaction. Some sessions will feature guest speakers, including leading developers and other industry experts.

Course Description: Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: Last ClassTake-Home Students enrolled in the course will be expected to prepare one short research paper on a topic of current interest. There will also be a take-home examination distributed at the last class.

This course explores the regulation of financial institutions and financial markets. Over the course of the semester, we will examine the many different regulatory agencies and supervisory mechanisms that have evolved in the United States to govern the business of banks, securities firms, asset managers and insurance companies. The course will cover prudential regulation and consumer protection, as well as the oversight of systemic risks. While the primary focus of the course will be on financial regulation in the United States, readings and class discussion will frequently extend to comparative, cross-border, and multi-lateral aspects of financial regulation.

In the Fall of 2018, a particular focus of the course will be to consider the extent to which the Trump Administration and its appointees have altered the regulatory reforms put in place under the Dodd-Frank Act of 2010 in the wake of the financial crisis of the last decade. Among other things, this topic will allow us to consider a number of open questions regarding the application of administrative law principles in the context of financial regulation.

Readings will primarily be from Barr, Jackson & Tahyar, Financial Regulation: Law and Policy (Foundation Press 2nd ed. 2018) though some supplemental materials will be posted to the courses Canvas website, including several case studies posing issues of current policy concern.

The course will meet for approximately twenty-two sessions of an hour and forty minutes, with classes ending by Thanksgiving Break. The meeting dates will be posted on Canvas before the start of the semester.

This course will examine international arrangements for the regulation of finance. Arrangements covered include the International Monetary Fund, the Financial Stability Board, the Basel Committee on Banking Supervision, the International Organization of Securities Commissions, the European Union, and the General Agreement on Trade in Services within the World Trade Organization. Specific substantive topics will be chosen to illustrate their activities. We will consider the substantial differences among these arrangements in institutional and governance structures, legal status, and relationship to domestic regulation. A recurring theme will be the tensions between the presumptive shared interests of governments in predictable rules or financial stability, on the one hand, versus divergent national commercial interests or regulatory preferences, on the other.

In the heat of World War II, the state for the first time systematically contracted universities to advance science and technology to pursue the war effort. During the Cold War, the institutional and legal arrangements that facilitated the state-science relationship broadened to cover a vast range of disciplines and agencies, from the far reaches of theoretical physics to the most applied technologies. This course will explore the major, ongoing post-Cold War shift in this arrangement: corporations and foundations now play a powerful role in directing and supporting scientific inquiry. The seminar asks: How are the relations among state, science, for-profit corporations, and civil society changing? How do contemporary politics interplay with research funding from all sources? What is the new geography of technical-scientific work? What kind of work, what forms of knowledge are stressed or dropped? Who is engaged in its pursuit and how is it disseminated? How do law and (de-)regulation affect the newly emergent model, and how are they affected by it?

Note: This course is jointly listed with FAS as HISTSCI 299. It will be held on the FAS campus in the Science Center, room 469.

Exam: In Class
This course offers an introduction to the two most important federal securities laws: the Securities Act of 1933 and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. The course explores the elaborate disclosure obligations these statutes impose on the distribution and trading of investment securities. Topics to be covered include the preparation of disclosure documents, exemptions from disclosure requirements, the relationship between disclosure obligations and anti-fraud rules, the duties of participants in securities transactions, and the applicability of federal securities laws to transnational transactions. The course will also explore the public and private enforcement of securities laws in the United States.

Exam Type: In Class

This course is designed to offer an overview of the work of the Securities and Exchange Commission, the structure of U.S. capital markets, and key policy challenges facing the Commission today. The course will begin with an introduction to the regulation of securities offerings under the Securities Act of 1933. We will then turn to the disclosure obligations of public firms, SEC oversight of capital markets, and the supervision of investment management. Attention will also be given to the Commissions enforcement practices and current debates regarding the efficacy and legality of those practices. As time permits, we will touch upon issues of cross-border coordination in the public oversight of both capital raising and enforcement activities.

The course will meet for twenty-four ninety minutes sessions. Course materials to be announced.

The law is awash in stories. Stories from within and beyond the walls of the courtroom shape our impressions of the criminal justice system; they challenge or affirm our norms; they help us make sense of the world and its complexities. Yet these stories often stand in tension with one another. Police body cameras, videotaped confessions, mitigation and victim impact videos, primetime television, citizen journalism, and documentary films often produce narratives that compete with each other, and with our own entrenched beliefs. Together, we will explore different approaches to understanding how visual technologies, particularly with respect to video, have shifted the way we come to understand criminal justice narratives. Visual media commands a unique power to evoke empathy and to make powerful claims about truth. But such power can also distort and mislead. Grounded in these understandings, we will embark on a project of "media literacy" and explore questions around audience, authorship, truth, and objectivity as we consider how visual media may be used as a conduit to communicate criminal justice stories.

Sentencing Law, Policy and Practice

Course #: 2427 Term: 2018FA Faculty: Wroblewski, Jonathan Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Criminal Law & Procedure

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times: Location

Tue 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM WCC5048

Course Description: Prerequisite: Criminal Law

Exam Type: No Exam

This seminar will examine the law, underlying policy, history, philosophy, and administration of criminal sentencing. It will focus on the shared and intertwined powers and responsibilities of legislators, prosecutors, judges, defense lawyers, probation and pretrial officers, treatment providers, law enforcement, victims, sentencing commissions, and the community on sentencing outcomes. The course will explore the foundational role of the criminal code in sentencing and how different forms of statutory crimes and sentencing guidelines impact the sentencing process and the distribution of sentencing power. Students will learn the basic elements of the federal sentencing guidelines, apply those elements to various fact patterns. The course will also explore the issues of prosecutorial and judicial discretion, plea-bargaining, mandatory minimum sentencing statutes, truth-in-sentencing, racial, ethnic and gender disparities in sentencing, and recent congressional and state efforts to reform sentencing.

Sex Equality

Course #: 2226 Term: 2018FA Faculty: MacKinnon, Catharine Credits: 3.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Constitutional Law & Civil Rights; Family, Gender & Children's Law

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times:	Location
Wed 1:00 PM - 3:00 PM	PND102
Thu 1:00 PM - 3:00 PM	PND102
Fri 1:00 PM - 3:00 PM	PND102

Course Description: Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: Any Day Take-Home, or 3 short papers throughout the term for lottery-selected group of 30 students who apply.

The relation between sex equality under law and sex and gender inequality in society is interrogated in theory and practice in the context of relevant social science, history, and international and comparative law. Mainstream equality doctrine is probed on its own terms and through an alternative. Cases largely on U.S. law focusing on concrete issues--including work, family, rape, sexual harassment, lesbian and gay rights, abortion, prostitution, pornography--structure the inquiry. Race, economic class, and transsexuality are mainstreamed. The purpose of the course is to understand, criticize, and expand the law toward sex and gender equality, including between women and men, as well as to expand the equality paradigm.

Casebook: MacKinnon, Sex Equality Third edition (Foundation, 2016).

Course Description: Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.
Prerequisites: By Permission. Advanced Spanish proficiency required. Applications should be sent to Nicole Summers at nsummers@law.harvard.edu.
Exam Type: No Exam
The goal of this course is to prepare students with advanced Spanish proficiency to communicate effectively with Spanish-speaking Limited English Proficient clients. The focus of the course will be on serving low-income Spanish-speaking clients in public interest settings. While students will be introduced to legal terminology and will become equipped with the substantive terms necessary to represent clients in particular areas of public interest law, such as housing, immigration, family, and criminal law, the course will emphasize communicating with clients about complex legal issues and processes in familiar terms they understand. Thus, the course will be organized primarily around particular client interactions that public interest lawyers encounter. The course will be taught in Spanish and will consist of paired, small group and class-wide discussions; role-playing; games; and some writing and listening activities. The course will also include some translation exercises.

Note: This reading group will meet weekly beginning 9/13, with one makeup class to be scheduled later in the term.

Special Education Advocacy for Students Impacted by Trauma

Course #: 2993

Term: 2018FA

Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective

Subject Areas: Procedure & Practice

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times:

Location

Thu 1:00 PM - 3:00 PM

WCC4061

Course Description: Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.
Enrollment in this clinic will fulfill the HLS JD pro bono requirement.

Required Clinic Component: Education Law Clinic: Individual Representation (3-5 fall clinical credits). This clinic and course are bundled; your enrollment in the clinic will automatically enroll you in this required course.

Additional Co-/Pre-Requisites: None.

By Permission: No.

Add/Drop Deadline: Please note this clinic has an early drop deadline of August 3, 2018.

LLM Students: LLM students interested in this clinic should be in contact with the clinic directly.

Students must attend a mandatory orientation session on Friday, September 7, 2018 from 1:00-4:00 PM.

In this seminar associated with the Education Law Clinics Individual Case Advocacy students learn the theory and skills of case advocacy and its role in larger systemic change remedies. Students will learn to provide effective direct representation to clients in the special education system. The course is organized around a series of hands-on simulations, designed to help students develop the following skills: interviewing and counseling clients; reading and interpreting educational evaluations; preparing and interviewing expert witnesses; identifying substantive and procedural violations; formulating legal arguments and theories of the case; and interacting and negotiating with opposing counsel. In a typical semester, a hearing officer from the Massachusetts Bureau of Special Education Appeals visits the course and presides over a simulated settlement conference. In addition to building these concrete skills, the course will introduce students to a theoretical orientation that encourages them to see the individual child in a holistic way and to use their developing legal skills to obtain individual remedies that embrace all parts of the child.

Students will also learn how to identify systemic problems, assess the education systems response to at-risk children, and reflect on the challenges and rewards of interdisciplinary advocacy at the intersection of the fields of law, education, neurobiology, psychology, and public policy. Students will learn the unique role lawyers can play as part of an education reform movement and understand the need for multiple remedies that account for the complexity in the school experience of a child. Students will learn about the impact that traumatic experiences can have on childrens learning, behavior and relationships in school and about the ongoing multi-strategic advocacy campaign for safe and supportive school environments that is being conducted by the Trauma and Learning Policy Initiative (TLPI), a partnership between HLS and Massachusetts Advocates for Children.

There is no final examination for this course; students will prepare a "rounds" memo and presentation in which they lead a discussion with their colleagues based on their case. Please refer to the Office of Clinical and Pro Bono Programs (<http://www.law.harvard.edu/academics/clinical>) for clinical registration dates

Sports and the Law: Examining the Legal History and Evolution of America's Three "Major League" Sports: MLB, NFL and NBA

Course #: 2229 Term: 2018FA Faculty: Carfagna, Peter Credits: 1.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Business Organization, Commercial Law, and Finance; Employment & Labor Law; Intellectual Property, Cyberlaw and Technology, and Arts & Entertainment

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times: Location

Thu 1:15 PM - 2:45 PM WCC3018

Course Description: Prerequisites: None

Exam Type: Last-Class Take-Home

Class participation and successful completion of weekly assignments will count for a significant portion of the students final grade.

This basic Sports Law course will offer an overview of the three major sports that dominate the American sports scene today: Major League Baseball, the National Football League, and the National Basketball Association. The Course will devote approximately equal time to each of these 3 major sports, and compare/contrast the similarities and differences among them, from an historical legal perspective. Specifically, it will evaluate the evolution of the 3 major leagues, and examine how Supreme Court and other courts landmark decisions have affected the path of their progress. In so doing, practical examples of the cutting edge issues for practitioners in each of these 3 leagues will be offered. "Hypothetical" examples of negotiating, drafting and litigating the most significant issues in each of these 3 sports will be analyzed in group settings. Negotiation strategies, contract-drafting techniques and litigation-related resolutions will be explored within each group.

Enrollment is available to second year, third year and LLM students. For JD students who take this course, it will satisfy one half of the Option 2 writing requirement.

Students taking this course and who are interested in sports law clinical placements during winter or spring 2018 are strongly encouraged to enroll in the 2-credit fall 2018 "Sports and the Law: Advanced Contract Drafting." This seminar will provide students the opportunity to negotiate and draft agreements that a lawyer advising a sports team would encounter. Students in the seminar will learn about the various components of complex deal documents and have the opportunity to then draft these documents. Students in the seminar will also explore and experiment with negotiating strategies. Overall, the goal of the seminar is to have students master skills related to negotiating, drafting, and analyzing the various "moving parts" of complicated agreements regarding stadium leasing; naming rights; sponsorship; media rights; food and beverage; provision of medical; hospital and financial services; state-operated entities; and purchase and sale of sports teams.

This course fulfills the pre-requisite for the Sports Law Clinic. Please see the clinics description or review the Sports Law Clinic Guide for more information.

Note: 8 classes / first 9 weeks.

Students who are interested in the winter or spring 2018 Sports Law Clinic are strongly encouraged to enroll in both of Prof. Carfagnas fall courses: "Sports and the Law: Examining the Legal History and Evolution of Americas Three "Major League" Sports: MLB, NFL and NBA" and "Sports Law: Advanced Contract Drafting."

Fri 1:30 PM - 4:15 PM	WCC3018

Course Description: Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: Last Class Take-Home Class participation and successful completion of weekly assignments will count for a significant portion of the students final grade.

This course will begin with an overview of the sports marketing industry and then proceed to discuss some of the more important legal doctrines relating to that industry, involving intellectual property law, labor law and contract law. In that context, the course will explore the skills necessary to conduct a series of "hypothetical" sports-related contract negotiations. The students will then participate in group-based contract-drafting exercises with an emphasis on client representation. Contracts to be drafted include a "product endorsement agreement," and a "name, image and likeness" lithograph poster agreement. Simulated depositions and "oral arguments" will also be conducted. Next, in the context of a mock litigation, students will assume a "contract breach" of the agreements they have drafted. In turn, they will draft document requests, deposition questions and legal briefs in support of the contractual positions taken during the contract drafting exercises.

Enrollment is available to second year, third year, and LLM students. For JD students who take this course, it will satisfy one half of the Option 2 writing requirement.

Note: This course will meet for the first two weeks of the term from January 7 to January 18.

Each student will be responsible for one in-class presentation and two 6-8 page papers.

This survey course explores the nature and significance of state constitutional law, a topic that has long lived in the shadow of federal constitutional law but that has become increasingly relevant in recent years. The course covers rights and structure, and in both settings it compares the federal model to the various state models. Of particular emphasis is the role of the state courts in protecting liberty and property rights under their own constitutions, and most notably whether they should construe these guarantees to offer protections that the federal courts have not provided in construing the federal constitution. Examples include litigation involving school funding, marriage, property takings, criminal procedure, the free exercise of religion, among others. We also will consider the amendment procedures of the state constitutions, the election of state court judges, the non-unitary executive under most state constitutions and other structural issues.

This winter-term class is taken concurrently with the Supreme Court Litigation Clinic. Students are immersed in the intensive practice of law before the United States Supreme Court. Both the class and clinic will take place in Washington, D.C. to facilitate greater interaction between students, instructors and the litigation process at the Supreme Court.
The clinic and course will consist of intensive work on actual cases before the Court, as well as a series of lectures and classroom discussions on Supreme Court practice -- including strategy, procedure, brief writing, and oral advocacy. Students will be assigned to small teams, each working closely with an instructor to write and file a petition for certiorari, brief in opposition to certiorari, merits brief, amicus brief and/or to prepare for oral argument in a pending case. In addition, students will attend arguments at the Supreme Court, view a moot court, and meet with leading members of the Supreme Court bar, former Supreme Court clerks, and members of the Supreme Court press corps. Transportation to and from Washington, as well as housing during the term, will be provided.
The work is both rewarding and extremely intensive, precluding students from undertaking any significant non-class-related activities during the winter term. Students will work long hours, including on the weekends. They will be provided transportation to and from Washington, D.C., as well as housing (which will require students to share hotel rooms, likely two students per bedroom). Housing will not be provided for students spouses or significant others. Students will be responsible for providing themselves meals and transportation within the city (housing will be located as close as possible to the metro system).
Enrollment is through an application process. Interested students must submit a resume, an informal transcript, and an unedited writing sample (i.e., a writing sample not edited by anyone other than the author) of fifteen to twenty pages to Maggie Bay (mbay@law.harvard.edu) by October 1, 2018. Enrollment is limited to 10 students.

Supreme Court Litigation Clinic

Course #: 8030 Term: 2019WI Faculty: Goldstein, Thomas; Harrington, Sarah; Russell, Kevin Credits: 2.00

Type: Clinic Subject Areas: Constitutional Law & Civil Rights; Government Structure & Function; Procedure & Practice

Delivery Mode: Clinic

Days and Times: Location

Course Description: Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.

Enrollment in this clinic will fulfill the HLS JD pro bono requirement. Required Class Component: Supreme Court Litigation (1 winter classroom credit). This clinic and course are bundled; your enrollment in this clinic will automatically enroll you in the required course.

Additional Co-/Pre-Requisites: None.

By Permission: Yes. Applications are due October 1, 2018.

Add/Drop Deadline: November 30, 2018.

Placement Site: Washington D.C. This course is co-taught by Tom Goldstein, Kevin Russell, Sarah Harrington and Eric Citron.

This winter-term clinic is taken concurrently with the Supreme Court Litigation class. Students are immersed in the intensive practice of law before the United States Supreme Court. Both the class and clinic will take place in Washington, D.C. to facilitate greater interaction between students, instructors and the litigation process at the Supreme Court.

The clinic and course will consist of intensive work on actual cases before the Court, as well as a series of lectures and classroom discussions on Supreme Court practice -- including strategy, procedure, brief writing, and oral advocacy. Students will be assigned to small teams, each working closely with an instructor to write and file a petition for certiorari, brief in opposition to certiorari, merits brief, amicus brief and/or to prepare for oral argument in a pending case. In addition, students will attend arguments at the Supreme Court, view a moot court, and meet with leading members of the Supreme Court bar, former Supreme Court clerks, and members of the Supreme Court press corps. Transportation to and from Washington, as well as housing during the term, will be provided.

The work is both rewarding and extremely intensive, precluding students from undertaking any significant non-class-related activities during the winter term. Students will work long hours, including on the weekends. They will be provided transportation to and from Washington, D.C., as well as housing (which will require students to share hotel rooms, likely two students per bedroom). System-Involved Youth Clinical Seminar

Course #: 2275 Term: 2018FA Faculty: Hazen, Crisanne Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Family, Gender & Children's Law; Procedure & Practice

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times: Location

Thu 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM LEW214B

Course Description: Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.
Enrollment in this clinic will fulfill the HLS JD pro bono requirement.

Required Clinic Component: Child Advocacy Clinic: System-Involved Youth (4-5 fall clinical credits). This clinic and course are bundled; your enrollment in the clinic will automatically enroll you in this required course.

Additional Co-/Pre-Requisites: None.

By Permission: No.

Add/Drop Deadline: Please note this clinic has an early drop deadline of June 30, 2018.

LLM Students: International students on F-1 student visas are required to have Curricular Practical Training (CPT) authorization; LL.M. students are not eligible for CPT.
The Child Advocacy Clinic: System-Involved Youth is designed to educate students about a range of issues faced by children and youth involved in the child welfare and juvenile justice systems. With a specific focus on adolescents and young adults, this course will address issues such as transitioning out of the foster care system, sexual exploitation, teen parenting, medical consent, and the rights of youth in the juvenile justice system.

All clinic students participate in both the classroom seminar and a clinical fieldwork component during the fall semester.

During the fall seminar, students bring into the classroom their varied experiences, presenting on both specific projects and cases in which they are engaged, and also their placement organizations larger vision for improving conditions for children involved in the child welfare and juvenile justice systems. Students reflect on each others varied experiences, consider which strategies in the field are working and why, and evaluate the benefits and limitations of different approaches. Students will learn about and thoughtfully consider the unique legal issues affecting this population of youth through reflections, readings and class discussions.

Regular classroom attendance and active participation in discussion is required. Grading will be based on a combination of each students clinical fieldwork, seminar presentation and related packet, contributions to class discussion throughout the term, and one or more short reflection papers.

Once enrolled in the Clinic, the Child Advocacy Program (CAP) will provide students with a list of fieldwork placement sites and their potential projects. Students will give CAP information about their background and interests and rank their placement preferences. CAP will then match students with a placement based on their preferences, the organizations' needs, and CAPs mission to provide students with a broad spectrum of experiences. Visit the CAP Clinic webpage for more about the Clinic, including answers to frequently asked questions.

This course is part of the Child Advocacy Program (CAP), whose other courses are: Art of Social Change; Child Advocacy: Child Welfare, Education & Juvenile Justice Clinical Seminar; Child, Family, and State (alternating years); Family Law (alternating years); and the Future of the Family seminar. Enrollment in all CAP courses is encouraged but not required.

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Procedure & Practice

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times: Location

Thu 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM WCC3011

Course Description: Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.
Required Clinic Component: Education Law Clinic: Legislative and Administrative Lawyering (3-5 spring clinical credits). This clinic and course are bundled; your enrollment in the clinic will automatically enroll you in this required course.
Additional Co-/Pre-Requisites: None.
By Permission: No.
Add/Drop Deadline: Please note this clinic has an early drop deadline of November 30, 2018.
LLM Students: LLM students interested in this clinic should be in contact with the clinic directly.

Please note this course has a unique schedule. There will be two meetings of the course in each of the first two weeks of the semester in order to front load content so students are prepared to engage in advocacy. To compensate, there will be two weeks in the middle of the semester where there is no class meeting. The course will meet on the following dates and times:

Tue, Jan 29, 8 - 10am*
Thu, Jan 31, 5 - 7 pm
Tue, Feb 5, 8 - 10 am*
Thu, Feb 7, 5 - 7 pm

Thu, Apr 4, 5 - 7 pm
Thu, Apr 11, 5 - 7 pm
Thu, Apr 18, 5 - 7 pm
Thu, Apr 25, 5 - 7 pm

* = Irregular course meeting time

Please also note that students are required to schedule a substantial portion of their clinic office hours for the associated clinic (Education Law Clinic: Legislative and Administrative Lawyering) on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays because these are the days the Massachusetts legislature is typically in session.

In this seminar students will learn the theory and practice the skills that will enable them to be effective legislative and administrative lawyers in the area of education. Students will learn how to identify and understand systemic problems, assess the educational systems response to at-risk children, and reflect on the challenges and rewards of interdisciplinary advocacy at the intersection of the fields of law, education, neurobiology, psychology, and public policy. The seminar will cover several general substantive areas related to legislative and administrative lawyering: the constitutional roles and powers of the General Court, the executive branch and administrative agencies in Massachusetts, House and Senate procedure, the state budget process, and lobbying. The readings and activities in this seminar are designed to support and encourage reflection on the legislative lawyering skills that students will develop and practice in their clinical work, including: identifying and researching a problem, proposing solutions and approaches, developing and drafting a desired legislative remedy, learning who the stakeholders are in the education establishment, accurately assessing the political and legal landscape surrounding the desired remedy, building a vibrant and effective coalition, engaging in oral presentations and negotiations, and analyzing ethical issues that arise in legislative and administrative advocacy. The seminar will also introduce students to distinguished guest speakers from practice. The goal is for students to learn the unique role lawyers can play as part of a movement to create effective remedies for at-risk children.

There is no final examination for this course; students will prepare a presentation in which they lead a discussion with their colleagues based on an interesting issue or problem they encountered in their clinic advocacy during the semester.

Tax Law, Finance, and Strategic Planning

Course #: 2806 Term: 2018FA Faculty: Brennan, Thomas Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Taxation

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times:	Location
Wed 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM	WCC5044

Course Description: Prerequisite: Taxation

Exam Type: No Exam

This course develops tools for understanding and evaluating the effect tax laws have on strategic planning in both business and personal contexts. The perspective taken is generally that of financial economics, with cash flows resulting from transactions being viewed as items which are subject to valuation using asset pricing techniques. This approach allows for a precise understanding of where the value in a transaction comes from and how careful tax planning can help maximize this value. Consideration is also given to policy responses to strategic planning.

No advanced coursework in finance is assumed, but a variety of concepts are introduced in the course, and students are expected to learn how to use them effectively in the context of arriving at optimal tax strategies. Techniques covered include present value analysis, the use of payoff diagrams, option pricing using simple models and the Black-Scholes formula, and, as time permits, application of tax strategies to data sets based on historical and simulated financial data.

This course focuses on the U.S. federal income tax and the policy considerations that inform the design of the tax, which has become an important governmental tool for influencing many aspects of modern American life. The course accordingly examines not only the concept of taxable income, but also how the federal government uses the tax to influence the behavior of taxpayers across the income spectrum. A principal goal of this course is also to teach students to analyze and apply a complex federal statute. Unless waived by the instructor, Taxation is generally a pre-requisite for J.D. students in the advanced tax courses.

The materials for the course are Graetz, and Schenk, Federal Income Taxation, and CCH Federal Income Tax, Code and Regulations, Selected Sections.

By permission: Teaching Copyright is open to all Harvard Law School students who either have already taken a course on Copyright at HLS or will be enrolled in such a course during the Spring of 2019. Harvard Law School students who satisfy these requirements may enroll by emailing Kathy Curley at curley@law.harvard.edu by November 21. Other students may enroll only with the permission of the instructor. To seek such permission, please send a resume and an explanation of your interest and qualifications to tfisher@law.harvard.edu by November 21.

Exam Type: No Exam

This course is designed for students who are interested in deepening their knowledge of copyright law and gaining experience with law teaching. Each student in the course will be a Teaching Fellow for CopyrightX, an online copyright course taught by Prof. Fisher to roughly 500 students worldwide. The weekly meetings of the course have two functions: to provide an advanced seminar on copyright; and to provide students guidance and support as they learn to teach.

CopyrightX closely parallels the HLS course on Copyright. Like the HLS students, the CopyrightX students learn the essential elements of both doctrine and theory by watching videotaped lectures prepared by Prof. Fisher, reading cases and secondary materials, and watching webcast special events in which guest speakers examine controversial current topics. In addition, each CopyrightX student participates in a 25-person seminar led by a Teaching Fellow.

Each Teaching Fellow has two primary responsibilities: to conduct each week an 80-minute live online discussion that uses case studies to refine the students understanding of the pertinent laws and policies; and to draft or revise (at some point during the semester) one case study that will be employed both by Prof. Fisher and by the other Teaching Fellows to facilitate discussions. In addition, the Teaching Fellows will meet once a week with Prof. Fisher to discuss the issues addressed in the lecture and readings for that week and to exchange ideas concerning possible ways of teaching their own seminars. During most weeks, this meeting will be held during one of the time slots allocated to the regular Copyright course. On a few occasions, however, it will meet on a weekday evening.

Additional information concerning CopyrightX and the role of the Teaching Fellows can be found by visiting copyx.org or by emailing [copyrightx\[at\]cyber.law.harvard.edu](mailto:copyrightx[at]cyber.law.harvard.edu).

Note: The credit breakdown for this course is as follows: three total credits -- two classroom credits and one writing credit.

Days and Times:	Location

Course Description: Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: No Exam

This Reading Group will discuss the role of courts in monitoring decisions of federal agencies. For decades federal courts have reviewed the policy decisions of administrative agencies to ensure they are carefully made and not "arbitrary and capricious." There is widespread debate, however, over the scope of this standard of review. Should courts only monitor the process an agency follows? Should they strive to keep politics out of agency decision-making? And, in any event, how hard of a look should a court give to an agency rule?

Recent events heighten the stakes of this debate. When the FCC changed course on net neutrality, for example, there were allegations that many of the comments received were either fraudulent or misleading in some way. Commentators questioned whether it is a courts job to police the quality of the rule-making process. Should courts hunt for "alternative facts" and forbid reliance on them? And, to take another example, the EPAs decision to dramatically change the qualifications for its advisory board received a significant amount of criticism. Should that decision be subject to judicial review?

The purpose of this Reading Group will be to explore these questions and to debate the virtues and vices of relying on increased judicial intervention to supervise the actions of administrative agencies.

Note: This reading group will meet on the following dates: 9/13, 9/27, 10/11, 10/25, 11/8, 11/29. Attendance at all sessions will be required.

Financial services are subject to historic regulatory change. The Dodd-Frank Act is a case in point, although the legislation and the hundreds of rulemakings that it directed do not capture all that has been underway and that is still to come. The regulatory developments taking hold impact banks, broker-dealers, mutual funds, hedge funds, private equity funds, exchanges, credit rating agencies, investors, and others in the finance industry as well as operating companies that rely on banks and capital markets. This course will focus on these developments, including the state of the financial regulatory landscape and its impact on our capital markets, the role and mission of the SEC, and how the SEC operates in practice. Troy Paredes, who will be teaching the course, will offer an insiders view, having served as an SEC Commissioner from 2008-2013.

Exam: Takehome, not administered by HLS

A study of approaches in the philosophical traditions of the West and the East to the conduct of life. Philosophical ethics has often been understood as meta-ethics: the development of a method of moral inquiry or justification. Here we focus instead on what philosophy has to tell us about the first-order question: How should we live our lives?

This year a major concern will be the study and contrast of two such orientations to existence. One is the philosophical tradition focused on ideas of self-reliance, self-construction, and nonconformity (exemplified by Emerson and Nietzsche). The other is a way of thinking (notably represented by Confucius) that puts its hope in a dynamic of mutual responsibility, shaped by role and ritual and informed by imaginative empathy.

More than 6 million Americans are under "correctional supervision" in the United States, which incarcerates people at a rate drastically out of proportion with its population compared with the rest of the world. The yearly US cost of incarceration is over $60 billion per year. There are major debates on incarceration issues swirling in the general public and in the legal community ranging from the morality and efficacy of solitary confinement to the effects of prison overcrowding to the proper administration of parole to the appropriateness of life sentences without parole for a variety of populations and crimes. The effects of incarceration fall disproportionately on communities of color and perpetuate the cycle of poverty.

Through a combination of practical experiences and written texts, students will examine the experience and effects of incarceration and parole locally, nationally, and internationally. Experiences in the reading group will include: touring local prisons or jails, meetings with lifetime parolees and formerly incarcerated individuals, and a wide variety of written texts including essays, case studies, and research.

Students numbered 1-5 on the waitlist who plan to enroll if the opportunity arises should attend the first class, as long as other course scheduling permits.

This course explores the international law of the sea, which is one of the most important and compelling areas of public international law. The law of the sea focuses on the distribution of authority among flag states, coastal states, and port states, to regulate activities over 70 percent of the globe. This area of law is a prominent feature of international politics, evident in disputes in the South China Sea, East China Sea, Mediterranean Sea, the Black Sea, the Indian Ocean, and the Arctic Ocean. Topics also include rules governing international shipping, which carries more than 90 percent of all international trade; submarine cables, which carry 97% of all Internet communications; freedom of navigation and military operations; maritime boundary delimitation and offshore energy and mineral development; marine resource conservation and fisheries; deep seabed mining as the "common heritage of mankind"; marine scientific research and access and benefits of marine genetic resources and bioprospecting; marine environmental protection and approaches to climate change; human rights and refugee migration at sea; international criminal law and terrorism, drug trafficking, and piracy at sea, and dispute resolution procedures, which include binding arbitration, tribunals and the International Court of Justice. Sources of law include cases, norms, regimes, and agreements, including the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea.

Course #: 2129 Term: 2018FA Faculty: Alford, William; Blum, Gabriella Credits: 2.00
Type: Elective Subject Areas: Government Structure & Function; International, Comparative & Foreign Law;
Legal & Political Theory

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times:	Location
Wed 3:00 PM - 5:00 PM	HAU104

Course Description: Prerequisites: There are no prerequisites for this workshop, but it is generally intended for students with a strong academic bent.

Exam Type: No Exam

This workshop is intended to provide students with the opportunity to enmesh themselves in scholarly writing about international law by exploring challenges scholars in this field face and bringing to the workshop a range of scholars engaged in some of the most interesting new work in it. Generally, our invited speakers--some from law and some from other disciplines--will present work in progress. Our focus will be on the intellectual underpinnings of the fields rather than hands-on practice. Students in the class will be required to submit four brief "reflection" pieces commenting on the papers to be presented and will also be expected to question the presenter during the session. Some sessions will be reserved for meetings without outside speakers.

Note: Enrollment is limited to 35 students. All students wishing to take the class -- including those on the waitlist or considering adding it -- should be sure to attend the first session. Please direct any questions to Professor Alford or Professor Blum.

An integrated political economy now covers much of the globe. This course focuses on the monetary structure of that phenomenon as a matter created and contested in law. Trade, extraction, exchange, debt, and economic development – for centuries, all have depended on money as their medium. By examining the changing legal design of money, we will study globalization as a material, ideological, and distributive event of enormous significance. Early sovereigns prioritized domestic law, both public and private, in developing the rules that provide the basic matrix for exchange. Those rules created the mediums that carry value – including money, credit, and circulating capital. Nation-states today still claim sovereignty over those decisions; they are basic to self-determination and economic development. But the latitude for those decisions had changed. New monetary and financial relations now bind states, individuals, and other entities together and reconfigure the possibilities for their interaction. We consider the way that political communities assert sovereignty in money and finance, the challenges that occur as different sovereign projects collide, interact, or compete with one another, and the character of the international orders that have resulted, including those of early Europe, the era of the Gold Standard, the Bretton Woods period, and the contemporary system. We will focus, in particular, on the advent and development of finance-based money, a form of liquidity based on sovereign debt and expanded by commercial banks and capital markets. We discuss how that finance-based form defines value, authority, and markets in the modern world, with attention to its influence shaping international law and international financial institutions, its role as the medium for much of modern globalization, and its implications for global and domestic inequality.

Course #: 2901 Term: 2018FA Faculty: Klarman, Michael Credits: 1.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Constitutional Law & Civil Rights; Legal & Political Theory; Legal History

Delivery Mode: Reading Group

Days and Times: Location

Wed 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM WCC3008

Course Description: Prerequisite: Those who have already taken Professor Klarmans Constitutional History I course are not eligible to sign up for this reading group (as they will have already read the book).

Exam Type: No Exam

There is no exam. Students will be asked to write one short (four-to-six pages) reaction paper and to do the reading and contribute to class discussion.

This upper-level reading group will read and discuss Professor Klarmans recently published book, "The Framers Coup: The Making of the United States Constitution." For each session we will read a chapter of the book. The six sessions will be on the following six topics: The flaws in the Articles of Confederation, the economic conflicts in the states in the mid-1780s that directly contributed to the making of the Constitution, the Philadelphia convention, slavery at the Philadelphia convention, ratification, and the Bill of Rights.

Some of the chapters will take only an hour or two to read, but a couple of them could take as long as four or five hours; please don't sign up for the course unless you are certain you want to do this much reading.

Note: This reading group will meet on the following dates: 9/26, 10/3, 10/10, 10/24, 11/7, 11/14. Students are asked to hold 11/28, as well, in the event any rescheduling should be necessary.

Course Description: Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: No Exam

In this course, we will study the trial of Nazi leaders at the International Military Tribunal at Nuremberg to see how law is created, interpreted, represented, and itself has force and shapes our understanding of events over time and among different communities and through different disciplines and mediums. We will look at how the precedent of Nuremberg, which gave birth to the field of international criminal law, has been represented in law, history, literature, and film over the decades; how it has come to have different meanings at different times and in different places in the world; and how it was represented, and shaped events, in the 1990s when the international criminal law project was "re-born" with the creation of the ad-hoc international criminal tribunals. Nuremberg is a rich subject to study precisely because it represented the creation of law and it has come to mean different things to so many over the years. The course will thus be a study of law itself, how it operates in the world, and of the origins of international criminal law.

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Government Structure & Function

Delivery Mode: Reading Group

Days and Times:	Location
Tue 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM	WCC4061

Course Description: Prerequisite: Students who have participated in the State Attorney General clinic or the two credit "Role of the State Attorney General" course are not eligible to participate in this reading group.

Exam Type: No Exam

State attorneys general and their staff have become increasingly important actors in American jurisprudence. Attorneys general continue to make their mark in consumer protection, antitrust, civil rights, education, food policy, immigration, labor law, political corruption and environmental protection even as they tender daily legal advice to state government. Working alone or in combination with the federal government, their colleagues in other states or with businesses, unions and interest groups, the attorneys general are now major players in American jurisprudence.

This one credit reading group will examine the core duties of attorneys general and reviews and critique their authority and performance. The class will examine the means utilized by attorneys general in carrying out their responsibilities including their ethical responsibilities. We will also discuss the implications for federalism and separation of powers by exploring state relations with state and federal agencies that have parallel jurisdiction. Finally, the course will discuss the impact that interest groups and the media have on the office of attorney general. Attorneys general and their staff regularly visit the class.

The Pro-defendant Bias in the Adjudication of Mass Injury Cases

Credits: 1.00

Type: Elective

Subject Areas: Procedure & Practice

Delivery Mode: Reading Group

Days and Times:

Location

Wed 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM

Course Description: Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: No Exam

Privately financed civil liability actions presenting claims of mass injury serve law enforcement objectives of preventing and redressing such business and government illegalities as toxic torts, product defects, environmental pollution, consumer and securities fraud, corporate misgovernance, antitrust conspiracy, employment discrimination, civil rights deprivations, professional malpractice, and constitutional violations. In this reading group, we will examine the Supreme Courts invocation of the "ideal" "that everyone should have his own day in court" to justify radically restricting use of class action and other collectivized methods of adjudicating mass injury cases. Analysis of the principal rulings from the perspectives of theory and practice will expose how the Courts embrace of this individualistic, anti-collectivist ethos has structurally biased adjudication of mass injury cases in favor defendants. Focusing on key modes of collectivized adjudication -- including trial and settlement of class and consolidated actions; sampling; risk-based liability; "third party" claim assignment and financing; and insurance-fund judgments -- we will consider whether, contrary to the Courts supposition, individual justice can best be done by collective means. Though essential to practical as well as basic understanding of mass injury litigation, the insights as well as questions we shall consider receive superficial if any treatment in other courses.

Note: This reading group will meet on the following dates: 1/30, 2/13, 2/27, 3/13, 4/3, 4/17.

Course Description: Prerequisites: Constitutional Law: Separation of Powers, Federalism, and Fourteenth Amendment or Constitutional Law: First Amendment

Exam Type: No Exam

The contemporary debate over the proper role of a federal judge under the Constitution turns, in large measure, on what it is we think an Article III judge is doing when she is called upon to resolve a "case or controversy." Is she looking for the fair result? If so, by whose lights? Is she a political actor, or is she instead looking for a rule of decision that has been previously established by law (a "mere translator" of the law, in Justice Frankfurters words). If so, by natural law or positive law? These are some of the questions we will consider in discussing what role a federal judge plays when she exercises "the judicial Power of the United States" conferred by Article III of the Constitution.

The United States Congress is the "board of directors" for the Federal Government, and it plays the central role in most national policy decisions. Yet how it works - the real story of how it works - is largely unknown, even among people who have worked in policymaking for a long time. Taught by the faculty chair of Harvards Bipartisan Program for Newly Elected Members of Congress, this course puts students in the midst of legislative politics through academic readings and real-world cases. The course begins with the theory and history of legislatures and ends with a simulation involving lobbyists, journalists, and would-be legislators. It is ideal for anyone considering working with the Congress or state legislatures.

Note: This course is jointly-listed with HKS as DPI-120. It will be held on the HKS campus in Belfer 200.

Delivery Mode: Seminar
Days and Times:		Location
Tue 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM		WCC3012
Course Description: Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: No Exam
There is no exam or long-paper requirement. Students are expected to attend class, do the readings, and participate in class discussion. In addition, you will be asked to write 2 short papers over the course of the semester responding to the readings. These should be in the range of 4-6 double-spaced pages. Final grades will be based half on these short papers and half on class participation.

This seminar will examine most of the leading constitutional rulings of the Warren Court. The readings will be considerable--you should expect somewhere between 6 and 8 hours of reading per week--as I am trying to give you a wide range of angles from which to approach each of the subject matter areas we will be discussing. Readings will include: cert. memos from law clerks, briefs, conference notes, memos between the justices, excerpted opinions, newspaper reaction, letters to the justices, and law review commentary. We will also be using Lucas Powes The Warren Court and American Politics to provide background and an overview. Please do not sign up for the course unless you are prepared to commit to doing this much reading.

Title IX of the Civil Rights Act promises equal access to educational opportunities. This has been one of the most dynamic areas of civil rights activism in the recent past, and promises to remain so. Under the Obama Administration, protecting students from sex assault was a capstone priority. Such efforts may not remain a high priority in the new administration. Thus, we will consider the question of how essential the federal governments role is in enforcing Title IXs equity principles? What other levers are available to further the civil rights of students to a safe and equal educational environment? This course provides the opportunity to develop a robust discourse on critical issues of gender equality in schools, including issues of gender identity. Readings include cases, articles, and decisions by the Office of Civil Rights of the Department of Education.

Note: The first class meeting is scheduled for Friday, September 7 from 3pm to 5pm in WCC 3018.

Topics in Policy Reform: Race and Poverty in the Criminal Justice System

Course #: 2801

Term: 2018FS

Faculty: Steiker, Carol; Whiting, Alex

Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective

Subject Areas: Criminal Law & Procedure

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times:

Location

Wed 3:00 PM - 5:00 PM

Course Description: Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.
Prerequisite: The seminar is by permission of the instructors. To apply, students should submit a brief statement of their interest and relevant background (courses, internships, and work/life experience) in criminal justice issues to aweick@law.harvard.edu.

Exam Type: No Exam

This full-year seminar immerses students in the work of criminal justice policy reform. The centerpiece of the seminar is sustained, substantive work on criminal justice policy initiatives led by the Criminal Justice Policy Program (CJPP), a research and advocacy center based at HLS. Students work on policy projects geared toward real-world reform under the supervision of the Program's Executive Director (Brook Hopkins) and faculty Co-Directors (Professors Carol Steiker & Alex Whiting), and CJPP staff, typically in partnership with outside organizations and government agencies.

This year's policy projects will have as their focus the intersection of race and poverty in the criminal justice system. In addition to the policy projects, the seminar engages students in an ongoing discussion of modes and strategies for achieving criminal justice reform as well as fundamental normative questions about the operation of the criminal justice system, including its interaction with questions of social and racial justice.

The seminar hosts prominent practitioners and policymakers as visiting lecturers to discuss strategies for reform and to provide background and guidance on the seminar's policy projects. Students are invited to all of the public events sponsored by CJPP and may be involved in choosing topics and planning such events.

Although there is no final exam or final paper, students will be expected to do substantial writing over the course of the seminar and to present their policy reform projects to the other seminar participants.

Note: This seminar will meet every other week over the entire year.

The credit breakdown for this seminar is as follows: 4 credits total with 1 classroom credit and 1 writing credit per term, and the option of applying for an additional writing credit each term. Note that due to the Experiential designation of this course, the writing credits will not automatically fulfill the HLS Written Work Requirement.

Thu 8:20 AM - 10:20 AM WCC1019

Course Description: Exam Type: In Class

The field of "Torts" covers civil wrongs, in breach of obligations that do not arise out of relations voluntarily entered into by the tortfeasor and the victim.

To commit a tort is to violate a duty owed to another not to injure her, such that the other is granted a power to recover from the injurer. Tort law determines what counts as a wrong, what a plaintiff must prove to obtain redress, the defenses by which a defendant can avoid liability, and the remedies available to successful plaintiffs. Examining negligence, battery, assault, trespass, nuisance, and other torts, this course will explore tort law and larger theoretical questions that it raises.

Course Description: Exam Type: In Class

This course concerns the legal protection afforded in civil proceedings against interference by others with security of ones person, property or intangible interests. It is not directly concerned with the law of property and contract, which form the subject of other courses, but it explores relationships with these bodies of law. Three fundamental theories of liability emerge: intentional interference, negligence, and strict liability. The influence of these theories and of associated policies is studied in the context of recognized categories of tort liability, particularly assault, battery, interference with peace of mind, negligence, trespass, nuisance, product liability and also no-fault plans. Through these illustrations the course seeks to develop an understanding of the laws search for basic principles to govern the resolution of human conflicts, particularly disputes having to do with the harmful side-effects of productive activity. Professor Sargentich will use Keeton, Sargentich, and Keating, Tort and Accident Law (4th ed. 2004).

Course Description: Exam Type: In-Class

A tort is a wrong. To commit a tort is to violate a duty owed to another not to injure her, such that the other is granted a power to hold the wrongdoer accountable. Tort law determines what counts as a wrong, what a plaintiff must prove to obtain recourse, the defenses by which a defendant can avoid liability, and the remedies available to successful plaintiffs. Examining negligence, medical malpractice, products liability, battery, assault, trespass, nuisance, and other torts, this course will explore tort law and larger theoretical questions that it raises.

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Business Organization, Commercial Law, and Finance; Procedure & Practice

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times: Location

Tue 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM WCCB010

Course Description: Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.
Required Clinic Component: Transactional Law Clinics (4-5 fall clinical credits). This clinic and course are bundled; your enrollment in the clinic will automatically enroll you in this required course.
Additional Co-/Pre-Requisites: None.
By Permission: No.
Add/Drop Deadline: August 28, 2018.
LLM Students: LLM students are eligible to enroll in this clinic through Helios.
This course is the classroom component of the clinical practice for students enrolled in one of the Transactional Practice Clinics (TLC). Students in the Workshop will choose to concentrate their clinical practice in one or more of the four TLC clinics: Business and Non-Profit, Real Estate, Recording Artist Project (entertainment), Community Enterprise Project (CEP) (please note that students interested in the CEP will need to submit an application instead of enrolling through Helios – please see the CEP course catalog description for more information about the application process). In the classroom and the clinical work, students will have the opportunity to explore and directly experience the various roles performed by transactional lawyers in providing legal services to small businesses, non-profit organizations, real estate parties, community development corporations, or individuals and companies in the arts and entertainment industry. Students will develop legal skills utilized by transactional lawyers and will gain the perspective of transactional practice in the context of actual client representation. Depending upon their clinical concentration and clients needs, students typically will have opportunities to engage in entity formation; contract negotiation and drafting; commercial financing; business acquisition; commercial leasing; licensing and permitting; trademark and copyright; corporate governance and compliance; real estate transactions and development; affordable housing development; zoning; condominium development; or other transactional legal work. Students will be exposed to the various challenges faced by clients engaged in transactional activities and to the laws, policies and institutions impacting their ability to succeed. In addition, the course will engage students in critical reflection about the ethical, strategic and policy dimensions of their clinical work; as well as invite reflection about their own professional development. In the classroom component of the course, every student will participate in "rounds" sessions, by presenting a challenging case for class discussion and by critiquing and analyzing the presentations of fellow students.
A clinical practice component is required of all students. Clinical placements are with the Transactional Practice Clinics (www.harvardtlc.org).
Enrollment is through clinical registration. Please refer to the Office of Clinical and Pro Bono Programs website (<http://www.law.harvard.edu/academics/clinical>) for clinical registration dates, early add/drop deadlines, and other information about the clinical.

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times: Location

Course Description: Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.
Prerequisites: For JD students there are no formal prerequisites, although familiarity with the rules of evidence is assumed throughout the course. For LLM students, permission of the instructor is required.

Exam Type: No Exam

Early drop deadline of Tuesday, August 28, 2018.

Please note: There will be a mandatory meeting on Wednesday, April 11, 2018, in Austin 100 at 12:00 p.m. for all students enrolled in the Fall 2018 Trial Advocacy Workshop.

The Fall Trial Advocacy Workshop (TAW) is an intensive course in trial analysis, skills, and techniques taught complete in three weeks. More detailed descriptions of the organization and content of the Workshop program appear below. The Workshop is a required component of ITA: Prosecution Perspectives, and Criminal Justice Institute: Defense Theory and Practice. The course is graded Credit/Fail. Any questions pertaining to the Workshop should be directed to Professor Ronald S. Sullivan Jr.: rsullivan@law.harvard.edu and to Carol M. Flores: cflores@law.harvard.edu.

Course days and hours: Monday through Friday, 2:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. Students are allowed four hoursmaximum of class conflicts per week (HLS courses only). Students must be available for trials from 2:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. on 9/12, 9/13, 9/14, 9/19, 9/20, and 9/21. If you have concerns regarding the conflicts policy and your schedule, please contact Professor Ronald S. Sullivan Jr.:rsullivan@law.harvard.edu and Carol M. Flores: cflores@law.harvard.edu.

The Fall Trial Advocacy Workshop will take place beginning Tuesday, September 4, 2018 to Friday, September 21, 2018 (there is no class on Monday, September 3, 2018 due to the Labor Day holiday). The course focuses on the task of the trial lawyer to create in the consciousness of the fact-finders the precise fact picture, which reflects the lawyer's version of the case. The Workshop includes simulated exercises on all aspects of in-court trial practice including opening statements, development of witness testimony on direct and cross examination, use of illustrative aids and exhibits in evidence, impeachment, expert testimony and summations. An important feature of the Workshop is the on-the-spot evaluation and critique by experienced trial lawyers and judges who teach as volunteers during the Workshop. Student performances are also video-recorded and individually critiqued.

The Fall Trial Advocacy Workshop requires intensive study, preparation, and activity. The program is structured as follows:

1. For the first week of the Workshop, students will meet in classroom sessions (large groups and small groups) for simulated trial advocacy exercises from 2:00 p.m. to 6:00 p.m. daily. Each student will be expected to perform each of the assigned exercises each day. These sessions will involve short role-playing assignments for students in various aspects of trial advocacy, evaluations of performances, and occasional demonstrations by members of the teaching team.

2. Students will have opportunities, individually or in groups, for detailed review or critique of video-recordings of their own and each other's performances. One or more members of the teaching team will be available at scheduled hours to participate in this review.
3. Following each day's classroom exercises, the students are invited to supper with the faculty, which consists of experienced judges and lawyers, and are required to attend an evening lecture-demonstration from 7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. each evening.
4. Students will participate in two full trials as members of a team of students trying the case. Trial time will include two to four hours of pretrial conferences and five to eight hours of trial performance and critique for each trial. Students will also be expected to serve as witnesses in two additional trials.

Texts: Mauet, Trial Techniques (required), plus multilithed materials and case files.
Murray, Basic Trial Advocacy (optional)

Note: For upper-level JD students, this course will be included in the Multi-Section registration round.

4. A similar schedule is followed for the first two days of the second week of the workshop. Wednesday of the second week is a trial preparation day. Simulated non-jury trials take place on the last two days of the week. Each student participates in one non-jury trial as a lawyer and in one as a witness.

5. The first two days of the third week of the workshop follow the same classroom schedule as the first week. On Thursday and Friday of the third week of the workshop, participants conduct simulated jury trials in state and federal courthouses.

Course Description: Prerequisites: None

Exam Type: Any Day Take-Home

This course examines the laws underlying U.S. policymaking for trade. It explores the different means through which the U.S. has attempted to use trade agreements as well as unilateral measures to advance its economic and geostrategic interests. How is policy crafted among the different agencies and branches within the U.S. government? How have digital technology, offshoring, the rise of China, and the impasse in multilateral negotiations impacted U.S. interests and strategy? Among the topics to be explored are: delegation of powers; national security reviews; preference programs for developing countries; recent free trade agreements (TPP and USMCA); export controls; and adjustment assistance for workers displaced by trade. Particular emphasis will be placed on comparing the Trump Administrations policies with those of its recent predecessors.

Note that this class does not require any previous knowledge of trade law. However, students who already have taken the upper-level International Trade Law course are welcome to enroll, as this course serves as a complement to that course. It is intended to cover elements of U.S. domestic law related to trade. Students interested primarily in WTO law are advised to take the International Trade Law class in addition (or instead) of this course. That course will be offered in 2019-2020 (when this course is not expected to be offered).

Course Description: Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.
Prerequisites: The admission is by permission only and interested students should send a resume and a cover letter to the instructor at vbosiljevac@law.harvard.edu. The deadline for LLM and upper-level JD applications is November 5. The deadline for 1L applications is November 15.
Exam Type: No Exam
The goal of this class is to provide students with the investment banking toolkit for assessing and modeling M&A and leveraged buyout (LBO) transactions that is used in Wall Street investment banks. Students will learn how to model and evaluate mergers and LBOs in Excel as investment bankers do (background topics such as accounting will be covered). They will learn about the strategic reasons and tactics for mergers and acquisitions, LBOs, corporate divestiture, restructurings, and hostile takeovers from investment bankers’ perspective. Case studies of mergers, acquisitions and LBOs drawn from a variety of different industries throughout the world will be examined.
The class workload and assignments will be challenging, requiring students to apply learned concepts, tools and techniques to real-world problems. Active participation is required.
There is no final exam. Instead, there will be a final take-home project requiring students to build an advanced merger model and a pitchbook (40-50 hours workload) as one would do in an investment bank. Course materials will include textbooks, HBS cases, and modeling video tutorials.
No prior experience in finance is required. On contrary, the ideal student is highly motivated with no practical investment banking experience. Students who have worked in investment banking or private equity (either as analysts prior to law school or as summer interns) should not take this course.
This course is intended for students who want to embark on a career in finance or who will practice corporate law (mergers and acquisitions, capital markets, corporate transactions and other related fields).

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times: Location

Mon 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM WCC5044

Course Description: Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.
Required Clinic Component: Veterans Law and Disability Benefits Clinic (3-5 spring clinical credits). This clinic and course are bundled; your enrollment in the clinic will automatically enroll you in this required course.
Additional Co-/Pre-Requisites: None.
By Permission: No.
Add/Drop Deadline: January 11, 2019.
LLM Students: LLM students may apply to the clinic by submitting an application.
This seminar is the companion course for students enrolled in the Veterans Law and Disability Benefits Clinic of the WilmerHale Legal Services Center.
Students in the Clinic: (1) represent veterans in federal and state administrative and court appeals to challenge wrongful denials of veterans benefits and in military discharge upgrade cases; (2) represent veterans and their families in estate and financial planning matters such as wills, trusts, advanced directives, guardianships, and conservatorships; or (3) represent clients, some of whom are veterans and others of whom are non-veterans, in federal administrative and court appeals to challenge wrongful denials of Social Security disability benefits. Students also have opportunities to engage in systemic reform initiatives--through litigation and/or policy work--to improve the lives of veterans with disabilities. The seminar provides students with a practical toolkit (including skills related to client and witness interviewing; fact investigation; working with experts; drafting pleadings, motions, and briefs; drafting legal instruments; examining and cross-examining witnesses at hearings; appellate advocacy; presenting oral argument; engaging in negotiation; and solving ethical dilemmas) for representing veterans, their families, and individuals with disabilities. Because of the complex array of legal issues veterans and persons with disabilities face, the substantive law covered in the seminar includes elements of administrative, mental health, probate, and constitutional law, among other relevant topics. The seminar will also provide students an opportunity to consider larger questions about the laws and policies affecting veterans and persons with disabilities and about the design of social welfare programs more generally. Course Description: Students who enroll in this offering may count the credits towards the JD experiential learning requirement.

Note: This course is restricted to first-year J.D. students only.

The drop deadline for 1L January Experiential Term classes is November 30, 2018. Students may not drop a course if they do not have an offer to enroll in a different January Experiential Term course. Most course enrollments are limited to 72 students.

1L January Experiential Term courses are intensive learning courses. Class attendance is required in each course every day of the term, beginning Monday, January 7th. Students should make their travel plans accordingly. Students should not take on other work commitments during the term.

Exam Type: No Exam

What kind of lawyer do you want to be? This course is designed to introduce you to some of the practical skills and analytical approaches that lawyers use to help clients to achieve their goals in different practice settings, with an eye toward helping you to identify the practice area(s) in which you would like to specialize, as well as the style(s) of lawyering with which you feel most comfortable. Each problem that we will cover emphasizes a different kind of client with a different kind of problem, requiring a lawyer in a different kind of role, emphasizing a different kind of skill. In addition to highlighting the differences in these roles, the course will explore themes and ethical issues that permeate each of these areas of practice, albeit in different ways, and it will highlight some of the professional and personal challenges that you may face throughout your legal career.

More specifically, during this course, you will try on different lawyer hats in the context of pro bono and public interest lawyering and in private practice, sometimes in the civil and sometimes in the criminal context. The skill sets that you will try out include interviewing clients, interpreting and negotiating contracts, and making charging and sentencing recommendations as prosecutors and criminal defense attorneys. Many of these exercises will involve role playing and simulations. As you try on these lawyer hats and sample different styles of lawyering, you also will hear from lawyers practicing in these fields who will participate as guest speakers.

Over the course of the January Experiential Term, you will do some work in groups and some work on your own. Daily attendance in class and participation in group exercises after class are required.

Note: There may be days throughout the winter term that require attendance beyond the scheduled times. Please refer to the course syllabus and page for more information.

White Collar Criminal Law and Procedure

Course #: 2254 Term: 2019SP Faculty: Apps, Antonia; Savarese, John Credits: 2.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Criminal Law & Procedure

Delivery Mode: Course

Days and Times:	Location
Thu 3:00 PM - 5:00 PM	WCC1015

Course Description: Prerequisite: None

Exam Type: Last Class Take-Home

The past several years have seen a number of significant developments in white collar criminal prosecutions. Over the last decade, the government has demanded massive financial settlements in white collar prosecutions, including several in which federal prosecutors have sought indictments of corporate entities and demanded guilty pleas as part of the resolution. Recent pronouncements by the Department of Justice suggesting a softening of this approach for companies that self-disclose and cooperate. Prosecutors have also indicated their intention going forward to increase their focus on individual prosecutions, leveraging internal investigations conducted by corporations and insisting that corporations must provide evidence of individual wrongdoing in order to get cooperation credit. There have also been significant developments in numerous areas of white collar law, including insider trading, public corruption, and the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act, to name a few. And investigations that were once limited to the United States now frequently involve regulators and prosecutors across the globe.

This course will examine those developments and will focus on (1) case studies in corporate criminal law enforcement, including how federal law, emerging prosecutorial practices, and corporate cooperation guide and shape the resolution of white collar investigations; (2) evolving government expectations about the role of corporations and corporate counsel; (3) ethical and legal dilemmas in conducting a corporate investigation; (4) the emergence of the deferred prosecution agreement and efforts to regulate it; (5) the black-letter law of corporate criminal liability, including the challenges posed by this standard for companies in light of the collateral consequences of indictment; (6) recent developments in insider trading, the FCPA, and public corruption, among other areas; and (7) the impact on US prosecutions of foreign regulators investigating cross-border conduct. The course will also address various law enforcement investigative techniques commonly used by prosecutors and issues pertaining to sentencing in white collar cases.

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Environmental Law; International, Comparative & Foreign Law; Regulatory Law

Delivery Mode: Seminar

Days and Times: Location

Wed 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM WCC3016

Course Description: Prerequisites: There are no formal prerequisites for the class, although an environmental law or animal law survey course is recommended.

Exam Type: No Exam
Students will be evaluated on the basis of class participation and either a research paper or two research memos.

This seminar will explore wildlife law and policy, with a focus on high-profile wildlife conservation disputes, including current controversies surrounding international whaling, captive marine mammals, endangered wolves, and dwindling polar bear populations. The seminar will examine the history and evolution of wildlife conservation law, and highlight the major constitutional, ecological, political, and economic issues that shape wildlife resource protection in the 21st century. The seminar will include an overview of key domestic and international laws protecting wildlife, including the Endangered Species Act, the Marine Mammal Protection Act, the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species, and the International Convention on the Regulation of Whaling. The seminar will also touch on the World Trade Organization and the role of international free trade agreements in both fostering and inhibiting global wildlife conservation.

Women, Work and Ambition

Course #: 2737 Term: 2019SP Faculty: Stilt, Kristen; Claypoole, Catherine Credits: 1.00

Type: Elective Subject Areas: Not Applicable

Delivery Mode: Reading Group

Days and Times:	Location
Mon 5:00 PM - 7:00 PM	HAU103

Course Description: Prerequisites: None

Exam: No Exam

This reading group explores recent academic work and popular literature claiming that there are significant disparities in how women and men experience their professional lives. Women seeking top jobs in the most competitive work environments, whether law, business or politics, face unique challenges, from persistent pay inequity to attracting mentors and sponsors. We will discuss and critique the various hypotheses for such disparities, which include theories about culture, societal structure, and brain science, all of which are controversial and which point to different solutions. We will also explore practical strategies for managing these challenges, although the main purpose of the group is not to provide a "how to" guide as much as it is to explore the complexity of these issues in a focused and rigorous way.

Note: This reading group will meet on the following dates: 1/28, 2/4, 2/11, 3/4, 3/25, 4/1.
